1 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

2 INTRODUCTION

3 Plaintiffs understanding of the Court's Order is that the 4 brief submitted herewith addresses the following issues in the 5 following order: (a) If the Court reviews the Chief's decision-6 making re: "good cause", should it be under a substantial evidence 7 standard, with the burden of producing such evidence upon the 8 Chief; (b) The Court should and need not bother so reviewing the 9 decision-making, because all the Court need look at in this mater
10 is either res judicata or conceded by defendants; (c) However, it 11 is important that Plaintiffs' position is clearly enunciated, 12 i.e., it is not necessary to review the issue of "good cause" 13 because that is decided from the Judgment and defendants have, in 14 effect, conceded they departed from the Judgment. In any event
15 our answers to Court's questions re reviewing the Chief's 16 decision-making and the substantial evidence standard follow.

17 A. Abuse of Discretion Standard; Substantial Evidence Rule

18 Again, Plaintiffs respectfully disagree with the Court's 19 position as to the controlling principles of law regarding the 20 standard of review. Plaintiffs' position is set forth in 21 Plaintiffs' Brief filed on 8/14/98 (p. 4, l. 21 - p. 6, l.9):

22 The standard for review in this action, as well as for 23 similar cases, is that of independent judgment on the basis of a 24 limited trial de novo because a fundamental right is involved.¹

25
26
27 ¹ 9 Witkin California Procedure, 4th Edition, Section 122 at 28 page 1166, states as follows: "In reviewing factual determinations by an agency without judicial power under the California Constitution, courts exercises independent judgment and weigh the evidence if the proceeding substantially deprives a party of fundamental vested right."
See also, Bixby v. Pierno (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 130.

1 There is no question that a fundamental right is involved
2 here. The California Constitution, Article 1, §1 states:

3 "All people are by nature free and independent and have 4 inalienable rights. Among these are enjoying and defending life 5 and liberty, acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and 6 pursuing and obtaining safety, happiness and privacy."

7 California Constitution, Article 1, Section 1.

8 "Constitutional provisions should be construed according to 9 the natural and ordinary meaning of its words." City and County 10 of San Francisco v. County of San Mateo, (1995) 10 Cal.4th 554 at 11 page 562.

12 The California Supreme Court in Professional Engineers
13 v. Dot, (1997) 15 Cal.4th 543, 565, 63 Cal.Rptr. 467, 480, stated:

14 "... California courts have held that 15 Constitutional and other enactments must receive a 16 liberal, practical common-sense construction which will 17 meet changed conditions and the growing need of the 18 people. [citations.]" (Id. at p.245.)

19 Also, the Federal Constitution grants all persons a right to 20 personal security. In Ingraham v. Wright, (1977) 430 U.S. 651, 21 672-73 the Supreme Court of the United States stated:

22 "Among the historic liberties protected [by the 23 14th Amendment] was a right to be free from and to 24 secure judicial relief from unjustified intrusions on 25 personal security." See also United States v. Price, 26 (1966) 383 U.S. 787.

1 In Fukuda v. City of Angeles Camp, (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th
2 1426 the court stated, at page 1430, as follows:

3 "The scope of review in mandamus proceedings 4 defines the deference to be accorded administrative 5 decisions or the degree to which the correctness of the 6 administrative determination is to be presumed. When a 7 decision substantially affects a fundamental right, 8 courts consistently have held that the judiciary is to 9 exercise a vigilant and expansive role in reviewing the 10 administrative decision. (Webster v. Trustees of Cal.
11 State University (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1456, 1462 ...; 12 McMillen v. Civil Service Comm., supra, 6 Cal. App. 4th
13 at p. 129; 301 Ocean Ave. Corp. v. Santa Monica Rent 14 Control Bd., supra 228 Cal. App. 3d at p. 1555; San 15 Dieguito Union High School Dist. v. Commission On 16 Professional Competence, supra, 174 Cal. App. 3d at p.
17 1180) The court must exercise its independent judgment 18 on the evidence and the administrative decision is 19 entitled to less deference when a fundamental right is 20 implicated.

21 In this context, the trial court supplants the 22 administrative agency as the ultimate finder of fact.
23 [cite omitted] It is at liberty to independently assess 24 credibility. [cites omitted]"

25 The court in Fukuda, supra, at page 1431, went on to note 26 that ". . . burden of proof as the burden of producing evidence 27 rarely applies in mandamus proceedings because evidence is rarely 28 produced in superior court."

1 In the case at bar, the only evidence before the court is the 2 uncontradicted and uncontroverted and admittedly credible evidence 3 presented by plaintiffs in their renewal applications and 4 declarations in support thereof. These declarations and 5 applications establish that the plaintiffs were issued permits 6 based upon the "good cause" enunciated in one of the five 7 categories of criteria for licensure contained in the Judgment as 8 was correctly stated by the court at page 20 of the Reporters
9 Transcript of Proceedings before this Court on July 27, 1998.

10 Further, plaintiffs' circumstances giving rise to that good 11 cause remain the same or are currently exceeded. Those 12 circumstances have been established by stipulation and judgment.

13 Defendants have produced no evidence whatsoever controverting 14 the facts contained in plaintiffs' applications and declarations.
15 Therefore, plaintiffs' evidence contained therein must be 16 considered proved.

17 Based on the current record in the case at bar, and the above
18 stated authorities, the Court should order the defendants issue 19 the permits to the five plaintiffs.

20 B. "Good Cause": Elements; Proof

21 Initially, it should be noted that the general language of 22 item "E." of the Judgment in the instant case was not intended to 23 be read or interpreted alone. As is clearly stated in the 24 Judgment, at page 3 lines 26 and 27 thereof: "F. The following 25 further rules and guidelines are provided for the interpretation 26 and implementation of Item E:" (emphasis ours).

27 Secondly, as concerns the five plaintiffs in the instant 28 case, it was stipulated and it is contained in the Judgment that

1 these plaintiffs stated "good cause" in their initial 2 applications. The foundational question for them, before moving 3 on to a review of "good cause", is whether the facts giving rise
4 to their "good cause" have changed. If they have not changed 5 materially, those plaintiffs have stated sufficient "good cause" 6 for permits to be issued. That is res judicata. Each of the five 7 plaintiffs stated in their declarations that their "good cause" 8 continues, or is greater than at the time of the Judgment. The 9 Judgment states that their declarations are "evidence." See page 10 8 of the Judgment at paragraph 7, lines 5 through 9.

11 It is important to note that the City Attorney has admitted 12 that these plaintiffs are credible and that he has no credible 13 evidence contrary to the evidence contained in their declarations.

14 The Judgment states, (p. 7, lls. 22 - 25) that, "Absent good 15 cause for denial, persons having good cause as defined in 16 paragraph 2 shall be issued licenses for the maximum time period 17 allowed by section 12050, and their licenses shall be renewed so 18 long as they continue to have good cause. (emphasis added). The 19 inescapable conclusion is that permits must be renewed for these 20 plaintiffs. Further, defendants have offered no evidence showing 21 good cause for denial as they are required by the Judgment 22 (emphasis added).

23 The Court is again referred to Plaintiffs' Brief filed on 24 August 14, 1998 concerning the issue of res judicata. It is 25 referred to herein and incorporated by reference. That Brief is 26 part of this Court's file and the Court is respectfully requested 27 to judicially notice it (Evidence Code §452(d)).

28 ///

1 Also, in Professional Engineers v. Dot, supra, 15 Cal.4th, 2 the California Supreme Court stated at page 568:

3 "As we have frequently explained, the collateral
4 estoppel doctrine precludes relitigation of an issue 5 previously adjudicated by final judgment between the 6 parties. (See, e.g. Producers Dairy Delivery Co. v.
7 Century Ins. Co., (1986) 41 Cal.3d 903, 910 [226
8 Cal.Rptr. 558, 718 P.2d 920].)"

9 Plaintiffs object to a rereview of their already adjudicated 10 "good cause". Nevertheless, plaintiffs, in obedience of this 11 Court's Order, submit the following pursuant to the Court's 12 request.

13 (1) What is meant in law by the descriptor, "convincing"
14 evidence?

15 The United States Supreme Court in Addington v. Texas (1979)
16 441 U.S. 418, 423, 99 S.Ct. 1804, 1808, discusses the function of 17 a standard of proof exhaustively, as set forth below:

18 "The function of a standard of proof, as that 19 concept is embodied in the Due Process Clause and in the 20 realm of fact finding is to "instruct the fact finder 21 concerning the degree of confidence our society thinks 22 he should have in the correctness of factual conclusions
23 for a particular type of adjudication." In Re Winship
24 397 U.S. 358, 370, 90 S.Ct. 1068, 1076, 25 L.Ed.2d 368
25 (1970) (Harlan, J., concurring) the standard serves to 26 allocate the risk of error between the litigants and to 27 indicate the relative importance attached to the 28 ultimate decision.

1 Generally speaking, the evolution of this area of 2 the law has produced across a continuum three standards
3 or levels of proof for different types of cases. At one 4 end of the spectrum is the typical civil case involving 5 a monetary dispute between private parties. Since 6 society has a minimal concern with the outcome of such 7 private suits, plaintiffs' burden of proof is a mere 8 preponderance of the evidence. The litigants thus share 9 the risk of error in roughly equal fashion.

10 In a criminal case, on the other hand, the 11 interests of the defendant are of such magnitude that 12 historically and without any explicit constitutional 13 requirement they have been protected by standards of 14 proof designed to exclude as nearly as possible the 15 likelihood of an erroneous judgment. In the 16 administration of criminal justice, our society imposes 17 almost the entire risk of error upon itself. This is 18 accomplished by requiring under the Due Process Clause 19 that the state prove the guilt of an accused beyond a 20 reasonable doubt. In Re Winship, supra.

21 The intermediate standard, which usually employs 22 some combination of the words "clear," "cogent," 23 "unequivocal," and "convincing," is less commonly used, 24 but nonetheless "is no stranger to the civil law."
25 Woodby v. INS, 385 U.S. 276, 285, 87 S.Ct. 483, 488, 17
26 L.Ed.2d 362 (1966). See also, McCormick, Evidence §320
27 (1954); 9 J. Wigmore, Evidence § 2498 (3d ed. 1940).
28 One typical use of the standard is in civil cases

1 involving allegations of fraud or some other quasi-2 criminal wrongdoing by the defendant. The interests at 3 stake in those cases are deemed to be more substantial 4 than mere loss of money and some jurisdictions 5 accordingly reduce the risk to the defendant of having 6 his reputation tarnished erroneously by increasing the 7 plaintiff's burden of proof. Similarly, this Court has 8 used the "clear, unequivocal and convincing" standard of 9 proof to protect particularly important individual 10 interests in civil cases. See, e. g., Woodby v. INS, 11 supra, at 285, 87 S.Ct., at 487 (deportation); Chaunt v.
12 United States, 364 U.S. 350, 353, 81 S.Ct. 147, 149, 5
13 L.Ed.2d 120 (1960) (denaturalization); Schneiderman v.
14 United States, 320 U.S. 118, 125, 159, 63 S.Ct. 1333,
15 1336, 1353, 18 L.Ed. 1796 (1943) (denaturalization).

16 Candor suggests that, to a degree, efforts to 17 analyze what lay jurors understand concerning the 18 differences among these three tests or the nuances of a 19 judge's instructions on the law may well be largely an 20 academic exercise; there are no directly relevant 21 empirical studies. Indeed, the ultimate truth as to how 22 the standards of proof effect decision making may well 23 be unknowable, given that factfinding is a process 24 shared by countless thousands of individuals throughout 25 the country. We probably can assume no more than that 26 the difference between a preponderance of the evidence 27 and proof beyond a reasonable doubt probably is better 28 understood than either of them in relation to the 1 intermediate standard of clear and convincing evidence.

2 Nonetheless, even if the particular standard-of-proof
3 catchwords do not always make a great difference in a 4 particular case, adopting a "standard of proof is more 5 than an empty semantic exercise." Tippett v. Maryland, 6 436 F.2d 1153, 1166 (CA4 1971) (Sobeloff, J., concurring 7 in part and dissenting in part), cert. dismissed sub 8 nom. Murel v. Baltimore City Criminal Court, 407 U.S.
9 355, 92 S.Ct. 2091, 32 L.Ed.2d 791 (1972). In cases 10 involving individual rights, whether criminal or civil, 11 "[t]he standard of proof [at a minimum] reflects the 12 value society places on individual liberty." 436 F.2d 13 at 1166."

14 The plaintiffs' declarations in the instant case are 15 sufficient as "convincing evidence" unless contradicted in some 16 fashion. They are not contradicted nor are they controverted; 17 but, rather, they are admitted by the defendants.

18 (2) What is meant in law by the descriptor, "clear and 19 present danger" to life or great bodily injury?

20 The Judgment states at page 3 line 17 that ". . . good cause 21 exists if there is convincing evidence of a "clear and present 22 danger to life or great bodily injury . . ." The definition of 23 "clear and present danger," therefore, is found in that same 24 Judgment as the dangers set forth in the definition of "good 25 cause" beginning at page 5 of that Judgment under the heading
26 "Good Cause."

27 The Judgment in the instant case contains five exemplary 28 categories of what is "clear and present danger." Since

1 plaintiffs' declarations bring them within one or more of the five 2 categories enumerated in the Judgment, "good cause" exists and a 3 permit should be issued absent defendants showing convincing 4 evidence for denial. Defendants have not.

5 Plaintiffs' demonstrated a "clear and present danger" to life 6 or great bodily injury when their declarations brought them within 7 one or more of the five categories enumerated by the Judgment.
8 Plaintiffs have, therefore, established a "clear and present 9 danger" as enunciated in the Judgment, by which we are all bound.

10 C. Court-Appointed Expert

11 §731. Payment of court-appointed expert

12 Since the defendants admit that the current Chief's 13 predecessor determined that plaintiffs had "good cause"; the 14 controversy before this Court arises because the current Chief has 15 decided to depart from that. Therefore, the person who altered 16 the "status quo" should bear the costs of determining whether that 17 alteration is legal and should be solely responsible for the court 18 appointed expert fees.
