FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLORADO

Civil Action No. 10-cv-02408-RPM

DEBBIE BONIDY,
TAB BONIDY, and
NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR GUN RIGHTS,

Plaintiffs,

v.

UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE,
PATRICK DONAHOE, Postmaster General, and
STEVE RUEHLE, Postmaster, Avon, Colorado,

Defendants.

PLAINTIFFS' OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS

---

Plaintiffs Debbie Bonidy, Tab Bonidy, and the National Association for Gun Rights (“NAGR”)<sup>1</sup>, by and through their undersigned attorney, hereby file their opposition to Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss (Doc. 6).

<sup>1</sup> Defendants assert that NAGR lacks standing “in its own right as opposed to in its representational capacity.” Mot. to Dismiss at 6 n.5. As Defendants’ concede, NAGR has standing in its representational capacity. Hunt v. Washington State Apple Adver. Comm’n, 432 U.S. 333, 342–43 (1977). Whether NAGR has standing in its own right is largely irrelevant here because the Bonidys have standing to bring suit. In cases where, as here, Plaintiffs seek injunctive and declaratory relief, so long as “at least one individual plaintiff . . . has demonstrated standing,” a court “need not consider whether the other individual and corporate plaintiffs have standing to maintain the suit.” Village of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 264 & n.9 (1977); see also Watt v. Energy Action Educ. Found., 454 U.S. 151, 160 (1981).

INTRODUCTION

Defendants' Motion to Dismiss relies principally on dicta in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008). Their Motion is unpersuasive because it attempts to extrapolate from the dicta a rule of law that is broader than the Court's dicta, at odds with the Court's reasoning, divergent from the historical background, and unsupported by the precedent flowing from Heller. Contrary to Defendants' suggestion, the core conduct protected by the Second Amendment explicitly includes the right to carry firearms for self-defense. Moreover, even if the Heller dicta did apply to the instant case, Defendants would not be relieved of their burden of proving the constitutionality of the Postal Service firearms ban. At the motion to dismiss stage, Defendants are unable to present evidence to carry this burden and Plaintiffs would have no opportunity to rebut Defendants' proffered evidence. Accepting the truth of the allegations in the Complaint, and drawing all inferences in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs, as this Court must, Defendants' v should be denied.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

United States Postal Service ("USPS") regulations generally prohibit law-abiding individuals from possessing or carrying functional firearms, openly or concealed, onto any real property under the charge and control of the USPS. 39 C.F.R. § 232.1(l). The Bonidys live in rural Colorado and, because they do not have home mail service, they must drive approximately 10 miles roundtrip everyday from their home to reach the local Post Office to pick up their mail. Compl. ¶¶ 15, 17.

The Bonidys lawfully own handguns, which they are licensed to carry pursuant to Colorado's Concealed Carry Act, C.R.S. § 18-12-201 et seq. Mr. and Mrs. Bonidy presently intend to possess a handgun for self-defense when traveling to, from, through, or on USPS property but are prevented from doing so by Defendants' active enforcement of 39 C.F.R. § 232.1(l). Compl. ¶18. The Bonidys are law-abiding individuals; they are over 21 years old, have no history of substance abuse or criminal activity, are not subject to a protection order, have demonstrated competency with a handgun, and have been approved by the Eagle County Sheriff to carry a concealed handgun almost everywhere in the State. Id. ¶ 19.

On July 22, 2010, the Bonidys contacted the USPS to inquire as to whether they would be subject to prosecution pursuant to 39 C.F.R. § 232.1(l) if they carried a firearm on USPS property or stored a firearm in their cars when they parked on USPS property when picking up their mail. Id. ¶ 20, Ex. 2. By return letter, Senior Vice President and General Counsel Mary Anne Gibbons confirmed, on behalf of then-Postmaster General John Potter, that "the regulations governing Conduct on Postal Property prevent the Bonidys from carrying firearms, openly or concealed, onto any real property under the charge and control of the Postal Service. . . . There are limited exceptions to this policy that would not apply here." Id. ¶ 21, Ex. 2. Thus, 39 C.F.R. § 232.1(l) imposes a total ban on law-abiding individuals' possession of firearms; the USPS ban does not even allow individuals to safely store a firearm in their vehicles.

On October 4, 2010, Plaintiffs filed the instant action seeking declaratory and injunctive relief to remedy Defendants' unconstitutional deprivation of their right to keep and bear arms. Defendants responded by filing a Motion to Dismiss on December 6, 2010.

ARGUMENT

I. STANDARD OF REVIEW.

When reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, courts “accept all well-pleaded allegations in the complaint as true, and draw all reasonable inferences in Plaintiff’s favor.” Kamplain v. Curry County Bd. of Com’rs, 159 F.3d 1248, 1250 (10th Cir. 1998). Defendants bear the burden of proving that the USPS ban does not violate the Constitution, and Plaintiffs must ultimately rebut any evidence offered by Defendants; but at the motion to dismiss stage, this Court “must assume that [Plaintiffs] can, even if it strikes [this Court] ‘that a recovery is very remote and unlikely.’” Dias v. City and County of Denver, 567 F.3d 1169, 1184 (10th Cir. 2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 556 (2007)). “The court’s function on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is not to weigh potential evidence that the parties might present at trial, but to assess whether the plaintiff’s complaint alone is legally sufficient to state a claim for which relief may be granted.” Smith v. United States, 561 F.3d 1090, 1098 (10th Cir. 2009) (quoting Sutton v. Utah State Sch. for Deaf & Blind, 173 F.3d 1226, 1236 (10th Cir. 1999)). Accepting the truth of the allegations in the Complaint, and drawing all inferences in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs, this Court should deny Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss.

II. THE SECOND AMENDMENT GUARANTEES THE RIGHT TO CARRY FIREARMS FOR SELF-DEFENSE IN CASE OF CONFRONTATION.

Defendants argue that the Second Amendment provides no protection for the right to keep and bear arms on USPS property; but this argument cannot be reconciled with the text of the Constitution. The core conduct protected by the Second Amendment explicitly includes the right to carry firearms for self-defense:

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

U.S. Const. amend. II (emphasis added). In Heller, the Supreme Court concluded in no uncertain terms that, “[a]t the time of the founding, as now, to ‘bear’ meant to ‘carry.’” 554 U.S. at 584. The Court applied this common historical understanding of the term “bear” to conclude that the Second Amendment protects the “individual right to possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation.” Id. at 592. In reaching this conclusion, the Court adopted Justice Ginsburg’s definition of the phrase “to bear arms,” which she offered in Muscarello v. United States, 524 U.S. 125, 143 (1998):

Surely a most familiar meaning is, as the Constitution’s Second Amendment . . . indicate[s]: “wear, bear, or carry . . . upon the person or in the clothing or in a pocket, for the purpose . . . of being armed and ready for offensive or defensive action in a case of conflict with another person.”

Heller, 554 U.S. at 584 (internal citations omitted) (omissions in original). Thus, contrary to Defendants’ suggestion, core conduct protected by the Second Amendment is infringed by the USPS firearms ban because it is a broad prohibition on the possession and carrying of firearms “in case of confrontation.” Id.

The central holding of Heller concerns the constitutionality of possessing functional firearms in the home: “the District’s requirement . . . that firearms in the home be rendered and kept inoperable at all times . . . makes it impossible for citizens to use them for the core lawful purpose of self-defense and is hence unconstitutional.” Id. at 630. The facts of that case did not give the Court occasion to rule on all aspects of Second Amendment law, and its holding is appropriately narrow. See id. at 635 (“But since this case represents this Court’s first in-depth examination of the Second Amendment, one should not expect it to clarify the entire field, any more than Reynolds v. United States, our first in-depth Free Exercise Clause case, left that area in a state of utter certainty.” (internal citation omitted)). Yet the Court made clear that the right to “possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation” is the core of the right guaranteed by the Second Amendment. Id. at 592. In McDonald v. City of Chicago, the Court confirmed that the right protected is “fundamental to our scheme of ordered liberty.” 561 U.S. ___, 130 S.Ct. 3020, 3050 (2010) (emphasis in original).

The Heller Court’s reliance on a number of 19th century authorities offers guidance about the rough contours of the right to carry. These cases are of particular importance because “the Second Amendment, like the First and Fourth Amendments, codified a pre-existing right” that can only be fully understood in light of the “historical background.” Heller, 554 U.S. at 592. These cases stand for the proposition that if one manner of carrying a firearm outside the home is restricted, some other means of carrying arms must be preserved. For example, as the Court noted in Heller:

In Nunn v. State, [1 Ga. 243, 251 (1846)] the Georgia Supreme Court struck down a prohibition on carrying pistols openly (even though it upheld a prohibition on carrying concealed weapons). In Andrews v. State, [50 Tenn. 165, 187 (Tenn. 1871)] the Tennessee Supreme Court likewise held that a statute that forbade openly carrying a pistol “publicly or privately, without regard to time or place, or circumstances,” violated the state constitutional provision (which the court equated with the Second Amendment). That was so even though the statute did not restrict the carrying of long guns. See also State v. Reid, 1 Ala. 612, 616–617 (1840) (“A statute which, under the pretence of regulating, amounts to a destruction of the right, or which requires arms to be so borne as to render them wholly useless for the purpose of defence, would be clearly unconstitutional”).

Id. at 629. Thus, the Court indicated its approval of the longstanding principle that total bans on firearms possession, or regulations that amount to total bans, violate the right to keep and bear arms. As the Court’s discussion of the 19th century authorities above illustrates, this proposition has long been accepted by state courts. See, e.g., Lakewood v. Pillow, 501 P.2d 744, 745 (Colo. 1972); City of Las Vegas v. Moberg, 485 P.2d 737, 738 (N.M. Ct. App. 1971); People v. Nakamura, 62 P.2d 246, 247 (Colo. 1936); People v. Zerillo, 189 N.W. 927, 928 (Mich. 1922); In re Brickey, 70 P. 609, 609 (Idaho 1902). Moreover, the rule that total bans on the carrying of firearms by law-abiding individuals violate the right to keep and bear arms has been applied post-Heller. See Peruta v. County of San Diego, no. 09CV2371, 2010 WL 5137137, *6 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 10, 2010) (upholding California’s concealed-handgun licensing law because the law still permitted unlicensed citizens to carry handguns in plain view).

Thus, although the Court has not weighed in on the full contours of the right to carry, it is clear from Heller that the Court views the Second Amendment as explicitly guaranteeing the right to carry firearms for self-defense. Moreover, the Court has indicated approval for the majority view that total bans on the carrying of firearms are unconstitutional. Thus, contrary to Defendants’ suggestion, core conduct protected by the Second Amendment is infringed by the USPS firearms ban because it is a broad prohibition on the possession and carrying of firearms “in case of confrontation.” Heller, 554 U.S. at 629. Accordingly, Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss should be denied.

III. DEFENDANTS’ ARGUMENT STRAINS THE HELLER DICTA TO ITS BREAKING POINT.

Defendants’ argument—that the Second Amendment provides no protection for the right to keep and bear arms on USPS property—relies principally on dicta in Heller. As discussed below, the USPS firearms ban does not fit within the “presumptively lawful” regulatory measures identified in the Heller dicta. Moreover, even if the Heller dicta did apply to the instant case, Defendants would not be relieved of their burden of proving the constitutionality of the USPS ban. Accordingly, Defendants' motion should be denied.

A. The USPS Ban is a Uniquely Broad Prohibition on the Right to Carry.

The USPS firearms ban is much broader than the “presumptively lawful” regulations identified by the Heller dicta, and thus Defendants cannot escape the burden of proving that the ban does not violate the Constitution. Defendants overstate the scope of the Supreme Court's dicta when they contend that:

The Supreme Court has specifically stated that “laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings,” like the USPS regulation at issue here, are “presumptively lawful.” District of Columbia v. Heller, 128 S. Ct. 2783, 2816-17 (2008).

Mot. to Dismiss at 2. The USPS regulation at issue here is far broader than the “presumptively lawful” regulatory measures the Court identified in the dicta quoted above. As discussed above, the USPS firearms ban prohibits possession of firearms not only “in . . . government buildings,” but also in the parking lots adjacent to those buildings. This ban is broader than other regulations of firearms on federal property, all of which allow law-abiding citizens to possess firearms in some capacity. Mot. to Dismiss at 4 (listing examples of regulations that do not prohibit storage of a firearm). For example, 18 U.S.C. § 930 strikes a balance between the overriding need for security in federal courthouses, and the constitutional right to carry. Possession of a firearm “in a Federal court facility” is prohibited. 18 U.S.C. § 930 (e)(1). But outside federal court facilities, “the lawful carrying of firearms . . . incident to hunting or other lawful purposes” is not prohibited. 18 U.S.C. § 930(d)(3).<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The statute also explicitly recognizes the federal courts' inherent authority to regulate the courtroom and punish for contempt any violations of court rules. 18 U.S.C. § 930(f).

Also because of the striking breadth of the USPS ban, the cases that have applied the Heller dicta provide no support for Defendants' position. For example, in United States v. Masciandaro, 648 F.Supp.2d 779, 790 (E.D.Va. 2009), the court noted that the National Park Service regulation at issue in that case "does not prohibit carrying or possessing a loaded firearm on National Park land outside motor vehicles, nor does [36 C.F.R. § 2.4(b)] prohibit carrying or possessing unloaded firearms in motor vehicles on National Park land." The USPS firearms ban is not nearly so narrow as 18 U.S.C. § 930, 36 C.F.R. § 2.4(b), or any of the other regulations cited by Defendants, because it prohibits all firearms without exception, both inside and outside government buildings.<sup>3</sup>

The difference between the USPS ban and other regulations of firearms on federal property is significant. Because the USPS ban extends outside government buildings—and thus outside the Heller dicta—law-abiding citizens like the Bonidys are effectively prohibited from exercising the right to carry when traveling to, from, or through USPS property; the USPS ban does not even allow them to safely store a firearm in their vehicles.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> The vacated panel decision in Nordyke v. King, 563 F.3d 439 (9th Cir. 2009) actually cuts against the broad USPS ban, because the court noted that, among the venues covered by the regulation at issue in that case, "[t]he only one of these that seems odd as a 'sensitive place' is parking lots." The other cases cited by Defendants, Mot. to Dismiss at 13, either do not analyze the Second Amendment, Warden v. Nickels, 697 F. Supp. 2d 1221, 1224 (W.D. Wash. 2010), or do so in such a cursory manner as to have little persuasive value. See United States v. Davis, 304 Fed. Appx. 473 (9th Cir. 2008); United States v. Walters, 2008 WL 2740398 (D.V.I. July 15, 2008).

<sup>4</sup> Defendants imply that the Plaintiffs can park off-site if they wish to exercise their Second Amendment rights. Mot. to Dismiss at 21. It is a question of fact whether this accommodation could actually save the USPS ban as applied here. At the motion to dismiss stage, this inference cuts against Defendants. Dias, 567 F.3d at 1184.

Because the USPS ban is an outlier among regulations of firearms on federal property, there is substantial reason to conclude that it is not included among those “presumptively lawful” regulations the Heller court had in mind when it referred to prohibitions on carrying firearms “in . . . government buildings.” Indeed, the USPS ban falls outside the plain terms of the Heller dicta because the USPS ban extends outside government buildings.

B. The Postal Property at Issue in this Case is Not “Sensitive.”

The Heller dicta concerned carrying firearms in “sensitive places.” 554 U.S. at 626. The postal property at issue in this case is not “sensitive” in the sense of the Heller dicta. Indeed, in the only post-Heller case to consider the constitutionality of the USPS ban, restricted access portions of postal property were determined to be “sensitive places,” but the court declined to extend this reasoning to the public areas of postal property:

[T]he constitutionality of the regulation’s ban on carrying firearms . . . in public areas without official purpose—i.e., operating a vehicle [on postal property] while . . . armed with a loaded handgun stowed in the glove compartment . . . [is not] before the Court in this case, which involves the prohibited conduct of carrying and storing firearms without official purpose in the gated/restricted access employee parking, loading and unloading area of the subject “Postal property.”

United States v. Dorosan, No. 08-042, Written Reasons for Conviction and Sentence at 9 (E.D. La. July 7, 2008) (emphasis added).<sup>5</sup> The Fifth Circuit also noted the peculiarly sensitive nature of the restricted access postal property at issue in Dorosan, which the Post Office used “for loading mail and staging its mail trucks.” United States v. Dorosan, 350 Fed. Appx. 874 (5th Cir. 2009). Here, the Bonidys claim only a right to possess firearms in public, non-restricted areas of postal property. Accordingly, there is substantial reason to conclude that the USPS firearms ban is not narrowly focused on those “sensitive places” the Heller court had in mind when it referred to “presumptively lawful” prohibitions on carrying firearms.

C. Presumptively Lawful Regulations May Still be Unconstitutional.

Even if the USPS firearms ban could be crammed into the Heller dicta, this would not result in a “free pass” for Defendants. As the Seventh Circuit explained in a case challenging the felon-in-possession prohibition of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1):

[T]he government does not get a free pass simply because Congress has established a “categorical ban”; it still must prove that the ban is constitutional, a mandate that flows from Heller itself. Heller referred to felon disarmament bans only as “presumptively lawful,” which, by implication, means that there must exist the possibility that the ban could be unconstitutional in the face of an as-applied challenge. Therefore, putting the government through its paces in proving the constitutionality of § 922(g)(1) is only proper.

United States v. Williams, 616 F.3d 685, 692 (7th Cir. 2010); see also United States v. Chester, ___ F.3d ___, 2010 WL 5396069, at *5 (4th Cir. 2010) (“In fact, the phrase ‘presumptively lawful regulatory measures’ suggests the possibility that one or more of these ‘longstanding’ regulations ‘could be unconstitutional in the face of an as-applied challenge.’”) (quoting Williams). Indeed, if the Heller dicta absolved the USPS of the burden of proving the constitutionality of its firearms ban, then Heller would impose something approximating the rational basis test; that approach was explicitly rejected by Heller. 554 U.S. at 628 n.27 (“If all that was required to overcome the right to keep and bear arms was a rational basis, the Second Amendment would be redundant with the separate constitutional prohibitions on irrational laws, and would have no effect.”); see also Chester, 2010 WL 5396069, at *5.

Tenth Circuit precedent post-Heller does not absolve Defendants of their burden to prove the constitutionality of the USPS firearms ban. In United States v. McCane, 573 F.3d 1037 (10th Cir 2009), the court rejected a challenge to the felon-in-possession prohibition of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1) because the law of the circuit already foreclosed such a challenge. Id. at 1047 (citing United States v. Anderson, 559 F.3d 348, 352 (5th Cir. 2009) (Holding challenge to § 922(g)(1) “was foreclosed in this circuit by United States v. Darrington. . . . Heller provides no basis for reconsidering Darrington. We therefore reaffirm Darrington and the constitutionality of § 922(g).” (internal citations omitted))). Nothing in Heller casts doubt on the Tenth Circuit’s conclusion in United States v. Baer, 235 F.3d 561, 564 (10th Cir. 2000), that § 922(g)(1) is constitutional. McCane, 573 F.3d at 1049 n.2 (Tymkovich, J., concurring). Thus, the McCane panel did not need to undertake an independent analysis of § 922(g)(1) in light of Heller, because the Tenth Circuit had already analyzed § 922(g)(1) in Baer. This approach—assuming that Heller left § 922 precedent untouched—has been applied in a number of the Circuits. See United States v. Anderson, 559 F.3d 348, 352 (5th Cir. 2009); United States v. Frazier, 314 Fed. Appx. 801, 807 (6th Cir. 2008); United States v. Walters, 2008 WL 2740398 (D.V.I. July 15, 2008).

Unlike § 922, no court has analyzed the USPS firearms ban as it applies in the instant case, i.e., law-abiding citizens exercising the right to carry on public, non-sensitive postal property. Moreover, as applied to Plaintiffs, the conduct prohibited by the ban falls squarely within the right of law-abiding citizens “to possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation” protected by the Second Amendment. Heller, 554 U.S. at 592. Accordingly, Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss should be denied.

IV. Under Strict or Intermediate Scrutiny, Defendants Bear the Evidentiary Burden.

Defendants urge this Court to apply intermediate scrutiny to the USPS firearms ban. Mot. to Dismiss at 19. Although strict scrutiny is the appropriate standard, this Court need not decide this question at the motion to dismiss stage. Under either standard of scrutiny, Defendants bear the burden of proving that the ban does not violate the Constitution. Abilene Retail No. 30, Inc. v. Dickinson County, 492 F.3d 1164, 1173–74 (10th Cir. 2007) (citing City of Los Angeles v. Alameda Books, Inc., 535 U.S. 425, 438–39 (2002)). This requires Defendants to offer evidence to prove, at the very least, that the USPS firearms ban is a:

[R]easonable restriction[] on the time, place, or manner of protected [conduct], [that] the restriction[] [is] justified without reference to the content of the regulated [conduct], that [it is] narrowly tailored to serve a significant governmental interest, and that [it] leave[s] open ample alternative channels . . . .

United States v. Kokinda, 497 U.S. 720, 738 (1990) (internal quotations omitted). Moreover, Plaintiffs must then have an opportunity to “rebut the [Defendants’] proffered evidence.” Abilene Retail, 492 F.3d at 1174. This evidentiary inquiry is inappropriate at the motion to dismiss stage. Smith v. United States, 561 F.3d 1090, 1098 (10th Cir. 2009) (“The court’s function on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is not to weigh potential evidence that the parties might present at trial, but to assess whether the plaintiff’s complaint alone is legally sufficient to state a claim for which relief may be granted.” (internal quotation omitted)). Accordingly, Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss should be denied.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Plaintiffs submit that strict scrutiny is the appropriate standard of review; however, neither standard of scrutiny can appropriately be applied at the motion to dismiss stage. Cf. Abilene Retail, 492 F.3d at 1174. Thus, Plaintiffs have not elaborated on why strict scrutiny is the appropriate standard. Should this Court desire briefing on the standard of scrutiny at this early stage in the proceedings, Plaintiffs respectfully request leave to file a sur reply.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss should be denied. Should this Court find Plaintiffs' Complaint deficient for any reason, Plaintiffs respectfully request leave to file an amended complaint.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

CRIMINAL ACTION

VERSUS

NO. 08-042

CLARENCE PAUL DOROSAN

DIVISION “B” (3)

WRITTEN REASONS
CONVICTION AND SENTENCE
FOR VIOLATING Title 39 C.F.R. § 232.1(l)

On this date, the above captioned matter came on for trial before the undersigned Magistrate Judge. See Order of Reference issued pursuant to Local Criminal Rule 5.1E(a) [Doc. # 20]. The defendant, Clarence Paul Dorosan (“Dorosan”), appeared and was represented by Federal Public Defender Roma Kent. Assistant United States Attorney Andre Jones appeared and prosecuted the case on behalf on the United States.

Background

Dorosan was charged with a violation of Title 39 C.F.R. § 232.1(l),<sup>1</sup> which provides:

(l) Weapons and explosives. Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, rule or regulation, no person while on postal property may carry firearms, other dangerous or deadly weapons, or explosives, either openly or concealed, or store the same on postal property, except for official purposes.

39 C.F.R. § 232.1(l). The statute requires that the regulation “be posted and kept posted at a conspicuous place on all such property.” Id. at § 232.1(a).

The term “postal property” means “all real property under the charge and control of the Postal Service, to all tenant agencies and to all persons entering in or on such property.” 39

C.F.R. § 232.1(a).<sup>2</sup> Section 232.1 further explicitly addresses vehicles and their contents brought into, while on or being removed from restricted nonpublic areas, to wit:

(2) Vehicles and their contents brought into, while on, or being removed from restricted nonpublic areas are subject to inspection. A prominently displayed sign shall advise in advance that vehicles and their contents are subject to inspection when entering the restricted nonpublic area, while in the confines of the area, or when leaving the area. Persons entering these areas who object and refuse to consent to the inspection of the vehicle, its contents, or both, may be denied entry; after entering the area without objection, consent shall be implied. A full search of a person and any vehicle driven or occupied by the person may accompany an arrest.

Id. at § 232.1(b)(2) (italicized emphasis added). The penalties for violating the law at issue are set forth in the regulation under the subsection entitled “penalties and other law”, to wit:

(2) Whoever shall be found guilty of violating the rules and regulations in this section while on property under the charge and control of the Postal Service is subject to fine of not more than $50 or imprisonment of not more than 30 days, or both. Nothing contained in these rules and regulations shall be construed to abrogate any other Federal laws or regulations of any State and local laws and regulations applicable to any area in which the property is situated.

Id. at § 232.1(p)(2); see also id. at § 232.1(p)(1) (noting that alleged violations of said postal regulations may be heard either by a Federal district court or by a Federal magistrate in accordance with applicable court rules).

The government charge is that, on the 22nd day of October, 2007, Clarence Paul Dorosan “did [without official purpose] carry, conceal, and store a firearm, to wit: a Springfield Armory Model XD-40, semi-automatic pistol, bearing serial no. US 431816 on postal property” – i.e.,

Findings of Fact

On or about October 20, 2007, Norbert Lewis, a postal inspector at the Gretna Post Office in Gretna, Louisiana, discovered a black canvas bag on the workroom floor next to a letter case for Route 5301. Said route was worked by the defendant, Clarence Dorosan (“Dorosan”), a letter carrier on the previous day (October 19, 2007).<sup>3</sup> Lewis did not know to whom the bag belonged and when he lifted the bag a casing fell out of the bag. He opened the bag and found a magazine with twelve (12) rounds or .40 caliber hand gun ammunition and three (3) empty shell casings in the bag. Lewis called another supervisor, Elemuel Coleman, who watched Lewis secure the bag and lock it in a file cabinet until the Postal Inspectors arrived.<sup>4</sup> Dorosan was supposed to work the morning of October 20, 2007 but did not.

Postal Inspector Sheldon Jones was called to the Gretna Post Office on Saturday, October 20, 2007 and he took statements from Postal Supervisor’s Lewis and Coleman. P.I. Jones secured the ammunition and spent casing found in the black bag along with personal items including Clarence Paul Dorosan’s mail badge. He sealed the items taken into custody in an evidence bag and placed same marked with his initials in the Postal Inspector’s evidence room on October 22, 2007.<sup>5</sup>

On Monday, October 22, 2007, Postal Inspector Sheldon Jones returned to the Gretna Post Office accompanied by Postal Inspector Manuel Maciel-Rodriguez to conduct a follow up investigation regarding the recovery of the loaded magazine. At approximately 10:00 a.m., Dorosan arrived at the Post Office. Postal Inspectors identified themselves to Dorosan and requested to speak with him. Dorosan said he knew why they were there and stated, “Yes, I know about you finding the magazine in my bag but I can explain everything.”<sup>6</sup>

Both Jones and Rodriguez escorted Dorosan to his locker and searched it along with a bag he was carrying. No weapons were found in the locker or the bag. Dorosan voluntarily surrendered a red pocket knife he was carrying on his person. The Postal Inspectors asked Dorosan if he was otherwise armed. Dorosan admitted having a gun in the glove compartment of his personal vehicle which was parked in the Post Office parking lot in front of the loading dock.<sup>7</sup> The employee parking lot is adjacent to the post office building and is enclosed by a gate.<sup>8</sup> The gate has a sign on both of its entrances which warns all parties entering that their vehicles are subject to search and cites Title 39 C.F.R. 232.1(b)(2).<sup>9</sup> Both Postal Inspectors escorted Dorosan to his vehicle and Dorosan remained behind the vehicle with Rodriguez, while Jones searched the vehicle. Dorosan unlocked the vehicle with the remote vehicle entry device and handed the keys to Postal Inspector Sheldon Jones, giving Jones verbal consent to unlock the glove compartment. In the glove compartment was a hand gun, holstered in a black canvas holster with an extra magazine attached to the holster.<sup>10</sup> Jones removed the gun from the holster. He later identified the gun as a Springfield Armory XD-40, semi-automatic handgun, serial no. U.S. 431816, stainless steel slide, with a black plastic grip. Jones advised Dorosan of his Miranda rights and then asked Dorosan if he would speak to him about the ammunition and firearm recovered on postal property. On the advice of his union steward, Dorosan declined to answer questions without an attorney present. While at the Gretna Post Office on October 22, 2007, P.I. Rodriguez took photographs of the firearm prohibition posters that were in the building, including those near the employee time clocks.<sup>11</sup> Rodriguez testified that there were

Conclusions of Law

The undersigned Magistrate Judge specifically finds that all of the elements of the violation charged in Count One of the Superseding Bill of Information have been proved by evidence (testimonial, documentary and physical) beyond a reasonable doubt. Moreover, the relevant facts found were and are to this date undisputed. The government has met its burden of proof (beyond a reasonable doubt) that, on the date at charged in the superseding bill in the Eastern District of Louisiana, the defendant violated 39 C.F.R. § 232.1(l). More specifically, the defendant has shown that Dorosan carried a firearm (a semi-automatic handgun) concealed in his vehicle onto "postal property" (the Gretna Post Office employee parking lot).<sup>13</sup> Said "postal property" is adjacent to the post office building, enclosed by a gate which has signs on both sides of the entrance, warning all persons entering that their vehicles are subject to search and as set forth in Title 39 C.F.R. § 232.1(b)(2).

The term "carry firearms" is not limited to the carrying of firearms on the person; rather, the Supreme Court in Muscarello v. United States explained that the term "also applies to a person who knowingly possesses and conveys firearms in a vehicle, including in the locked glove compartment or trunk of a car, which accompanies a person.”<sup>14</sup> This explication certainly encompasses the situation here, where Dorosan carried the firearm in his vehicle onto “postal property.” See 39 C.F.R. §§ 232.1(a) and (b)(2). In addition to admitting to the postal inspectors that he did in fact have a gun in the glove compartment of his personal vehicle which was parked in the Gretna Post Office employee parking lot,<sup>15</sup> Dorosan unlocked the vehicle and handed the keys to Postal Inspector Sheldon Jones. The defendant gave Jones verbal consent to unlock the glove compartment. Moreover, the inspection revealed a hand gun in the glove compartment, holstered in a black canvas holster with an extra magazine attached to the holster. In addition to “carrying” the firearm on postal property, the defendant stored the hand gun in his vehicle during his shift. It clear to the undersigned from the evidence adduced that Dorosan both “carried” and “stored” his firearm on “postal property,” even if the firearm was concealed in the locked glove compartment of his vehicle.<sup>16</sup>

The evidence presented is more than sufficient to find, as this Court does, that the defendant intended to have his firearm available for use immediately before entering the premises of the noticed “postal property,” upon crossing through the gate threshold, during his shift on postal property and upon leaving the confines of the Gretna Post Office, albeit for

United States*, 524 U.S. 125, 126-27 (1998) (construing the phrase “carries a firearm” within the context of 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1); holding that a defendant carries a firearm if it is carried directly on his person or in his vehicle; noting that the statute responds in part to the concerns of law enforcement personnel, who had urged that “carrying short firearms in motor vehicles be classified as carrying such weapons concealed”).

arguably legitimate reasons. However, that is not the litmus test of guilt or innocence in this case.

The Court has considered defense counsel's argument that Dorosan's vehicle is an extension of his home; however, that result obtains only when the vehicle is not parked on postal property where access is restricted. In this case, the restricted employee parking and loading area where Dorosan parked his vehicle during his shift bears signs that advise all who enter the gates, as follows:

Vehicles and their contents brought into, while on, or being removed from restricted nonpublic areas are subject to inspection. A prominently displayed sign shall advise in advance that vehicles and their contents are subject to inspection when entering the restricted nonpublic area, while in the confines of the area, or when leaving the area. Persons entering these areas who object and refuse to consent to the inspection of the vehicle, its contents, or both, may be denied entry; after entering the area without objection, consent shall be implied. A full search of a person and any vehicle driven or occupied by the person may accompany an arrest.<sup>17</sup>

An area, such as the Gretna Post Office's employee parking lot, which bears warnings the likes of that aforestated can hardly be analogized to "home sweet home" or an extension of same. By the same token, privately owned vehicles parked on such "postal property" cannot be reasonably be considered an extension of home. The "postal property" at issue more closely approximates one of those "sensitive places" excepted by the Supreme Court in Heller,<sup>18</sup> the Court's latest opinion addressing the Second Amendment “right to bear arms.” Certainly a loaded semi-automatic weapon, even if secured in the locked glove compartment of a privately owned vehicle, creates an opportunity for violence on such “postal property” – i.e., a “sensitive” area where access is restricted for reasons of facilitating the movement of inbound and outbound mail entrusted to the USPS.

<sup>18</sup>In Heller, the Supreme Court cautioned that "nothing in our opinion should be taken to cast doubt on the longstanding prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill, or laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places ...." District of Columbia v. Heller, --- S.Ct. ----, 2008 WL 2520816 at ** 34-35 & n. 26 (U.S. Jun 26, 2008) (No. 07-290) (holding that the Second Amendment of the Constitution of the United States secures the fundamental right of all Americans to bear arms).

Eradicating the potential for deadly workplace violence and ensuring the safety of both Government employees and the public on “postal property” is exactly the security measure that the regulation at issue was designed to effect. The regulation is an adjunct of the Postal Service’s policies and more particularly the “zero tolerance” of workplace violence.<sup>19</sup> Indeed, many of those who use postal facilities, including postal workers, do so from necessity, not choice; many members of the public must go to a post office to conduct their business and personal correspondence, carrying cash for stamps or money orders. Postal employees must enter and exit the postal property at issue carrying the U.S. mail.<sup>20</sup>

As previously addressed in this Court’s prior opinion, the postal regulation at issue (39

(noting that practices covered by the Postal Service’s “Zero Tolerance Policies” include “workplace violence”; stating that the “possession of firearms and other dangerous weapons on postal property is prohibited by law,” specifically 39 C.F.R. 232.1(I); and further elucidating its applicability to “all real property under the charge and control of the USPS”) [Gov’t Exh. “1”]; U.S. Postal Service Individual Training Record of Clarence P. Dorosan entering service on June 30, 2001 (noting Dorosan’s signature as having completed Postal Orientation on July 2, 2001 [Gov’t Exh. “2”]).

<sup>20</sup>See, e. g., United States v. Kokinda, 497 U.S. 720, 737 (1990) (Justice Kennedy concurring) (agreeing that the postal regulation of solicitation passes 1st Amendment constitutional muster and is reasonable as applied; noting that the Government has a significant interest in protecting the integrity of the purposes to which it has dedicated the property (facilitating postal transactions)).

C.F.R. § 232.1(l)) passes Second Amendment constitutional muster and is reasonable as applied to Dorosan. The Government has a significant interest in protecting the integrity of the purposes to which it has dedicated the property (facilitating postal transactions) and ensuring the security of postal employees and the public who must: (1) visit postal property to conduct official and personal business; (2) wait single file in roped off lines inside of postal facilities; (3) idle in vehicles single file in “snorkel lanes”<sup>21</sup> on postal property to use “drive and drop” mail receptacles placed outside of the Post Office building; and (4) carry cash or other legal tender for stamps, money orders, passports and other goods and services provided by the United States Postal Service.

Noting the fact that there were no signs prominently displayed outside of the Gretna Post Office building publishing the regulation’s prohibition against carrying firearms (§ 232.1(l)) or animals (§ 232.1(j)) on “postal property,” the defendant argued that the statute was vague, overly broad and unconstitutional as applied to the defendant. More particularly, defense counsel suggested that the regulation effectively outlaws conduct including matriculating the drop box lane in a vehicle with either a firearm or an animal safely stowed within its confines. The undersigned Magistrate Judge expresses no opinion whatsoever as to the constitutionality of regulation’s ban on carrying firearms or animals in public areas without official purpose – i.e., operating a vehicle through the “snorkel lane” of the Gretna Post Office while accompanied by a pet Shih Tzu, other non-seeing eye dog or, perhaps, armed with a loaded handgun stowed in the glove compartment. Neither of those issues are before the Court in this case, which involves the prohibited conduct of carrying and storing firearms without official purpose in the gated/restricted access employee parking, loading and unloading area of the subject “postal property.”

For all of the above and foregoing reasons including those mentioned in open court, the defendant was found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, convicted of count one of the superseding bill of information and sentenced to pay a fine of $25.00, which is payable within thirty (30) days of the entry of judgment in this case.
