I. INTRODUCTION

In the wake of the Supreme Court’s holding in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), that the Second Amendment confers an individual right to keep and bear arms, plaintiffs brought this challenge to certain ordinances of the City and County of San Francisco relating to storage and discharges of firearms, and sales of particular types of ammunition. This litigation was then stayed pending further guidance as to whether the right announced in Heller constrains the states, a question answered in the affirmative in McDonald v. City of Chicago, 130 S.Ct. 3020 (2010). Defendants<sup>1</sup> now move to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(1) of the Federal Rules of Civil

<sup>1</sup> The operative first amended complaint names as defendants the City and County of San Francisco, its Mayor, and its Chief of Police. As defendants point out, the particular individuals holding those offices have changed since the complaint was filed, and may change again before this action is resolved. Defendants offer to stipulate that the individual defendants at any given time should be deemed to be the Mayor and Chief of Police then in office.

1 Procedure, contending that plaintiffs lack standing to challenge the ordinances because they have 2 not shown, and cannot show a genuine and particularized threat that the ordinances will be enforced
3 against them. For essentially the same reasons, defendants further contend plaintiffs' claims are not 4 ripe. Because plaintiffs have adequately alleged an intent and desire to engage in conduct that is 5 prohibited by the ordinances but which they contend is constitutionally protected, the motion will be 6 denied. Plaintiffs will be given leave to amend, however, as to one claim involving an ordinance 7 that has been repealed and replaced by somewhat different provisions, and which is therefore 8 subject to dismissal on mootness grounds.

10 II. BACKGROUND

11 The First Amended Complaint challenges three provisions of the San Francisco Police Code
12 ("SFPC"):

13 Section 4512, "The Safe Storage Law," generally allows San Francisco residents to carry 14 unsecured handguns freely in their homes at any time, but requires them to apply trigger locks or to 15 store handguns in locked containers when the guns are not under direct, personal control.

16 Section 613.10(g), entitled "Prohibiting Sale Of Particularly Dangerous Ammunition," 17 prohibits gun shops from selling ammunition that has been enhanced to increase the damage it 18 inflicts on the human body, such as fragmenting bullets, expanding bullets, bullets that project shot
19 or disperse barbs into the body, or other bullets that serve no "sporting purpose." Plaintiffs contend 20 that while bullets designed to expand or fragment upon impact fall within this ban, they are 21 particularly suited for self-defense because they are designed, for safety reasons, to prevent ricochet 22 and to eliminate over-penetration of unarmored assailants. Plaintiffs assert the police often use such 23 bullets for the same reasons, and that they are unlike so-called "cop killer" or armor-penetrating 24 bullets that might more reasonably be characterized as "particularly dangerous."

25 Section 1290, "the discharge ban" formerly prohibited firing or discharging "firearms or 26 fireworks of any kind or description" within city limits. Plaintiffs challenged it on grounds that it 27 did not explicitly contain appropriate exceptions for self-defense. Section 1290 has since been 28 repealed, and replaced with amendments to provisions in sections 4502 and 4506. While this

1 motion to dismiss was pending, plaintiffs moved for leave to amend to delete their challenge to 2 section 1290 and to allege the grounds on which they contend the revised provisions of sections
3 4502 and 4506 still fail to pass constitutional muster. The motion for leave to file a second amended 4 complaint at that juncture was denied, with the understanding that unless the entire action were 5 dismissed for lack of standing, plaintiffs would be given leave to amend this particular claim upon 6 issuance of this order.

8 III. LEGAL STANDARDS

9 As noted above, defendants move to dismiss this action under Rule 12(b)(1) of the Federal 10 Rules of Civil Procedure on the ground that plaintiffs lack standing and that their claims are unripe.
11 The Article III case or controversy requirement limits federal courts' subject matter jurisdiction by 12 requiring, among other things, that plaintiffs have standing and that claims be "ripe" for 13 adjudication. Allen v. Wright, 468 U.S. 737, 750 (1984). The party asserting federal subject matter
14 jurisdiction bears the burden of proving its existence. See Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 511
15 U.S. 375, 377 (1994). Standing addresses whether the plaintiff is the proper party to bring the matter
16 to the court for adjudication. See Allen, 468 U.S. at 750-51. The related doctrine of ripeness is a 17 means by which federal courts may dispose of matters that are premature for review because the 18 purported injuries are too speculative and may never occur. Because standing and ripeness pertain to 19 federal courts' subject matter jurisdiction, they are properly raised in a Rule 12(b)(1) motion to 20 dismiss. See St. Clair v. City of Chico, 880 F.2d 199, 201 (9th Cir. 1989); see also White v. Lee, 227
21 F.3d 1214, 1242 (9th Cir. 2000).

22 "[T]he irreducible constitutional minimum of standing contains three elements," all of which 23 the party invoking federal jurisdiction bears the burden of establishing. Lujan v. Defenders of 24 Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560-61 (1992). First, the plaintiff must prove that he or she suffered an 25 "injury in fact," i.e., an "invasion of a legally protected interest which is (a) concrete and 26 particularized, and (b) actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical." Id. at 560 (citations, 27 internal quotation marks, and footnote omitted). Second, the plaintiff must establish a causal 28 connection by proving that the injury is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant.

1 Id. at 560-61. Third, the plaintiff must show that the injury will likely be redressed by a favorable
2 decision. Id. at 561.

3 “[T]he question of ripeness turns on the fitness of the issues for judicial decision and the 4 hardship to the parties of withholding court consideration.” Pac. Gas & Elec. Co. v. State Energy
5 Res. Conservation & Dev. Comm’n, 461 U.S. 190, 201(1983)(quotations omitted). The central 6 concern of the ripeness inquiry is “whether the case involves uncertain or contingent future events 7 that may not occur as anticipated, or indeed may not occur at all.” Richardson v. City and County of 8 Honolulu, 124 F.3d 1150, 1160 (9th Cir. 1997) (quotations omitted).

10 IV. DISCUSSION

11 Defendants insist that under “well established and well elucidated” law in this circuit, 12 persons who have not yet been arrested or prosecuted under a challenged law have standing only if 13 they can show imminent injury-in-fact by means of a “genuine and particularized threat” that the 14 challenged law will be enforced against them. Relying primarily on San Diego Gun Rights Comm.
15 v. Reno, 98 F.3d 1121 (9th Cir. 1996) (“Gun Rights Committee”), defendants argue that it simply is 16 not enough for plaintiffs to allege that they “wish and intend” to engage in conduct prohibited by the 17 law in dispute; rather, they must also allege facts showing when and how they will violate the law, 18 and a specific threat that they will be prosecuted if they do. Defendants contend plaintiffs have not 19 shown that any law enforcement official has specifically threatened any of them, much less all of 20 them, with arrest and prosecution under any of the challenged ordinances. Defendants place 21 particular emphasis on the observation in Gun Rights Committee that, “[w]e have repeatedly 22 admonished . . . that the mere existence of a statute, which may or may not ever be applied to 23 plaintiffs, is not sufficient to create a case or controversy within the meaning of Article III.” 98 F.3d 24 at 1126 (quotations omitted).

25 Gun Rights Committee involved a challenge to the federal “assault weapons” ban enacted by 26 Congress in 1994, which prohibited the manufacture, transfer or possession of semiautomatic
27 assault weapons and the transfer or possession of “large capacity ammunition feeding device[s].”
28

1 The plaintiffs alleged “that they ‘wish and intend’ to engage in unspecified conduct prohibited by 2 the Act,” but had not “articulated concrete plans” to do so. 98 F. 3d at 1124, 1127.

3 Because Gun Rights Committee long preceded Heller, the court quickly dispensed with the 4 notion that the plaintiffs might have standing under the Second Amendment—the lack of any then-5 recognized individual constitutional right to keep and bear arms foreclosed plaintiffs from asserting 6 standing. 98 F. 3d at 1124-25. Plaintiffs’ challenge under the Ninth Amendment was rejected for 7 the same basic reason. Id. at 1125. Accordingly, the court’s standing analysis proceeded only under 8 the claim that Congress had exceeded its power under the Commerce Clause in enacting the assault
9 weapons ban. Here, in contrast, plaintiffs are pursuing what the Supreme Court has now 10 pronounced to be an individual right guaranteed by the Second Amendment, not simply challenging 11 the scope of the Commerce Clause. While defendants may be correct that Heller cannot be seen as 12 overruling Gun Rights Committee, per se, the applicability of the standing analysis in Gun Rights
13 Committee to a case involving assertion of individual constitutional guarantees is uncertain.

14 The continued vitality of Gun Rights Committee is also questionable in light of MedImmune, 15 Inc. v. Genentech, Inc., 549 U.S. 118 (2007). The Gun Rights Committee court had pointed out that, 16 “The acts necessary to make plaintiffs’ injury—prosecution under the challenged statute—17 materialize are almost entirely within plaintiffs’ own control.” 98 F. 3d at 1127. As a result, the 18 court concluded, “[p]laintiffs have failed to show the high degree of immediacy that is necessary for 19 standing under these circumstances.” Id. In MedImmune, however, the Supreme Court rejected 20 this argument.

21 Our analysis must begin with the recognition that, where threatened action by 22 government is concerned, we do not require a plaintiff to expose himself to liability 23 before bringing suit to challenge the basis for the threat—for example, the 24 constitutionality of a law threatened to be enforced. The plaintiff’s own action (or inaction) in failing to violate the law eliminates the imminent threat of prosecution, but nonetheless does not eliminate Article III jurisdiction.

26 _____
27 <sup>2</sup> Indeed, the Court went on to hold that even where the threatened action was by a private party—a 28 patent holder threatening an infringement action—the same principle applies.

1           Ultimately, though, even to the extent that at least some aspects of Gun Rights Committee
2 remain good law, it simply is distinguishable. Plaintiffs have not merely alleged that they “wish and 3 intend” to violate the ordinances in some vague and unspecified way, at some unknown point in the 4 future. Plaintiffs allege they own guns now, and that based on their personal views of how it would 5 enhance their personal safety, they want to keep their guns unlocked now for potential use in self 6 defense, and that they wish to acquire prohibited ammunition now for the same purpose. While the 7 time that they will actually use the guns in self defense is unknown and may never come, that does 8 not undermine the immediacy and concreteness of the injury they have alleged. Even as to the 9 discharge rules, which plaintiffs do not contend they intend to violate unless and until a self-defense 10 situation arises, it would be unreasonable to require an incident to occur before judicial review of 11 the validity of the rules is available.<sup>3</sup>

12           Defendants also rely on Rincon Band of Mission Indians v. County of San Diego, 495 F.2d 1
13 (9th Cir. 1974), which found no justiciable controversy where the governing body of an Indian tribe 14 sought declaratory relief as to the applicability of a county anti-gambling ordinance to “traditional 15 tribal games of chance,” and to the possible development of a tribally-run card room on reservation
16 lands. Although the “case or controversy” issues discussed in Rincon underlie part of the standing 17 doctrine, the decision was not framed in terms of standing, and it did not involve an assertion of 18 individual constitutional rights. Nothing in the facts or discussion in Rincon otherwise compels a 19 conclusion that plaintiffs lack standing here.

20           Defendants’ contention that the plaintiffs’ claims are not ripe are based on the same basic 21 arguments as their position on standing, and do not provide a separate basis for dismissal. See 22 MedImmune, 549 U.S. at 128 n. 8 (“standing and ripeness boil down to the same question in this 23 case.”) Similarly, their arguments that the case should be dismissed on prudential standing grounds

24           <sup>3</sup> Defendants’ motion also challenges plaintiffs’ standing to make a derivative claim on behalf of 25 gun shop owners with respect to the ban on sales of certain types of ammunition. Plaintiffs, 26 however, have made it clear that they are asserting that the ban unduly burdens their own alleged 27 right to acquire and possess such ammunition. While it may be that plaintiffs will be unable, as a 28 factual matter, to establish that a ban on sales within the City and County of San Francisco actually presents a significant burden on their ability to obtain such ammunition, that would only undermine the merits of the claim, not plaintiffs’ standing to bring it.

1 rest on the same assumptions as to the concreteness and immediacy of plaintiffs' alleged injury.
2 Accordingly, the motion to dismiss must be denied.

4 IV. CONCLUSION

5 The motion to dismiss for lack of standing is denied. In light of plaintiffs' concession that 6 the claim directed at Section 1290 is now moot, however, it will be dismissed, with leave to amend
7 to allege plaintiffs' challenges to the amendments of sections 4502 and 4506. Any amended
8 complaint shall be filed with 15 days of the date of this order. The parties shall appear for a Case
9 Management Conference on November 3, 2011, at 10:00 a.m., with a joint Case Management 10 Conference statement to be filed one week in advance.
