Case 2:17-cv-00903-WBS-KJN Document 103 Filed 02/25/19 Page 2 of 9

Before the court is defendants' Motion to Dismiss 1 Plaintiffs' Third Second Amended Complaint. (Docket No. 95.) 2 3 The court held a hearing on the motion on February 19, 2019. 4

Factual and Procedural History I.

5 This case concerns a challenge to California's 6 prohibition on the possession of gun magazines that can hold more 7 than ten bullets, or "large capacity" magazines.¹ Although California had banned the purchase, sale, transfer, receipt, or 8 manufacture of such magazines since 2000, it did not ban the 9 possession of these magazines. Fyock v. City of Sunnyvale, 779 10 11 F.3d 991, 994 (9th Cir. 2015). In effect, Californians were allowed to keep large capacity magazines they had obtained prior 12 13 to 2000, but no one, with a few exceptions such as law 14 enforcement officers, has been allowed to obtain new large 15 capacity magazines in California since 2000.

On July 1, 2016, California enacted Senate Bill 1446 16 17 ("SB 1446"), which amended California Penal Code § 32310, 18 criminalizing the possession of large capacity magazines as of 19 July 1, 2017, regardless of when the magazines were obtained. Then, on November 8, 2016, the California electorate approved 20 21 Proposition 63, which largely mirrors SB 1446. The amended 22 version of Section 32310 enacted by Proposition 63 requires that 23 anyone possessing a large capacity magazine either remove the 24 magazine from the state, sell the magazine to a licensed firearms

²⁵ 1 Large capacity magazines are defined under California Penal Code § 16740 as any ammunition-feeding device with the 26 capacity to accept more than ten rounds, though this section specifically excludes from this definition any "ammunition 27 feeding device that has been permanently altered so that it 28 cannot accommodate more than 10 rounds."

A. Procedural History

5 On April 28, 2017, plaintiffs filed the instant action alleging that Section 32310 is unconstitutional. After the 6 7 original Complaint was amended, the court denied plaintiffs' request for a temporary restraining order and then denied 8 9 plaintiffs' request for a preliminary injunction. (Docket Nos. 10 45, 52.) In denying a preliminary injunction, the court held 11 that injunctive relief was not warranted because, among other things, plaintiffs were not likely to succeed on their Second 12 13 Amendment, takings, void for vagueness, and overbreadth claims.

14 After the court denied plaintiffs' request for a 15 preliminary injunction, plaintiffs filed their Second Amended 16 Complaint ("SAC"), which expanded on their previously asserted 17 claims and which added (1) an equal protection claim under the 18 U.S. and California Constitutions; (2) an allegation that the ban operates as a taking under the California Constitution; and (3) 19 additional allegations in support of their vagueness claims. 20 21 (Docket No. 59.)

The court dismissed the Second Amended Complaint on February 7, 2018. (Docket No. 74.) The court dismissed the Second Amendment claim after determining that intermediate

As a shorthand, the court refers to the current version of Section 32310, with its elimination of the grandfather clause for large capacity magazines owned before 2000, as the "largecapacity magazine ban," notwithstanding the fact that California has banned the purchase, sale, transfer, receipt, or manufacture of such magazines since 2000.

scrutiny applied and after finding that there was a reasonable 1 2 fit between the ban and its important objective of reducing the 3 incidence and harm of mass shooting. This decision was informed by, inter alia, the Ninth Circuit's decision in Fyock v. City of 4 5 Sunnyvale, 779 F.3d 991, and decisions in several other circuits finding that there was a reasonable fit between similar large 6 7 capacity magazine bans and similar objectives in other jurisdictions. (Docket No. 74 at 4-10.) 8

9 The court next held that the Second Amended Complaint 10 did not sufficiently allege that the large capacity magazine ban 11 was a physical taking under the United States or California 12 Constitutions because magazine owners may sell the magazines to 13 licensed gun dealers, remove them from the state, or permanently 14 modify them so they no longer accept more than 10 rounds. The 15 court further held that the Second Amended Complaint did not 16 sufficiently allege the ban was a regulatory taking because these 17 options meant the ban did not completely deprive the owners of 18 all beneficial use of their property. (Id. at 10-13.)

19 Finally, the court held that the Second Amended 20 Complaint did not sufficiently allege that the large capacity 21 magazine ban was void for vagueness or was overbroad, or that its 22 exemption for magazines used solely as props in movie, 23 television, or video production violated the equal protection 24 clause of the United States and California Constitutions. (Id. 25 at 13-23.) Accordingly, the court dismissed the Second Amended 26 Complaint in its entirety.

B. Duncan v. Becerra

Shortly after this court denied plaintiffs' request for a preliminary injunction, Judge Roger T. Benitez enjoined 1 2 California's large capacity magazine ban in Duncan v. Becerra, 3 265 F. Supp. 3d 1106 (S.D. Cal. 2017). The district court in Duncan held that, among other things, the plaintiffs in that case 4 had shown a likelihood of success of the merits on their Second 5 Amendment and takings claims. After this court dismissed the 6 7 Second Amended Complaint in the instant case, the Ninth Circuit upheld Judge Benitez's preliminary injunction in a memorandum 8 disposition in Duncan v. Becerra, 742 F. App'x 218 (9th Cir. 9 10 2018). Proceedings in the district court in Duncan v. Becerra are ongoing, and that court's preliminary injunction remains in 11 effect. 12

13 II. Discussion

14 The court notes that plaintiffs' Third Amended 15 Complaint has only minor changes from the Second Amended 16 Complaint, which this court previously found insufficient under 17 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6).³ However, after the 18 court's decision dismissing the Second Amended Complaint, the 19 Ninth Circuit issued its decision in Duncan affirming the 20 district court's injunction against the large capacity magazine 21 ban.

It is unclear how the Ninth Circuit's decision in Duncan is reconcilable with its prior decision in Fyock v. City of Sunnyvale, 779 F.3d 991, which affirmed the denial of a preliminary injunction against a similar municipal large capacity magazine ban. Nevertheless, the Ninth Circuit's affirmance in ³ Almost all of the additional allegations in the Third 28 Amended Complaint concern plaintiffs' Second Amendment claim.

Case 2:17-cv-00903-WBS-KJN Document 103 Filed 02/25/19 Page 6 of 9

Duncan compels this court to deny the motion to dismiss 1 2 plaintiffs' claims in the Third Amended Complaint for violations 3 of the Second Amendment and the takings clauses of the United States and California Constitutions. If it is the law of this 4 5 Circuit that the district judge in Duncan had discretion to find that plaintiffs there were likely to succeed on the merits of 6 7 claims substantially identical to the claims of plaintiffs here, it follows as a matter of law that the Third Amended Complaint in 8 9 this action does not fail to state a claim upon which relief can 10 be granted on those very claims.

11 Although the Ninth Circuit was not presented with an equal protection claim in Duncan, that decision also compels this 12 13 court to deny defendants' motion to dismiss the Third Amended 14 Complaint's equal protection claim. In addressing the motion to 15 dismiss the Second Amended Complaint, this court held that 16 plaintiffs had not sufficiently alleged that the large capacity 17 magazine ban's exemption for magazines used solely as props in 18 movie, television, or video production (the "film prop 19 exemption") violates the equal protection clauses of the United 20 States and California Constitutions because (1) the exemption did 21 not involve a suspect class; (2) because the ban did not violate 22 the Second Amendment, the ban did not burden a fundamental right 23 and therefore rational basis review applied; and (3) the ban 24 survived rational basis review because California could have 25 rationally believed that magazines used solely as film props were 26 not at risk of being used in mass shootings and this exception 27 could benefit an important sector of the California economy. 28 (Docket No. 74 at 20-23.)

While there is no dispute that the large capacity 1 magazine ban and its film prop exemption does not involve a 2 3 suspect class, in light of Duncan, the court must revisit its prior determination that the law did not burden the exercise of a 4 fundamental right, because if the law does burden a fundamental 5 right, strict scrutiny, rather than the rational basis test, 6 7 applies. Because this court has now determined that the Third Amended Complaint states a claim for a violation of the Second 8 Amendment, it follows that Third Amended Complaint sufficiently 9 10 alleges that the ban and its film prop exemption burden the 11 exercise of a fundamental right such that strict scrutiny 12 applies.

13 Under strict scrutiny, the court asks whether a law is 14 narrowly tailored to serve a compelling government interest. 15 Honolulu Weekly, Inc. v. Harris, 298 F.3d 1037, 1047 (9th Cir. 16 2002). Here, defendants have not sufficiently identified a 17 compelling government interest for this exemption. Nor have they 18 sufficiently explained how the film prop exemption is narrowly 19 tailored to serve that interest.⁴ Further, plaintiffs allege that the law discriminates against the majority of Californians 20 21 by allowing actors, studio employees, or studio contractors to 22 possess large capacity magazines (albeit for a limited use) while 23 denying such right to other Californians. Accordingly, plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged the film prop exemption 24 25 fails strict scrutiny, and the court will deny the motion to ^{27 &}lt;sup>4</sup> The court will not speculate as to how such an exemption could be narrowly tailored or what a compelling 28 government interest might be.

1 dismiss as to the equal protection claim.

The court reaches a different result as to plaintiffs' 2 3 other claims. The Ninth Circuit's decision in Duncan has no effect on this court's prior determination as to plaintiffs' 4 allegations that the large capacity magazine ban is void for 5 vagueness. The court will not repeat its prior discussion on 6 7 this issue and holds that the Third Amended Complaint does not sufficiently allege the large capacity magazine ban is void for 8 vagueness for the reasons stated in the court's order dismissing 9 10 the Second Amended Complaint. (See Docket No. 74 at 14-18.) 11 Similarly, even though plaintiffs have now sufficiently alleged the large capacity magazine ban prohibits a substantial amount of 12 13 constitutionally protected conduct in light of the Ninth Circuit's decision in Duncan, Duncan has no effect on the court's 14 15 prior holding that the overbreadth doctrine is inapplicable in the Second Amendment context, and dismissal of the overbreadth 16 17 claim is appropriate for that reason. (See Docket No. 74 at 19.) 18 Accordingly, the court will dismiss the Third Amended Complaint's 19 vagueness and overbreadth claims.⁵

²⁰ 5 The court GRANTS plaintiffs' and defendants' requests for judicial notice (Docket Nos. 61-1 and 98-1) and takes 21 judicial notice of the text of Senate Bill 1446; Proposition 63; the California Official Voter Information Guide for Proposition 22 63; the California Department of Justice Finding of Emergency and 23 Notice of Proposed Emergency Action regarding Proposition 63; the version of California Penal Code § 32406 enacted by SB 1446; the 24 version of § 32406 enacted by Proposition 63; the Office of Senate Floor Analyses' May 19, 2016 report regarding SB 1446; the 25 December 16, 2016 proposed regulations regarding large capacity magazines; and the December 29, 2016 Amended Notice of Withdrawal 26 of the proposed regulations. The court takes judicial notice of these documents as the text of these documents is not subject to 27 reasonable dispute, the documents were previously attached to 28 pleadings in this case, and the court may take judicial notice of
