INTRODUCTION

Plaintiffs, the People of the State of California, represented by and through 12 California cities and counties, allege, inter alia, that defendants design, promote and distribute firearms in such a way as to ensure their steady and widespread availability to unlawful users such as juveniles and convicted felons. This alleged conduct has undermined the public health and safety in cities and communities across the State. By their complaints, plaintiffs challenge such conduct as constituting a public nuisance under Civil Code sections 3479 and 3480, as well as a violation of the Unfair Competition Act (“UCA”), codified at Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 et seq. and 17500 et seq.<sup>1</sup>

Both the public nuisance law and the UCA are extraordinarily broad, sweeping statutes intended to remedy a wide spectrum of harm visited upon the People of the State of California. Pursuant to these statutes, plaintiffs seek equitable relief in the form of abatement of the public nuisance, restitution and disgorgement of wrongfully obtained gun industry profits, and civil penalties.

In their demurrer, defendants ignore the broad scope of the statutes upon which plaintiffs rely, and, instead, focus on inapplicable statutes and misplaced constitutional arguments. For example, defendants rely heavily on Civil Code section 1714.4, which they argue immunizes them from liability for public nuisance. However, section 1714.4 applies exclusively to products liability claims, and narrowly at that, and is simply not implicated in these public nuisance and UCA actions.

Equally inappropriate are defendants’ constitutional and so-called “abstention” arguments. For example, defendants essentially argue that courts may not order monetary or injunctive relief where a defendant’s conduct involves interstate commerce and occurs outside the state, but causes injury to a plaintiff within the state. This argument is wrong for a myriad of reasons, not least of which is that its adoption would virtually immunize all out of state businesses that engage in interstate commerce from liability for any claims based on public nuisance, the UCA, and essentially the entirety of the civil law. Defendants’ so-called “abstention” argument is also

1 without merit. Plaintiffs' claims, though they assuredly impact important public policy issues, are 2 not inherently political issues outside the province of the courts. In this regard, plaintiffs allege that 3 defendants' conduct violates statutes that expressly authorize city attorneys and county counsel to 4 file suit on behalf of the People and the General Public of California.

5 To state a cause of action under California's public nuisance statute, plaintiffs need
6 only allege that defendants' conduct is injurious to the health, safety or enjoyment of life or property
7 of the residents of cities and counties across California. Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480. Plaintiffs have 8 sufficiently done so. For example, plaintiffs cite a host of distribution practices, such as multiple 9 purchases, "straw purchasers" and "kitchen-table" sales that contribute to the widespread availability
10 of firearms to juveniles and criminals throughout the State. Plaintiffs allege that this availability of 11 guns has undermined the public health and safety, ravaged numerous communities, and has 12 compromised the quality of life of the People of the State of California. Assuming plaintiffs'
13 allegations to be true, as this Court must for purposes of this demurrer, plaintiffs readily meet the 14 minimum pleading threshold.

15 Plaintiffs' allegations also are sufficient to state several causes of action under the 16 UCA. The UCA's great breadth and scope – applying to any "unfair," "unlawful" or "deceptive"
17 business practices – certainly is implicated here. For example, the "unfair" prong of the UCA
18 proscribes any business activity that either offends public policy or results in harm to the public that 19 outweighs its utility. Importantly, plaintiffs need only make a prima facie showing of harm under 20 the UCA to survive demurrer. Again, plaintiffs have done so here. Even if the Court were, however,
21 to engage in the balancing test regarding the defendants' total lack of oversight over the distribution
22 and sale of their deadly products versus the utility of such neglect, the propriety of plaintiffs' claims 23 becomes very clear.

24 Finally, defendants move to strike plaintiffs' request for restitution under the UCA.
25 However, section 17203 of the UCA expressly provides that restitution is the appropriate remedy for 26 unfair competition. Defendants rely on Kraus v. Trinity Management Services, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal.
27 4th 116, to support their argument. However, Kraus applied to a private enforcement action, and 28 does not alter the remedies available in this public enforcement action.

1 For these reasons, and for the many others set forth below, plaintiffs respectfully
2 request that the Court overrule defendants' demurrer and deny their motion to strike.

3 SUMMARY OF FACTS

4 The prevalence of guns in illegal hands across California is staggering. Every year, 5 police and sheriff departments across the state respond to innumerable crimes perpetrated by 6 unlawful possessors of firearms. (LA City ¶¶ 7-9; LA County ¶¶ 7-9; SF ¶¶ 17-19). Many guns are 7 seized from juveniles and felons in unlawful possession of the weapons. (LA City ¶ 10; LA
8 County ¶ 8; SF ¶ 20). Plaintiffs bear enormous costs due to increased crime, death, injuries and 9 destruction of property occurring each year at the hands of unlawful possessors of guns.
10 Furthermore, to respond to gun crime and violence perpetrated against their citizens and their 11 property, plaintiffs are forced to increase expenditures for additional police, security, medical care
12 and other services and facilities. This violence has traumatized and injured citizens statewide. (LA 13 City ¶ 141; LA County ¶ 132; SF ¶ 74).

14 Defendants are aware that a substantial percentage of the firearms they manufacture
15 and distribute are ultimately unlawfully purchased by persons such as juveniles and convicted felons.
16 (LA City ¶ 81; LA County ¶ 70; SF ¶ 20). This secondary market constitutes a substantial 17 percentage of defendants' sales. (LA City ¶ 92; LA County ¶ 81; SF ¶ 24). To sustain this 18 profitable market, defendants engage in business practices calculated to create and promote the 19 secondary market, such as oversaturating the market, encouraging uncontrolled distribution, 20 facilitating multiple purchases and "straw purchases," selling to "kitchen table" dealers, and 21 designing weapons without simple features that would discourage unauthorized use. (LA 22 City ¶¶ 91-109; LA County ¶¶ 80-100; SF ¶¶ 23-41).

23 To oversaturate the market, defendants produce, market, and distribute far more 24 handguns than reasonably could be sold to legal purchasers. (LA City ¶ 93, LA County ¶ 82; 25 SF ¶ 25). There are approximately 65 million handguns in the United States today and an additional 26 2.5 million are sold each year.

27 Defendants overlook, and even encourage, uncontrolled distribution of firearms. (LA 28 City ¶¶ 95, 105; LA County ¶¶ 84, 94; SF ¶¶ 27, 37). The only supervisory roles defendants have

1 assumed with regard to their distributors relate to profitability. (LA City ¶ 96; LA County ¶ 85; SF
2 ¶ 28). Defendants have neglected to instruct and educate their dealers on the prevention of illegal
3 gun sales or to require any safety training of purchasers. (LA City ¶ 97; LA County ¶ 86; SF ¶ 29).
4 Defendants do not track or screen their sales, as many manufacturers of other dangerous products do,
5 and generally refuse to take any responsibility for the uncontrolled distribution of their products that
6 each day place more and more Californians at risk. (LA City ¶¶ 99, 100; LA County ¶¶ 88, 89; SF 7 ¶¶ 31, 32).

8 Defendants also make no attempt to prevent “straw purchases” or limit the number or 9 frequency of handgun purchases, nor have they promoted policies that seek to limit illegal
10 possession of such guns. (LA City ¶¶ 101, 102; LA County ¶¶ 90, 91; SF ¶¶ 33, 34). Straw
11 purchasers are “dummy” purchasers who buy guns on behalf of someone else not entitled to lawfully 12 possess a gun. More than half the guns subject to firearm trafficking investigations are purchased in 13 this manner. Multiple purchases have also been widespread throughout California and were a 14 frequent source of guns for the illegal secondary market. (LA City ¶¶ 103, 104; LA County ¶¶ 92, 15 93; SF ¶¶ 35,36).<sup>2</sup>

16 Not only do manufacturer defendants fail to control their established distributors’ 17 behavior, but they knowingly sell thousands of guns to “kitchen table” dealers, who operate in any 18 number of informal settings including gun shows, out of the trunk of a car or even on the street.
19 These dealers are known to be frequently in violation of zoning and licensing laws and partake in 20 corrupt practices such as failing to limit the number of guns sold or conduct background checks, 21 obliterating serial numbers, and destroying and falsifying records. (LA City ¶ 106; LA County ¶ 95; 22 SF ¶ 38).

23 Defendants have also designed guns to encourage unauthorized use and meet illegal
24 demands. (LA City ¶¶ 109-110; LA County ¶¶ 100-101; SF ¶¶ 41- 42). For example, defendants
25 have not taken steps to implement features that would assist gun tracing. (LA City ¶ 108; LA 26 County ¶ 99; SF ¶ 40). Moreover, defendants have changed design features to make their guns more

27
28 <sup>2</sup> Defendants erroneously contend that multiple sales are legal. Defs. Mem. at 16. In fact, multiple sales of concealable weapons are expressly prohibited under California law. Penal Code § 12072(a)(9).

1 amenable to criminals, such as making guns that are easier to conceal. (LA City ¶ 112; LA
2 County ¶ 103; SF ¶ 44). To meet the demand they have created, defendants have increased the 3 production of guns that are most popular with criminals. (LA City ¶ 113; LA County ¶ 104; SF ¶ 4 45).

5 Defendants undermine and subvert state and federal law. On occasion, certain 6 defendants have even calculated their actions to go so far as to circumvent specific state and federal 7 law. (LA City ¶ 115; LA County ¶ 106; SF ¶ 47). For example, these defendants design and sell 8 firearms that are similar or identical to ones that are banned by statute, advertise certain types of 9 guns in violation of state law, and continue to manufacture and distribute “junk guns” covered by 10 “Saturday Night Special” ordinances. (LA City ¶¶ 115, 116, 118; LA County ¶¶ 106, 107, 109; SF 11 ¶¶ 47, 48, 52, 53).

12 Despite the fact that thousands of lives could be saved by implementing existing 13 safety technology, defendants have failed to do so. Among the available safety precautions and 14 mechanisms available are adequate warning instructions, including information regarding proper 15 storage or use, safety locks and personalized safety features. (LA City ¶¶ 111, 113, 123; LA 16 County ¶¶ 111, 113, 123; SF ¶¶ 54, 55, 65). Defendants are aware that these safety features and 17 warnings would substantially decrease the risk of serious injury and death caused by firearms, but 18 refuse to implement them. As a result, defendants’ products are unreasonably dangerous. (LA 19 City ¶ 131; LA County ¶ 122; SF ¶ 64).

20 Defendants also engage in deceptive and/or misleading advertising. Through 21 advertising and promotion defendants falsely claim that firearm ownership increases the safety of 22 one’s home. (LA City ¶ 135; LA County ¶ 126; SF ¶ 68). Research clearly demonstrates, however,
23 that possession of a firearm in the home substantially increases risk of intentional and unintentional
24 injury, homicide and death. (LA City ¶¶ 135, 136; LA County ¶¶ 126, 127; SF ¶¶ 68, 69).
25 Moreover, defendants fail to include warnings regarding the relative risks involved in owning a 26 firearm. (LA City ¶ 137; LA County ¶ 128; SF ¶ 70).

27 The above-described promotion and distribution techniques have proven profitable.
28 The firearm industry enjoys $2-$3 billion in sales per year. (LA City ¶ 141; LA County ¶ 132; SF ¶ 74). Defendants' unlawful, unfair and deceptive practices have cost California residents dearly in the form of deaths, injury, daily from heightened criminal activity and violence, and increased law enforcement and medical costs. (LA City ¶ 141; LA County ¶ 132; SF ¶ 74).

STANDARDS OF REVIEW

A demurrer tests the legal sufficiency of plaintiffs' complaint. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 422.10, 589. Demurrers are generally disfavored; the plaintiff's pleadings are construed liberally, and all material facts set forth in the pleadings must be taken as true. Serrano v. Priest (1971) 5 Cal.3d 584, 591, 96 Cal.Rptr. 601, 605; Gressley v. Williams (1961) 193 Cal.App.2d 636, 639, 14 Cal.Rptr. 496, 498. Thus, to survive demurrer, a complaint need only "set forth the ultimate facts constituting the cause of action, not the evidence by which plaintiff proposes to prove these facts." Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal.3d 197, 212.

In addition to demurring to plaintiffs' claims, defendants also move to strike plaintiffs' demand for restitution. A motion to strike addresses defects or objections to the pleadings and must be evaluated on the face of the complaint. Code Civ. Proc. § 435 (a)(2). Similar to a demurrer, motions to strike are disfavored and the pleadings shall be construed liberally "with a view to substantial justice." Code Civ. Proc. § 452. No part of a pleading will be stricken unless it is "irrelevant, false, or improper matter," or was "not drawn in conformity with the law of this state, a court rule or order of the court." Code Civ. Proc. § 436. To strike plaintiffs' demand for restitutionary relief, defendants must therefore establish that the demand is entirely unsupported by the allegations in the complaints. Code Civ. Proc. § 431.10 (b). Defendants have not met this burden.

ARGUMENT

I. PLAINTIFFS HAVE STATED AN ACTIONABLE PUBLIC NUISANCE CLAIM UNDER CALIFORNIA LAW.

Public nuisance law has its origins in broad equitable doctrines that allow the government to enjoin private conduct that causes, contributes to or fails to prevent any unreasonable interference with public rights, such as the right to health, peace and safety. The complaints at issue here adequately set forth allegations describing defendants' conduct with respect to their design and distribution practices and the resulting injuries to the public. Defendants' demurrer as to this cause of action must be overruled.

A. California Public Nuisance Law Is Broad and Encompasses Plaintiffs' Cause of Action.

California public nuisance law, which aims to abate and prevent harm to the public, has been broadly defined to include "[a]nything which is injurious to health, or is indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property . . . ." Civ. Code § 3479. A public nuisance is one which affects "an entire community or neighborhood, or any considerable number of persons." Civ. Code § 3480.

For more than a century, the essence of public nuisance liability has been the creation and maintenance of conditions that interfere with the interests of the community. People v. Truckee Lbr. Co. (1897) 116 Cal. 397; Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal.App.3d 116. Indeed, "the touchstone of the public nuisance doctrine" is the "community and its collective values." Ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1090, 1109. Examples of public nuisance include fire hazard [San Diego County v. Carlstrom (1961) 196 Cal.App.2d 485]; pestilence [LA County v. Spencer (1899) 126 C 670; Skinner v. Coy (1939) 13 Cal.2d 407]; unruly crowds [People v. Montoya (1934) 137 Cal.App. Supp 784, People v. Lim (1941) 18 C2d 872]; the criminal behavior of patrons [Sunset Amusement v. Board of Police Commissioners of the City of Los Angeles (1972) 7 Cal.3d 64, appeal dismissed (1973) 409 U.S. 1121]; and gang violence [Gallo, 14 Cal.4th 1090].

The California Supreme Court recently described public nuisance jurisprudence as including any unreasonable interference with the "five general categories of 'public rights': . . . the public health, the public safety, the public peace, the public comfort or the public convenience." Gallo, 14 Cal.4th at 1104 citing the Restatement (Second) of Torts §821B. "[T]he availability of equitable relief to counter public nuisances is an expression of 'the interest of the public in the quality of life and the total community environment.'" Id. at 1007, citing ex rel. Bush v. Projection Room Theater (1976) 17 Cal.3d 42, 52.

Contrary to defendants' misrepresentation of California law, liability for public nuisance arises from the defendant's creation of, or contribution to, the nuisance or its ability to abate the nuisance, not whether the conduct was criminal, reckless, or negligent. "[I]t is immaterial whether the acts be considered willful or negligent; the essential fact is that, whatever be the cause, the result is a nuisance." Snow v. Marian Realty (1931) 212 Cal. 622, 625. This critical distinction, which defendants fail to appreciate, derives from the fact that public nuisance jurisprudence is concerned with stopping the public injury, rather than the nature of underlying conduct.

As shown below, the allegations of the complaints sufficiently show how defendants' practices have contributed to creating and maintaining a public nuisance that significantly interferes with public health and safety. (LA City ¶¶ 142-50; LA County ¶¶ 133-41; SF ¶¶ 75-82). Plaintiffs properly seek to enjoin defendants from perpetuating this nuisance.

B. Plaintiffs Have Pleaded Sufficient Facts to State a Public Nuisance Claim.

As set out in the complaints, defendants have both directly and indirectly provided a steady flow of guns to the illegal secondary gun market and have facilitated the easy access of guns for criminal purposes, including access by convicted criminals, juveniles and others prohibited from purchasing or possessing guns under state or federal law. Moreover, defendants have continually engaged in reckless, harmful conduct for years, despite receiving continual notice from Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms ("ATF") crime-gun trace requests and various other well-documented sources, of the disastrous, continuing and long-lasting effects of their conduct on plaintiffs. (LA City ¶¶ 88-92; LA County ¶¶ 77-81; SF ¶¶ 20-24).

The complaints contain detailed allegations about how the defendants' conduct substantially interferes with life, health and use of property in California communities. The facts alleged by plaintiffs amply show that defendants' actions have created or maintained a public nuisance, including the extent of defendants' interference with public interests, that defendants' conduct is of a continuing nature and produces long-lasting harmful consequences, and that the conduct is inconsistent with laws or regulations. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 821B. In short, plaintiffs allege both substantial interference with public rights and defendants' role in causing, contributing to and failing to alleviate this interference.

1 The natural results of defendants' practices with respect to gun distribution and 2 design have been gun-related deaths, injuries, crimes and substantial interference with public rights.
3 (LA City ¶¶ 144-50; LA County ¶¶ 135-41; SF ¶¶ 77-82). These harmful consequences affect the 4 public as a whole, not merely isolated individuals, subjecting everyone who resides, works, or 5 travels in the affected communities and neighborhoods to danger and fear.

6 Finally, defendants' conduct also severely undermines local, California and federal 7 laws restricting and regulating gun sales including, but not limited to, United States Penal Code
8 sections 921-930 (Firearms) and California Penal Code sections 12020-12040 et seq. (Unlawful 9 Carrying and Possession of a Weapon); sections 12050 - 12054 et seq. (Licenses to Carry Pistols and 10 Revolvers); sections 12070-12085, et seq. (Sale of Firearms)<sup>3</sup>; sections 12200-12250, et seq.
11 (Machine Guns); sections 12270-12290, et seq. (Prohibition of Sale or Transfer of Concealable 12 Firearm to Minors). (LA City ¶¶ 87-92; LA County ¶¶ 76-81; SF ¶¶ 24-39, 47-53). The complaints
13 properly allege a public nuisance claim under California law by asserting that defendants' conduct
14 with respect to distribution interferes with public health and safety. (LA City ¶¶ 142-50; LA County 15 ¶¶ 133-41; SF ¶¶ 75-82).

16 Recognizing the foregoing, it is not surprising that several courts in other states have 17 now ruled that these same defendants can be held liable for creating and maintaining a public 18 nuisance.<sup>4</sup> City of Boston v. Smith & Wesson Corp. (Mass. Super. Ct. July 13, 2000) No.
19 1999-02590 at 30-32, see Declaration of Jennie Lee Anderson in Support of Plaintiffs' Opposition to

21 Cir. Ct. May 16, 2000) No. 99-912662 NZ at 8-13, Anderson Decl., Ex. B; White v. Smith & Wesson

---

22 <sup>3</sup> Defendants boldly proclaim that multiple sales of firearms are legal. Defs. Mem. at 16.
23 Under California law, however, multiple sales of concealable firearms are clearly illegal. Penal 24 Code § 12072(a)(9) (prohibiting the sale of more than one concealable weapon within a 30-day period).

25 <sup>4</sup> Defendants cite two cases to support their contention that public nuisance claims against 26 firearm defendants impermissibly expand existing public nuisance law. Defs. Mem. at 12, citing 27 City of Cincinnati v. Beretta U.S.A. (Ohio Com. Pl. Oct. 7, 1999) 1999 WL 809838 aff'd (Ohio App.
28 1 Dist. Aug. 11, 2000); Penelas v. Arms Tech., Inc. (Fla. Cir. Ct. 1999) 1999 WL 1204353, appeal pending. These cases did not interpret California public nuisance law, however, and California public nuisance law is different from, and much broader than, for example, Ohio public nuisance law. One reason that California law is broader than other state's federal nuisance law is that recovery of damages is not warranted under California law.

1 Corp. (N.D. Ohio 2000) 97 F. Supp. 2d 816, 829; Ceriale v. Smith & Wesson Corp. (Cir. Ct. Cook
2 County, Ill. Nov. 30, 1999) No. 99L5628, motion for reconsideration denied (Ill. Cir. Ct. May 11, 3 2000) (shooting victims and their families allege that defendants are liable for public nuisance
4 arising from irresponsible distribution systems funneling thousands of guns to juveniles in 5 Chicago).<sup>5</sup>

6 C. Defendants Exercise Control Over the Creation and Maintenance of This Public
7 Nuisance.

8 Defendants seek to avoid public nuisance liability by erroneously contending that 9 public nuisance law requires that defendants exercise direct control over the negligent and criminal 10 activities of others. Defs. Mem. at 14. Under California law, however, defendants are liable for any 11 public nuisance to which they contribute or set in motion. Here, defendants have both contributed to 12 and set in motion the public nuisance described in the complaints.

13 Liability for a public nuisance extends to all who contribute to the creation or 14 maintenance of the nuisance. See Hardin v. Sin Claire (1896) 115 Cal. 460, 463; Shurpin v.
15 Elmhirst (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 94, 101; Boston, at 31; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 834. This is 16 so even where a nuisance is exacerbated by the negligent or criminal acts of another. See Sunset
17 Amusement, 7 Cal.3d at 84-85 (criminal acts encouraged or assisted by defendants' methods of 18 operation "may be said to lie within their reasonable control"); Osmose v. Selma Pressure Treating 19 Co., Inc. (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d at 1601, 1624 (rejecting manufacturers' argument that nuisance is 20 inapplicable because illegal behavior of product user is superseding cause of harm beyond
21 manufacturer's control); Montoya, 137 Cal.App.Supp. 784 (dismissing alcohol seller's claim that 22 nuisance cannot apply because customers' illegal and disorderly acts occurred outside business
23 premises and beyond its control). As a California appeals court framed the inquiry: "If the defendant 24 voluntarily raised the storm . . . it is no excuse for him that he could not afterwards quell it."
25 Montoya, 137 Cal.App.Supp. at 786, citing Cable v. State (1847) 8 Blackf. (Ind) 531. The law of 26 public nuisance in California does not permit defendants to facilitate and profit from severely 27

28 <sup>5</sup> Anderson Decl., Ex. C.

1 harmful activity they set in motion, while disavowing responsibility because they do not possess a 2 gun or control its user at the moment the weapon fires.

3 By arguing that they lack control over the use of guns by criminals, defendants ignore
4 the fact that they not only contribute to whether and how criminals obtain guns, but knowingly
5 market and distribute guns in a manner that facilitates the criminal element in obtaining them. See
6 LA City ¶¶ 95-107; LA County ¶¶ 84-98; SF ¶¶ 27-39; see also Boston, at 32 n.62 (defendants'
7 argument that they would have to identify and disarm criminals in order to exercise control over the 8 alleged nuisance "misses the point of Plaintiff's allegations. To exercise control to abate the alleged 9 nuisance, Defendants would have to cease maintaining the illegal, secondary market"). Improperly
10 allowing an irresponsible person to obtain control of a dangerous weapon is a basis for liability, not a 11 basis for immunity.

12 Moreover, it is disingenuous for defendants to assert that they have no control over 13 the growing epidemic of gun violence. At least one defendant, Smith & Wesson Corp., has 14 acknowledged through its historic agreement with the Federal Government and numerous states, 15 cities and counties, that there are a number of steps that each gun manufacturer can and should take 16 to control its distribution of guns so as to reduce the ability of criminals and juveniles to obtain 17 firearms. See Smith & Wesson Corp. Agreement (Mar. 17, 2000) (wherein, for example, defendant
18 agreed to train and monitor all downstream distributors and dealers, and not to distribute to dealers
19 whose guns are disproportionately traced to crime, or who refuse to meet stringent distribution
20 standards), Anderson Decl., Ex. D. Further, the complaints set out specific measures completely 21 within the control of defendants that would eliminate or reduce the harmful effects of their conduct
22 on the public, including limiting multiple sales, using the gun-trace information supplied by the ATF
23 to monitor and supervise their distributors and dealers, and refusing to sell through gun shows and 24 "kitchen table" dealers.<sup>6</sup> (LA City ¶¶ 95-107; LA County ¶¶ 84-98; SF ¶¶ 27-39).

26 <sup>6</sup> As courts have recognized, gun manufacturers exercise control over how their products are 27 attained and used through the manner in which they distribute them. See Hamilton v. Accu-Tek 28 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) 62 F.Supp.2d 802, 820 (gun manufacturers' "ongoing close relationship with downstream distributors and retailers putting new guns into consumers' hands provided them with appreciable control over the ultimate use of their products"), questions certified (2d Cir. August 16, 2000) Nos. 99-7753, 99-7785, 99-7787; Boston, at 32 n.62.

1 Finally, defendants cite no authority indicating that the degree of control required to 2 plead a public nuisance claim demands any more than alleging facts that demonstrate defendants
3 contributed to the creation or maintenance of a public nuisance. Instead, defendants cite irrelevant
4 cases where courts merely reached the conclusion that a party who did not participate in creating or 5 maintaining a nuisance could not abate it. Defs. Mem. at 14-15. Defendants even cite to a line of 6 cases that directly contradicts their argument. See, e.g., Mangini v. Aerojet-General Corp. (1991)
7 230 Cal.App.3d 1125, 1137 (holding it is immaterial that “defendant allegedly created the nuisance
8 at some time in the past but does not currently have a possessory interest in the property”); see also 9 Mangini v. Aerojet-General (1996) 12 Cal.4th 1087, 1093 (citing prior Mangini decision and cited
10 by defendants in their Memorandum).<sup>7</sup>

11 D. Plaintiffs’ Nuisance Claims are Not Based on Product Liability or Negligence.

12 1. Section 1714.4 Does Not Apply.

13 In an attempt to impose impermissible limits on plaintiffs’ claims, defendants 14 mischaracterize plaintiffs’ public nuisance cause of action as a product liability claim to fit it within 15 a narrow exemption to liability set forth in Civil Code section 1714.4. Defs. Mem. at 8-11.

16 Section 1714.4 provides: “In a products liability action, no firearm or ammunition
17 shall be deemed defective in design on the basis that the benefits of the production do not outweigh 18 the risk of injury posed by its potential to cause serious injury, damage or death when discharged.”
19 Civ. Code § 1714.4(a) (emphasis added). As this section clearly provides, alleging that a gun is 20 defective because of its inherent danger is barred. The statute expressly allows products liability 21 actions based on the improper selection of design alternatives, however. Civ. Code § 1714.4(c).

23
24 <sup>7</sup> Defendants also rely on Martinez v. Pacific Bell (1990) 225 Cal.App.3d 1557 and 25 Longfellow v. County of San Luis Obispo (1983) 144 Cal.App.3d 379. Both are clearly 26 distinguishable. The Martinez court held that a shooting victim could not recover damages from the 27 telephone company merely by claiming that the shooting “occurred in the vicinity of – or might have 28 some tangential connection to – a public telephone.” Id. at 1559. In Longfellow, the court ruled that a nuisance claim against the county for an injury that occurred on property previously owned by the county was barred by Civil Code § 3482 and by common law rules concerning injuries sustained on transferred property. The connection between defendants’ conduct and the resulting public nuisance here is not “tangential,” but direct. Nor does this case concern injuries sustained on transferred property.

1 Furthermore, nothing in section 1714.4 limits causes of action relating to the manner
2 in which firearms are distributed and promoted. In fact, the Legislature specifically excluded from 3 the statute reference to the “furnishing” of firearms. See Senate Judiciary Comm. Rep. on Judiciary
4 Assem. Bill No. 75 (1983-84).

5 The only allegation in plaintiffs’ complaints that is remotely related to section 1714.4
6 is the contention that defendants should design safer guns. Such allegations would be explicitly 7 permitted under section 1714.4 (c) had plaintiffs proffered this type of products liability cause of 8 action in their complaints. Because they have not alleged a products liability claim, however, 9 section 1714.4 is inapplicable.

10 2. Plaintiffs Do Not Allege a Negligence Cause of Action.

11 Defendants also rely on an unpublished federal decision regarding negligence, not the 12 causes of action alleged here, for the premise that firearm manufacturers are immune from liability in 13 this case. Defs. Mem. at 8, citing Casillas v. Auto-Ordinance Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1996) 1996 WL
14 276830 (applying section 1714.4 policies to bar plaintiffs’ negligence claims). The Casillas
15 decision, however, is based on an overly expansive reading of section 1714.4, which has just been 16 discredited by a California appellate court. See Whitfield v. Heckler & Koch, Inc., (2000 Cal.App. 2
17 Dist.) 2000 WL 1723608 (applying section 1714.4 exclusively to products liability claims in a case
18 alleging both products liability and negligence causes of action).<sup>8</sup> The Casillas case also involved
19 completely different facts. The plaintiffs in Casillas made no allegations that defendants distributed 20 guns in a manner that enabled convicted criminals, juveniles or other prohibited purchasers to obtain 21 them. Thus, Casillas indicates nothing about whether gun manufacturers can be held liable for 22 distributing guns in a manner that circumvents legal restrictions, let alone whether these plaintiffs 23 have stated public nuisance claims.

26 <sup>8</sup> If defendants attempt to rely on Whitfield in their reply to argue that it rejects negligent 27 distribution claims, they would misread the case. Although general language in the Whitfield 28 complaint discussed the negligent ways in which guns may be distributed, the court never addressed those allegations, rejecting instead the plaintiffs’ core allegations that the gun manufacturer could be liable merely for producing a “potentially dangerous” product. 98 Cal.Rptr.2d at 833. Whitfield is thus factually distinct from this case, and did not involve the public nuisance or UCA claims asserted here, for which the Legislature has defined the requirements and standards of liability.

1 The other cases cited by defendants are equally irrelevant. See Moore v. R.G.
2 Industries (9th Cir. 1986) 789 F.2d 1326 (addressing only theories of strict or per se liability);
3 Holmes v. J.C. Penney (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 216 (declining to hold manufacturer liable for sale of 4 CO2 cartridges to minor, because such cartridges are useful for a variety of things including
5 powering toys, airbrushes, and seltzer bottles); Bojorquez v. House of Toys, Inc. (1976) 62
6 Cal.App.3d 930 (declining to hold manufacturer liable for sale of slingshots, a toy which can be 7 acquired legally even by juveniles, convicted felons, and others prohibited from obtaining guns). In 8 each such case, the facts were limited to product liability claims.

9 E. California Public Nuisance Law Contains No Exemptions or Limitations.

10 Defendants contend that a variety of limitations drastically narrow the range of 11 matters that can constitute a public nuisance. No precedent or policy supports defendants' position.

12 1. A Public Nuisance Claim Need Not Involve Either Unreasonable Use of 13 or Effect on Real Property or Violation of a Law.

14 Despite their purported review of "over 900 California state court decisions 15 stretching back to 1851," defendants do not cite a single opinion supporting their assertion that 16 public nuisance law is limited to situations involving "a defendant's use of or effect on real 17 property" or "specific violations of statute or ordinance." Defs. Mem. at 9-10.

18 Defendants' contentions regarding the significance of real property confuse public
19 nuisance with private nuisance, a different cause of action not at issue here. While public nuisance
20 "extend[s] to virtually any form of annoyance or inconvenience interfering with common public 21 rights," private nuisance is traditionally "restricted to the invasion of interests in the use or 22 enjoyment of land." W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser & Keeton on the Law of Torts § 86, at 618 (5th 23 ed. 1984); Restatement § 821B cmt. h ("unlike a private nuisance, a public nuisance does not 24 necessarily involve interference with use and enjoyment of land").<sup>9</sup> Courts have already established

26
27 <sup>9</sup> Even if public nuisance did require a connection to real property, that element would be 28 satisfied here. Plaintiffs allege that defendants' conduct has a severely harmful effect on use of real property, causing injuries and danger and jeopardizing the safe use of streets, sidewalks, parks, schools, homes, businesses and other property throughout plaintiffs' communities.

1 that these defendants cannot defeat public nuisance claims by invoking rules applicable only to 2 private nuisance actions. See Boston, at 31; Archer, at 11 & n.6.

3 Defendants' argument that their conduct must violate a statute or ordinance to 4 constitute a public nuisance is equally flawed. The Supreme Court recently reaffirmed that the 5 nuisance-creating activity need not be independently illegal for public nuisance law to apply. Gallo,
6 14 Cal. 4th at 1109; see also Reid & Sibell, Inc. v. Gilmore & Edwards Co. (1955) 134 Cal.App.2d
7 60; O'Hagen v. Board of Zoning Adjustment (1971) 19 Cal.App.3d 151, 163-164. Authorities on 8 public nuisance law indicate that whether a defendant's conduct is inconsistent with statutes or 9 ordinances is merely one among many circumstances that may support a finding that defendant
10 created a public nuisance. See Civ. Code § 3479; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 821B.
11 Accordingly, plaintiffs' public nuisance claims need not be based on a direct violation of statute or 12 ordinance.

13
14 2. California's Public Nuisance Statute Does Not Contain a Special Exemption for Manufacturers of Products.

15 Defendants improperly assert that product manufacturers are exempt from public 16 nuisance law under California's statutes and judicial decisions. In fact, product manufacturers are 17 subject to the same legal standards that govern everyone else. Indeed, California courts have 18 specifically rejected the notion that any rules of law or precedents relieve manufacturers of products
19 from liability for nuisance. Selma Pressure, 221 Cal.App.3d at 1619 n.7.

20 Defendants rely principally on a series of cases in which plaintiffs sought to save 21 time-barred products liability claims against asbestos manufacturers by asserting them under the 22 label of public nuisance. See, e.g., City of San Diego v. United States Gypsum Co. (1994) 30
23 Cal.App.4th 575, 585; County of Johnson v. United States Gypsum Co. (E.D. Tenn. 1984) 580 F.
24 Supp. 284, 294. Defendants also try to find support from cases in which the claims against asbestos 25 manufacturers were for private nuisance, not public nuisance, and failed for reasons that are specific 26 to private nuisance law. See Tioga Pub. Sch. Dist. No. 15 of Williams County v. United States
27 Gypsum Co. (8th Cir. 1993) 984 F.2d 915, 920 (rejecting claim under North Dakota statute that 28 restricted liability to "a landowner or other person in control of property conducting an activity on

1 his land in such a manner as to interfere with the property rights of a neighbor”); Detroit Bd. of 2 Educ. v. Celotex Corp. (Mich. Ct. App. 1994) 493 N.W.2d 513, 521 (rejecting plaintiffs’ attempt to 3 convert defective product claims into private nuisance claims in order to circumvent expiration of 4 statute of limitations).<sup>10</sup>

5 In Selma, however, the court unequivocally rejected the same argument defendants
6 proffer here: “We do not find the [asbestos] cases categorically relieve manufacturers or suppliers of 7 goods from liability for nuisance.” Selma Pressure, 221 Cal.App.3d at 1619 n.7.

8 3. Public Nuisance Claims Do Not Require an Underlying Tort.

9 Public nuisance is an independent cause of action, not a subsidiary theory dependent 10 on the establishment of liability on a separate ground. Defendants provide no authority for their 11 argument that a public nuisance claim can be brought only if the plaintiff first establishes that the 12 defendant is liable for a separate “underlying” tort.

13 Although a public nuisance claim may be based on allegations of negligent, reckless,
14 or intentional conduct [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 821B], a public nuisance claim based on 15 such conduct need not satisfy the elements of a negligent, reckless or intentional tort cause of action.
16 Snow, 212 Cal. at 626. Parties are responsible for their nuisance-causing conduct, even if not 17 negligent. Id. at 625 (“Conceding that the defendant . . . was itself guilty of no acts of negligence, it
18 was nevertheless guilty of maintaining and permitting on its premises and for its use a nuisance 19 which caused injury to the plaintiffs”).

20 F. No Legislature Has Authorized Defendants To Distribute Guns in the Manner
21 Alleged Here.

22 Defendants argue that the Legislature has shielded them from liability because the 23 nuisance statute states that “[n]othing which is done or maintained under the express authority of a 24 statute can be deemed a nuisance.” Civ. Code § 3482. As a preliminary matter, this provision 25 applies only to authority provided by state statutes and not acts of Congress. Woodruff v. North

---

26 <sup>10</sup> The cases cited by defendants that do not involve asbestos only further support plaintiffs’
27 claims. See, e.g., Bloomington v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp. (7th Cir. 1989) 891 F.2d 611, 614 28 (concluding that manufacturer can be liable if it “participated in carrying on the nuisance” by selling hazardous product without taking care to avoid harm, but that defendant in this case “made every effort” to assure its distribution of its product did not cause harm).

1 Bloomfield Gravel Min. Co. (D. Cal. 1884) 18 F. 753, 770-71. California never elected to let the 2 federal government authorize public nuisances within the state. Id. Defendants cite only federal 3 laws and regulations throughout their argument on this point (see Defs. Brief, at 16-17), and every 4 one of those citations is irrelevant. No statute – state or federal – authorizes the wrongdoing alleged 5 here.

6 Defendants do not mention any of the caselaw construing section 3482, because it all
7 refutes their argument. The Supreme Court of California has “consistently applied a narrow 8 construction to section 3482.” Greater Westchester Homeowners Ass’n v. City of Los Angeles
9 (1979) 26 Cal.3d 86, 100. To foreclose plaintiffs’ public nuisance claims on this ground, defendants
10 must show that the Legislature “contemplated the doing of the very act which occasions the injury.”
11 Hassell v. San Francisco (1938) 11 Cal.2d 168, 171; Nestle v. City of Santa Monica (1972) 6 Cal.3d 12 920, 938. This means that the statute must demonstrate actual “unequivocal legislative intent to 13 sanction a nuisance.” Varjabedian v. City of Madera (1977) 20 Cal.3d 285, 291.

14 The fact that a business is legal and its activities are regulated merely means that the 15 business cannot be a nuisance per se and does not bar defendants from being held liable where the 16 public nuisance results from the manner in which they conduct the business. See Greater
17 Westchester, 26 Cal.3d at 101; Orpheum Building Co. v. San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit
18 Dist. (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 863, 875; Vemuto, 22 Cal.App.3d 116 at 128-29. Just because a law 19 permits defendants to manufacture and sell guns does not mean they are authorized to do so in any 20 manner they choose with immunity from the law of public nuisance. Defendants concede this very 21 point, acknowledging that “an activity, legislatively authorized, can still constitute a nuisance based 22 on the manner of performance.” Defs. Mem. at 17.

23 Defendants also insist that, even if their alleged wrongdoing has not been authorized, 24 they should be able to avoid liability on the ground that their businesses are subject to 25 “comprehensive” federal and state laws and regulations. Their argument is based entirely on a 26 comment in the Restatement indicating that some courts “are slow to declare” a heavily-regulated
27 activity to be a public nuisance. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 821B cmt. f. That comment does 28 not reflect California law regarding the sale and distribution of firearms, however. California

1 Rifle & Pistol Assoc. v. City of West Hollywood (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1302, 1317. The State
2 Legislature has not expressly or impliedly precluded cities and counties from pursuing civil suits
3 regarding handgun sales or distribution. Id. Nor has the federal government declared that gun
4 manufacturing and distribution are part of a “comprehensive” regulatory scheme. In fact, Congress
5 has explicitly declared the opposite. 18 U.S.C. § 927. No authority cited by defendants indicates 6 otherwise.

7 Plaintiffs have alleged their public nuisance claims with far more specificity than 8 required to satisfy pleading requirements. The Court should, therefore, overrule defendants’ 9 demurrer on these claims.

11 II. PLAINTIFFS HAVE ALLEGED A VIABLE CLAIM UNDER BUSINESS AND 12 PROFESSIONS CODE SECTIONS 17200 AND 17500

13 Plaintiffs assert that defendants’ conduct is unlawful, unfair and deceptive, within the 14 meaning of section 17200. In addition, plaintiffs allege that defendants’ advertising and marketing 15 practices violate both section 17200 and section 17500, which prohibits defendants from 16 disseminating advertisements that they know, or should know, to be untrue or misleading.
17 Committee on Children’s Television, 35 Cal.3d at 210.<sup>11</sup> Defendants’ attempts to rebut these claims 18 is misguided.

19 Defendants argue that plaintiffs fail to plead their UCA causes of action with 20 sufficient particularity because plaintiffs do not allege specific information including names, times 21 and places. Defs. Mem. at 19, 24-26. However, the California Supreme Court has held that such 22

23 <sup>11</sup> California courts have authorized claims alleging unfair and deceptive marketing and 24 distribution practices under both sections 17200 and 17500. See Consumers Union of U.S., Inc. v.
25 Alta-Dena Certified Dairy (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 963. In that case, Alta-Dena manufactured and sold 26 raw certified milk (RCM). To promote RCM, Alta-Dena ran advertisements stating that RCM was 27 safer and more nutritious than regular pasteurized milk. However, these claims were false and thus, 28 violated both sections 17200 and 17500. The trial court issued an injunction requiring Alta-Dena to place two warning labels on its RCM containers: the first warned that RCM may contain dangerous bacteria and certain groups of individuals faced higher risks; the second stated that there was no scientific evidence establishing that RCM was more nutritious than pasteurized milk. Id. at 971.
The Court of Appeals upheld the authority of the trial court to mandate warning labels under the specificity is not required to state a cause of action under the UCA. See, e.g., Committee on Children's Television, 35 Cal.3d at 212, citing People v. Superior Court (Jayhill) (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 283, 287-88; Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1988) 19 Cal.4th 26, 46-47 (noting that "contrary to the suggestion by amicus curiae that the court may require fact-specific pleading [in an UCA claim], the well-settled rule is otherwise"). Moreover, important policy considerations militate against requiring plaintiffs to plead the specific details of each unfair act. Committee on Children's Television, 35 Cal.3d at 214. Requiring such specificity would virtually eliminate UCA lawsuits as a practical remedy to redress the types of harm contemplated under the UCA and would immunize defendants from statutory remedies designed to protect the public. Id. at 222-23.
UCA statutes. Id. at 975.

In a UCA action, the complaint need only "set forth the ultimate facts constituting the cause of action, not the evidence by which plaintiff proposes to prove those facts." Id. at 212 (emphasis added). To survive demurrer, plaintiffs need only state "a prima facie case of harm, having its genesis in an apparently unfair business practice" to satisfy their burden. Motors, Inc. v. Times-Mirror Co. (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 735, 740. As the Supreme Court explained, "[i]f defendants require further specifics in order to prepare their defense, such matters may be the subject of discovery proceedings." Committee on Children's Television, 35 Cal.3d at 212.

Plaintiffs' complaints readily satisfy these pleading requirements. They describe the ultimate facts constituting the violations of the UCA and state their allegations in sufficient detail "to notify the defendants of the claim[s] made against them, and to frame the issues for litigation." Committee on Children's Television, 35 Cal.3d at 212-213; LA City §§ 1-90, 1335-140; LA County §§ 1-79, 126-131, 157-159; SF §§ 1-22, 68-73 and 83-85. No more is warranted.

A. Plaintiffs Properly State a Claim Under Section 17200.

1. Plaintiffs Sufficiently State a Claim for "Unlawful" Business Practices under the UCA.

Plaintiffs' claim under section 17200 for "unlawful" business practices is sufficiently stated. An "unlawful" business practice includes "anything that can properly be called a business practice and that at the same time is forbidden by law." People v. McKale (1979) 25 Cal.3d 626, 634, quoting Barquis v. Merchants Collection Soc. of Oakland (1972) 7 Cal.3d at 94; Cel-Tech

1 Comm., Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th at 180; State Farm, 45
2 Cal.App.4th at 1103.<sup>12</sup> Virtually any law – federal, state or local – can serve as a predicate for a 3 section 17200 claim. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 1093, 4 1102-03.

5 Federal, state and local laws have been enacted for the very purpose of reducing gun
6 violence. (LA City ¶¶115; LA County ¶¶ 106; SF ¶¶ 47). Defendants’ conduct ignores these policy
7 goals and directly undermines the laws and regulations designed to further them. Id. By identifying 8 the laws that are undermined by defendants’ activities, the complaints explicitly allege that 9 defendants’ business practices frustrate California law. (LA City ¶¶ 91-109, 115-118, 151-166; LA 10 County ¶¶ 80-100, 106-110, 142-16; SF ¶¶ 23-41, 47-53 and 86-88).

11 For example, plaintiffs allege that defendants have created a public nuisance in 12 violation of California Code of Civil Procedure section 731 and Civil Code section 3480 and 13 describe in detail how defendants created and maintained an illegitimate secondary market that 14 allows criminals and juveniles to unlawfully obtain firearms and oversaturates the market. (LA City 15 ¶¶ 93-95, 101-114, 119-134; LA County ¶¶ 82-96, 99-105, 111-125; SF ¶¶ 25-46, 54-67, 87).
16 Further, plaintiffs allege that defendants distribute handguns without adequate control, facilitate 17 “straw purchases,” sell firearms to “kitchen table” dealers and design firearms to appeal to criminals.
18 Id.<sup>13</sup>

20 <sup>12</sup> Defendants’ reliance on McKale is clearly misplaced. Defs. Mem. at 18-20. In McKale, the 21 Supreme Court noted that the definition of unfair competition under the UCA should be given a 22 broad interpretation. 25 Cal.3d at 632. Further, the McKale Court concluded that the Legislature 23 enacted section 17200 to permit courts to enjoin on-going wrongful business conduct in any context.
Id. Plaintiffs have met the McKale standards because their allegations are not limited to conclusory statements, but instead describe defendants’ unlawful activity with detail.

24 Defendants’ reliance on Klein v. Earth Elements, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 965 is equally 25 unfounded. Defs. Mem. at 19. In Klein, the court merely held that “the unintentional distribution of 26 [contaminated pet food] is beyond the scope . . . of the “unlawful” prong of § 17200” because defendants had not “broke[n] any law by unwittingly distributing [the] contaminated pet food.” Id.
at 969. Here, plaintiffs have alleged that defendants have consciously and intentionally undermined specific statutes and ordinances. Their conduct has not been “unwitting.”

27 <sup>13</sup> The United States Supreme Court has even upheld criminal liability for manufacturers who 28 have engaged in remarkably similar conduct to that alleged here. See Direct Sales Co. v. United States (1943) 319 U.S. 703 (unanimously affirming the criminal conspiracy conviction of pharmaceutical manufacturer that technically complied with all legal requirements, but sold

1 Plaintiffs also allege that defendants market and sell firearms banned by the Roberti-
2 Roos Assault Weapons Act and the assault weapons advertising ban, and that defendants made 3 minor modifications or renamed the banned assault weapons in order to avoid application of these 4 laws. (LA City §§ 116-117; LA County §§ 107-108; SF §§ 48-51). These allegations are pleaded 5 with sufficient specificity to warrant overruling demurrer.

7 2. Plaintiffs Sufficiently State a Claim for “Unfair” Business Practices
8 Under Section 17200.

9 Plaintiffs have also sufficiently stated a cause of action under section 17200 by 10 alleging that defendants engage in “unfair” business practices. “Unfair” is broader in scope than 11 “unlawful” and may prohibit activity that may otherwise be legal. State Farm, 45 Cal.App.4th at 12 1103; see also Cel-Tech, 20 Cal.4th at 180.<sup>14</sup> Section 17200 is intentionally sweeping and allows 13 “courts maximum discretion to prohibit new schemes to defraud.” Id. (citing Motors, 102 Cal. App.
14 3d at 740). As a result, there are literally countless circumstances where a business practice could 15 qualify as “unfair” under the UCA.

16 Courts may evaluate whether a business practice is “unfair” either on public policy
17 grounds, or by balancing the utility of defendants’ conduct against the gravity of harm to plaintiffs.
18 State Farm, 45 Cal.App.4th at 1104; Day v. AT&T Corp. (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 325, 332, citing 19 Saunders v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 832, 839. Under either method, plaintiffs prevail.

20 A business practice is patently unfair on policy grounds if it “‘offends an established 21 public policy or when the practice is immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous or substantially 22 injurious to consumers.’” State Farm, 45 Cal.App.4th at 1104, quoting People v. Casa Blanca
23 Convalescent Homes, Inc. (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 509, 530. Plaintiffs allege that defendants 24 distribute firearms in a manner that assists criminals and juveniles in illegally obtaining guns;

25 _____
26 controlled substance to physician in such quantities that it must have known or been willfully blind 27 to the fact that he was dispensing it illegally).

28 <sup>14</sup> Defendants erroneously read Cel-Tech as limiting unfair competitor claims under the UCA to those that are tethered to some legislative policy. Defs. Mem. at 20. However, that discussion was expressly limited to actions between competitors alleging anticompetitive practices. 20 Cal.4th at 186-87. That limitation is inapplicable here because this case does not involve an action between competitors.

mislead the public regarding safety of firearms by promoting gun ownership as increasing home safety; fail to warn consumers of the dangers associated with firearm ownership; and refuse to implement existing safety devices and precautions to lessen the dangers associated with their products. (LA City ¶¶ 95-105, ; LA County ¶¶ 84-94, 111-125, 126-131; SF ¶¶ 27-37, 54-67, 68-73, 86-88). The consequences of these activities include increases in gun-related injury, death and crime. This conduct and its harmful consequences are plainly and substantially injurious to People of this State, and are otherwise offensive to established public policy. Accordingly, plaintiffs have sufficiently stated their unfair business practices claim on policy grounds.

A business practice may also be unfair if the gravity of the harm suffered by the People of the State of California outweighs its utility. Day, 63 Cal.App.4th at 332; State Farm, 45 Cal.App.4th at 1103-04. As noted above, the complaints properly allege that defendants' unfair business practices continue to inflict consistent, irreparable harm on the People of California in the form of death, injury, fear and destruction of property. (LA City ¶¶ 6, 82-85, 144-150; LA County ¶¶ 6, 71-74, 135-141; SF ¶¶ 2, 17-18, 77-82). Accordingly, plaintiffs have sufficiently pleaded the gravity of the harm they suffer as a consequence of defendants' collectively unfair business practices.

Plaintiffs cannot be expected to plead facts in support of defendants' practices. Whether defendants can set forth any proof of utility is a question of fact, making it "quite impossible . . . to determine the issue of unfairness on demurrer." Motors, Inc. v. Times-Mirror Co. (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 735,740. Therefore, because plaintiffs' complaints state a prima facie case of harm, their cause of action for unfair business practices must survive demurrer. Id.

3. Plaintiffs Have Alleged a Viable Claim for "Deceptive" Business Practices Under Section 17200.

Plaintiffs' claim for "deceptive" business practices also survives demurrer. Plaintiffs need only allege facts indicating that defendants' conduct is "likely to deceive" the public to sufficiently state a cause of action. State Farm, 45 Cal.App.4th at 1105, citing Committee on Children's Television, 35 Cal.3d at 211; see also Day, 63 Cal.App.4th at 332 (same test). "Likely to be deceived" has been afforded a very liberal interpretation by California courts.

1 “Allegations of actual deception, reasonable reliance, and damages are unnecessary”
2 under the UCA. Committee on Children’s Television, 35 Cal.3d at 211. Moreover, what is “‘likely 3 to deceive’ has no relationship to the concept of common law fraud, which . . . must be actually
4 false, known to be false by the perpetrator and reasonably relied upon by a victim who incurs
5 damages. None of these elements are required to state a claim under section 17200 or 17500.”
6 Day, 63 Cal.App.4th at 332 (emphasis added).

7 Instead, violations of the UCA for fraudulent business practices, or false and 8 misleading advertising, include a “wide spectrum” of activity. “Advertising,” under section 17500
9 or section 17200 is virtually any statement made by a manufacturer about a product. See, e.g.,
10 Chern v. Bank of America (1976) 15 C.3d 866, 975-76. In fact, an advertisement need not even be 11 made in a business context. Pines v. Tomson, 160 Cal.App.3d 370, 386. “By their breadth, the 12 statutes encompass not only those advertisements which have deceived or misled because they are 13 untrue, but also those which may be accurate on some level, but will nonetheless tend to mislead or 14 deceive . . . .” Id. at 332-33. Failure to disclose “relevant information” is also actionable under these 15 sections. Id.

16 Here, plaintiffs argue that defendants’ conduct was calculated to mislead consumers.
17 Plaintiffs allege that defendants made misleading and deceptive statements to convince the public
18 that owning firearms will make their homes safer when in fact, the opposite is true. (LA City 19 ¶¶ 135-140; LA County ¶¶ 126-131, 157-159; SF ¶¶ 68-73, 83-85). Plaintiffs further contend that 20 defendants failed to provide consumers with information or warnings regarding the relative risk of 21 keeping a firearm in the home. Id. These allegations are alleged with sufficient particularity to state 22 a cause of action for deceptive business practices under section 17200.

23 B. Plaintiffs Have Adequately Pleaded A Cause of Action for False and Misleading
24 Advertising Under Section 17500.

25 Defendants also assert that plaintiffs’ cause of action for false and misleading 26 advertising should be dismissed because no “reasonable consumer” could be deceived by this 27 advertising. Defs. Mem. at 22-23. However, no California court has adopted this standard, and the 28 California Supreme Court, in Committee on Children’s Television, specifically endorses an “unsophisticated consumer” standard. 35 Cal.3d. at 214. See also People v. Wahl (1940) 39

1 Cal.App.2d Supp. 771,774 (these statutes “protect the general public who read advertisements and
2 are likely to know nothing of the facts, not the dealers who publish them. . . .”) (emphasis added).<sup>15</sup>

3 In any event, plaintiffs have sufficiently pleaded likelihood of public deception under 4 either standard. Committee on Children’s Television, 35 Cal.3d at 214. For example, plaintiffs 5 allege that defendants promote their firearms as “homeowner’s insurance” and tell consumers that a 6 firearm is “your safest choice for personal safety,” ignoring statistics and research that indicate the 7 contrary. (LA City ¶¶ 135, 137; LA County ¶¶ 126, 128; SF ¶¶ 68, 70.)

8 Even “[t]he reasonable consumer may well be unwary.” Haskell v. Time Inc. (E.D.
9 Cal. 1994) 857 F.Supp.1392, 1399 n.10. The average gun consumer may believe he can protect his 10 home with a firearm in some circumstances, but, at the same time may be “unwary” about the 11 concomitant risks, due to defendants failure to properly warn. (LA City ¶ 137; LA County ¶ 128; SF 12 ¶ 70.)

13 Therefore, plaintiffs’ complaints properly allege that defendants’ statements are likely 14 to deceive the public in violation of section 17500.

15 C. Plaintiffs’ UCA Claims Do Not Violate Defendants’ First Amendment Right.

16 Finally, defendants turn to the First Amendment of the United States Constitution in 17 an ill-fated attempt to evade liability under the UCA. However, the preeminent secondary authority
18 on the UCA unequivocally states: “Sections 17200 and 17500 have withstood every first amendment 19 challenge that has been reported in a published opinion.” Stern, Unfair Business Practices and 20 False Advertising Bus. & Prof Code § 17200, at 107 (TRG 1999).

21 Defendants’ First Amendment argument fails because false, deceptive or misleading
22 commercial speech is not protected by the First Amendment. See, e.g., People v. Morse (1993) 21
23 Cal.App.4th 259,265-69; People v. Superior Court (Olson) (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 181, 191-95;

---

25
26
27 <sup>15</sup> The only California authority defendants cite to support application of the “reasonable 28 consumer” standard is State Board of Funeral Directors & Embalmers v. Mortuary (1969) 271
Cal.App.2d 638. Defs. Mem. at 22. Not only is this case factually distinguishable, but to the extent it posits a different standard than the “unsophisticated consumer,” it is at odds with the California
Supreme Court’s more recent and controlling decision in Committee on Children’s Television.

1 People v. Columbia Research Corp. (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 607, 614.<sup>16</sup> Seeking to confuse the 2 issues, defendants mischaracterize their statements as “opinions on . . . important public issues” and
3 try to place self-serving statements about their products on par with the editorials transmitted on 4 non-commercial educational broadcast facilities at issue in FCC v. League of Women Voters (1984)
5 468 U.S. 364, 381. Defs. Mem. at 27.

6 The definition of advertising under the UCA is broad enough to include the speech at 7 issue here. See Chern, 15 Cal.3d at 975-76 (virtually any statement made about a product by the 8 manufacturer is advertising); Pines, 160 Cal.App.3d at 386 (under the UCA, an advertisement need
9 not be made in a business context). Accordingly, defendants’ demurrer on First Amendment 10 grounds should be overruled.

11 III. PLAINTIFFS’ CLAIMS DO NOT OTHERWISE VIOLATE THE CONSTITUTION.

12 Defendants also insist that all of plaintiffs’ claims are unconstitutional because they 13 seek to affect commerce in states other than California. Defendants advance an invalid basis for 14 demurrer, and their constitutional arguments are wholly without merit.

15 Objections to the scope of relief sought provide no basis to sustain defendants’
16 demurrer. Defendants’ constitutional argument addresses only how much or what type of relief
17 plaintiffs should be able to obtain, not whether plaintiffs are entitled to any relief. If defendants’
18 argument were correct, courts would be unable to rule on a substantial portion of the cases before 19 them, because most civil claims and rules of law affect interstate commerce in some way.

20 According to defendants, the complaints run afoul of constitutional limits because 21 they are too “broadly drafted” and the “regulatory ambitions” presented by them are too great. Defs.
22 Brief at 27. California law expressly recognizes eight grounds on which a demurrer can be 23 sustained, and the scope of relief requested is not among them. Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10. Even if 24 plaintiffs have asked for relief beyond what the court may award them, this “does not detract from 25

26 <sup>16</sup> Defendants’ reliance on Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d.1033 to argue that 27 plaintiffs’ claims are “absolutely barred” under the First Amendment is as misleading as it is 28 irrelevant. Defs. Mem. at 26. There, the Court determined that under the First Amendment plaintiff bears the burden of proving that the statement was false and that it was “of and concerning” the plaintiff. Id. at 1042. In Blatty, the Court found an “absolute bar” to liability only because the plaintiff was unable to satisfy these requirements. Id. at 1041, 1048.

1 the sufficiency of the complaint to state a cause of action, for we may not assume that the trial court
2 will grant relief beyond that which it is authorized to give.” People v. City of Los Angeles (1958)
3 160 Cal.App.2d 494, 510; Mangini, 230 Cal.App.3d at 1147-48 (“validity of a demurrer is 4 determined with reference to the pleaded facts alleged to constitute a wrong, not the prayer for 5 relief”); Franchise Tax Bd. v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 878, 885
6 (demurrer cannot be sustained on ground that plaintiff demands relief to which it is not entitled);
7 Colvig v. RKO General, Inc. (1965) 232 Cal.App.2d 56, 66 (same); Woodley v. Woodley (1941) 47
8 Cal.App.2d 188, 190-91 (same). Regardless of whether plaintiffs seek relief that would exceed 9 constitutional bounds, defendants cannot demur on that basis.

10           Assuming, arguendo, that scope of relief was ground for a demurrer, defendants are 11 far from showing that no relief sought here would be constitutional. Defendants’ demurrer addresses 12 only the most far-reaching type of injunctive relief that could possibly be entered, contending that 13 plaintiffs’ claims “can only be read to mean that plaintiffs seek to abate the lawful manufacture, 14 distribution, and sale of the defendant manufacturers’ anywhere in the United States or, indeed, the 15 world.” Defs. Brief at 28. Defendants cannot reasonably dispute that more limited relief could be 16 entered without even arguably infringing any constitutional limits. Defendants’ all-or-nothing
17 approach is dramatic but is not a basis on which their demurrer can be sustained. Courts applying
18 equivalent procedural rules in other states have reached this very conclusion. See, e.g., Boston, at 29
19 (“[a]ll I now decide is a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. The scope and 20 constitutionality of any remedy, should Plaintiffs succeed at trial, is appropriately left to the judge 21 who will have the benefit of a full factual record”).

22           Moreover, defendants’ constitutional arguments are simply wrong. While defendants
23 mention a litany of constitutional provisions including the Interstate Commerce Clause, the Foreign 24 Commerce Clause, the Supremacy Clause, the Import/Export Clause, and the Due Process Clause, 25 their argument essentially boils down to the notion that courts cannot award any monetary or 26 injunctive relief where a defendant’s conduct involves interstate commerce and occurs outside the 27 state but causes injury to a plaintiff within the state. That is not so. See Boston, at 27 (Supreme 28

1 Court has established that “state civil suits may proceed even though the result may be to effect a
2 change in out-of-state practices”); White, 97 F. Supp. 2d at 829-30.

3 Few principles of law are more firmly established than the principle that a court with 4 jurisdiction over an out-of-state actor can protect those within the state from injuries inflicted by that 5 actor. World-Wide Volkswagen Corp. v. Woodson (1980) 444 U.S. 286; Young v. Masci (1933) 289
6 U.S. 253, 258-59 (“The cases are many in which a person acting outside the State may be held
7 responsible according to the law of the State for injurious consequences within it”). California’s
8 long-arm rule expressly allows adjudication of tort claims against out-of-state defendants who cause
9 injury within the state. California Trial Procedure Rule 4.4. Defendants insist that they are not 10 challenging the Court’s jurisdiction, but they cannot avoid the clash between their argument and 11 these precedents and rules. While defendants admit that courts can have jurisdiction over out-of-12 state tortfeasors, they insist that courts cannot exercise that jurisdiction in any case where the relief
13 awarded would affect interstate commerce. Such a limitation would swallow the entire rule. If 14 defendants were correct, California’s long-arm rule would result in a violation of the Commerce
15 Clause every time a court exercised its jurisdiction to award damages or injunctive relief against an 16 out-of-state tortfeasor.

17 Defendants’ argument leads to these untenable conclusions because it is based on 18 erroneous notions about the Commerce Clause. Defendants do not cite any case in which the 19 Commerce Clause precluded an injured plaintiff from obtaining relief for harm it suffered. The 20 cases cited by defendants instead establish that “the Commerce Clause protects against inconsistent
21 legislation arising from the projection of one State’s regulatory regime into the jurisdiction of 22 another state.” Healy v. Beer Inst. (1989) 491 U.S. 324, 336. This means that a state cannot impose 23 its regulatory schemes on out-of-state commerce merely because it affects in-state commerce. Id. at 24 335-36; Edgar v. MITE Corp. (1982) 457 U.S. 624, 642-43. The cases defendants cite did not 25 involve civil claims by injured plaintiffs, however, and, contrary to defendants’ suggestions, they do 26 not eviscerate the well-established power of courts to adjudicate claims and grant relief where the 27 conduct that causes injury inside a state involves commerce and occurs outside the state.

1 While there are limits on extraterritorial application of state law to award relief to 2 injured plaintiffs, they are not infringed here. Along with important restrictions imposed by personal
3 jurisdiction and conflicts of law principles, the Supreme Court has established that courts cannot 4 punish conduct for violation of state tort law that occurs wholly outside the state and has no effect on
5 anyone within the state. See, e.g., BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 573
6 (reversing award of punitive damages in Alabama based on out-of-state conduct “that had no impact
7 on Alabama or its residents”). That rule is irrelevant here, however, because plaintiffs allege that 8 defendants’ conduct caused and continues to cause injury within California.

9 The Due Process Clause also does not bar any of the claims or relief sought here.
10 Defendants argue that plaintiffs attempt to impermissibly punish defendants with the intent to deter
11 lawful, out-of-state conduct rather than to advance “the State’s interest in protecting its own 12 consumers and its own economy.” BMW, 517 U.S. 572-73. This rule is not grounds for demurrer to 13 any claim asserted here. Plaintiffs contend that defendants’ conduct is in violation of California law.
14 A central purpose of the provisions of California law on which plaintiffs rely, and on which relief is 15 sought, is to protect California, its citizens, and its economy. See Boston, at 29-30 (refusing to find 16 that intent of remedies sought by city against these defendants is to punish defendants for out-of-17 state conduct rather than to protect city’s residents). Therefore, defendants’ reliance on the 18 constitution is entirely misplaced.

19 IV. THIS COURT HAS AUTHORITY TO ADJUDICATE PLAINTIFFS’ CLAIMS.

20 Judges are obligated to exercise jurisdiction over the cases before them unless they 21 are disqualified from doing so. Code Civ. Proc. § 170; see also Cahill v. Superior Court (1904) 194
22 Cal. 42, 46, 78 P. 467; Great West Life Assur. Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 271 Cal.App. 2d 124,
23 128; Burnett v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal.3d 865, 869; San Diego v. Municipal Court (1980) 102
24 Cal.App.3d 775, 778. The power to interpret laws and determine the rights and liabilities of parties 25 lies exclusively with the courts, and courts are only precluded from exercising power that is 26 specifically granted to another branch of government. Cal. Const. Art. 3, § 3; Marin Water & Power 27 Co. v. Railroad Comm. (1916) 171 Cal. 706, 711.

1           These principles are particularly instructive here because plaintiffs' claims are based 2 on statutes that specifically call on the courts to interpret them. For example, the UCA is 3 intentionally broad and designed to "permit tribunals to enjoin on-going wrongful business conduct 4 in whatever context such activity might occur." Cel-Tech, 20 Cal.4th at 181; see also Schnall v.
5 Hertz Corp. (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 1144, 1153. Recognizing the impossibility of identifying every 6 type of unlawful and unfair business practice prohibited under the statute, lawmakers have called on 7 the courts' interpretive skills to determine what behavior is prohibited under the Act by using 8 sweeping language in the statutes. Id., citing American Philatelic Soc. v. Claiborne (1935) 3 Cal.2d
9 689,698, 46 P.2d 135. In fact, trial courts have a mandatory duty to impose civil penalties in cases
10 involving violations of the UCA. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206 (courts "shall impose a civil penalty 11 for each violation of this chapter"); People v. Custom Craft Carpets, Inc. (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 12 676, 686 ("the court simply lacks any discretion under these sections to not impose a penalty").

13           Similarly, the Legislature has specifically authorized courts to determine what 14 constitutes a public nuisance. Civ. Code § 3491. City attorneys and county counsel are directed to 15 initiate civil actions to abate public nuisances. Code Civ. Proc. § 731; People v. McCue (1907) 150
16 Cal. 195, 88 P. 899. This court plainly has the authority, indeed the duty, to adjudicate plaintiffs' 17 claims.

18           In an ill-fated attempt to misrepresent the law regarding abstention, defendants argue
19 that this Court should ignore all authority to the contrary and decline jurisdiction over these claims 20 because doing so would amount to impermissible "microeconomic managing." Defs. Mem. at 4-5.
21 To support their argument, defendants cite cases that were not decided on abstention grounds and are 22 distinguishable on their facts.<sup>17</sup>

23
24 <sup>17</sup> None of the cases defendants cite even suggests that this Court should abstain from hearing
25 plaintiffs' claims. In each case, courts heard the claims and decided them on the merits. See, e.g.,
26 Lazar v. Hertz Corp. (1999) 69 Cal.App. 4th 1494 (plaintiffs did not state a cause of action under the 27 Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code §§ 51 and 52) where the challenged conduct, a minimum age
28 requirement to rent a car, was authorized by statute); Crusader Ins. Co. v. Scottsdale Ins. Co. (1997)
54 Cal.App.4th 121 (no private right to sue under the Insurance Code); Wolfe v. State Farm Fire &
Casualty Insurance Co. (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 554, 565 (refusing to offer earthquake insurance does not violate section 17200 because insurers are not obligated by the Insurance Code to offer such insurance); Grocers Ass'n, Inc. v. Bank of America (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 205, (overruling the lower courts judgment regarding bank fees because the fees were not unconscionable); Harris v. Capital

1 In fact, the abstention doctrine is entirely inapplicable here. Abstentions generally
2 involve federal courts declining jurisdiction to defer to a state court. See, e.g., Burford v. Sun Oil
3 Co. (1943) 319 U.S. 315. While federal and state courts can and should abstain from adjudicating
4 “political questions,” these cases are narrowly construed and must involve exclusively political 5 issues. See, e.g., Baker v. Carr (1962) 369 U.S. 186. This court is clearly competent to hear causes
6 of action arising from these state statutes and this litigation does not directly or exclusively involve 7 the political process.

8 Moreover, contrary to defendants’ arguments, the Legislature has in no way 9 immunized defendants from liability or otherwise indicated that the courts should not decide these 10 issues. While the Legislature may limit a court’s power by explicitly permitting certain conduct, it
11 has not done so here. See Cel-Tech, 20 Cal.4th at 163. These “safe harbor” laws must specifically 12 authorize the conduct in question to bar a suit. In any event, “the Legislature’s mere failure to 13 prohibit an activity does not prevent a court from finding it unfair.” Id. at 184. Defendants argue 14 that Civil Code section 1714.4 immunizes them from liability for public nuisance and violations of 15 sections 17200 and 17500. As demonstrated above, however, section 1714.4 applies exclusively to 16 products liability claims and is inapplicable here. See Part I.D., supra.

17
19 Growth Investors (1991) 52 Cal.3d 1142 (plaintiffs failed to state a cause of action for economic 20 discrimination under Unruh Act because the Act does not proscribe such discrimination); Holmes, 21 133 Cal.App.3d at 216 (retailers have no duty to prevent the sale of CO<sub>2</sub> cartridge to minors where 22 such activity is legal and CO<sub>2</sub> cartridge a may be used for a variety of purposes); Borjorquez, 62 Cal.App.3d at 930 (defendant was not liable for selling slingshot to a child where children are the intended users of slingshots). Any language defendants cite for the premise that this Court is not competent to adjudicate plaintiffs’ claims is dicta.

23 The firearms-related cases defendants cite are equally uninformative regarding abstention.
24 Defs. Mem. at 4. These cases involve negligence and product liability causes of action. See 25 McCarthy v. Sturm Ruger & Co. (S.D.N.Y. 1996) 916 F.Supp. 366 (rejecting plaintiffs’ negligence
26 cause of action because an extraordinary act broke the chain of causation and plaintiffs’ strict 27 liability claim because the qualities of the bullets complained of were a functional element of the 28 design and did not constitute a defect); Patterson v. Rohm Gesellschaft (1985) 608 F.Supp. 1206
(holding that a gunshot victim’s mother did not establish products liability claim under Texas law);
Forni v. Ferguson (N.Y. Supp. Ct. Aug. 2, 1996) No. 1329, 94/94 (rejecting victim’s negligence and product liability claims). Again, the language defendants cite is mere dicta. Moreover, McCarthy and Forni do not even preclude negligence claims against gun manufacturers under New York law, let alone bar claims under the California statutes asserted here. See Hamilton, 2000 WL 1160699, at *6-9.

1 Nor do plaintiffs' claims conflict with existing legislation regarding firearms. Most 2 of the firearms legislation is in the Penal Code. Courts have long recognized that compliance with a 3 penal code or regulatory statute does not preclude civil liability. See, e.g., Grand Trunk Railway
4 (1982) 144 U.S. 408, 12 S.Ct. 69; Hasson v. Ford Motor Co. (1982) 32 Cal.3d 388, 407, 185
5 Cal.Rptr. 654. In any event, plaintiffs do not seek to expand the criminal law, but ask the court to 6 apply existing civil law to defendants' conduct.

7 As set forth above, this case involves the issues of whether defendants' conduct
8 violates California law governing public nuisance, unfair competition and deceptive advertising.
9 Plaintiffs do not seek to compel or create legislation, but to apply existing law to defendants'
10 conduct. Defendants have not demonstrated why courts should depart from basic traditional 11 principles and refuse to adjudicate these claims.

12 The mere fact that the subject matter of the case is also the subject of legislation or 13 political controversy is certainly not ground for declining jurisdiction over a claim. See Roskind v.
14 Morgan Stanley Dean Witter Co. (2000) 80 Cal.App.4th 345 (Federal Securities Exchange Act does 15 not bar the court from adjudicating section 17200 claims in state court); Cel-Tech, 20 Cal.4th at 187;
16 see also Japan Whaling Ass'n v. American Cetacean Soc. (1986) 478 U.S. 221, 230 (adjudicating
17 claims that involved highly politicized subject matter); Klinghoffer v. S.N.C. Achille Lauro (2d Cir.
18 1991) 937 F.2d 44, 49 (same). Indeed, courts frequently adjudicate claims that are the subject of 19 legislation or political debate. The very fact that courts must interpret and apply statutory and 20 common law necessitates adjudication of claims based in statute and implicating controversial
21 matters. Accordingly, state and federal courts have properly grappled with controversial issues such 22 as tobacco, medicine, schools, employment, antitrust and public safety. Many courts are properly
23 adjudicating similar claims against the firearms industry across the nation. See Boston, at 30-32;
24 Archer, at 8-13; White, 97 F. Supp. 2d at 829; Ceriale. This case is no exception. Plaintiffs have 25 properly asked this Court to determine the rights and civil liabilities of the parties under state law, 26 and adjudicating these claims is entirely appropriate.

1 V. PLAINTIFFS' REQUEST FOR RESTITUTION AND DISGORGEMENT IS 2 SUPPORTED BY LAW AND SHOULD NOT BE STRICKEN

3 Defendants also move to strike plaintiffs' claims for restitution and disgorgement of 4 wrongfully obtained monies pursuant to Business & Professions Code sections 17203 and 17535.
5 Motions to strike may only be granted when requests for relief are entirely unsupported by the 6 allegations of the complaint. Code Civ. Proc. § 431.10. Since restitution and disgorgement are both 7 expressly authorized as remedies under the UCA, defendants' motion to strike should be denied.

8 A. Plaintiffs' Claim for Restitution Under the UCA Is Appropriate.

9 As set forth in Part II of this opposition, plaintiffs have sufficiently stated a cause of 10 action for unlawful business practices and false and misleading advertising under the UCA.
11 Section 17203 of the Business and Professions Code expressly grants this Court the power "to 12 restore to any person" all funds unfairly obtained by defendants as a result of their violations of the 13 UCA.<sup>18</sup> Defendants' effort to restrict the nature and extent of remedies available under the UCA is 14 inappropriate, particularly at the pleadings stage. Accordingly, their motion to strike must fail.

15 B. Plaintiffs' Claim for Disgorgement of Profits Should Be Upheld.

16 Section 17203 also authorizes this Court to "make such orders or judgments . . . as 17 may be necessary to prevent the use or employment by any person of any practice which constitutes 18 unfair competition . . . ." California courts have repeatedly recognized that this section authorizes 19 courts to order complete disgorgement of all profits obtained in violation of the UCA, in order to 20 deter future violations of the Act. See, e.g., Fletcher v. Security Pacific Nat'l Bank (1979) 23 Cal.3d 21 442, 451 (court authorized to order a defendant to disgorge all money obtained through illegal
22 practices); Bank of the West v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.4th 1254, 1267 (disgorgement orders are 23 appropriate "to deter future violations of the unfair trade practice statute and to foreclose retention by 24 the violator of its ill-gotten gains").

25
26 <sup>18</sup> Defendants misconstrue plaintiffs' claim for restitution as one seeking damages for law 27 enforcement costs, medical costs, emergency response costs and expenses for loss of life and 28 personal injury resulting from defendants' conduct. Plaintiffs in fact do not seek such relief.
Instead, plaintiffs simply seek to recover "restitution for the public for all funds unfairly obtained by defendants as a result of their violation of Business and Professions Code §17200 et seq." LA City ¶ 166.

1 Defendants argue that the recent decision in Kraus v. Trinity Management Services,
2 Inc., 23 Cal.4th 116, implicitly overruled this long-established rule. In fact, Kraus merely holds that 3 disgorgement of profits into a fluid recovery fund is not an appropriate remedy in a private 4 representative action, unless the private plaintiff certifies a class. Id. at 121. This narrow holding 5 provides no comfort to defendants in this case for four reasons.

6 First, Kraus explicitly confirms that disgorgement remains an available remedy under 7 the UCA in appropriate cases. The Kraus Court stated, “§17203 grants the courts the power to make 8 orders necessary to prevent the use of unfair business practices. Such orders may encompass 9 broader restitutionary relief, including disgorgement of all money so obtained, even when it may not 10 be possible to restore all of that money to direct victims of the practice.” Id. at 129 (emphasis 11 added). “Orders for disgorgement may have deterrent force beyond that of injunctions coupled with 12 restitutionary orders and in some cases might therefore be deemed necessary to prevent the use . . .
13 of any practice which constitutes unfair competition.” Id. at 135. Kraus merely dealt with the 14 question of how to distribute disgorged funds in private representative actions.

15 Second, although the Kraus court rejected disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund on 16 the facts of that case, it also rejected the notion that “defendants may retain the funds improperly 17 taken” as a result of UCA violations. Id. at 138. The Court stated that, on remand, the trial court 18 should use the disgorged funds “to ensure that all reasonable means are used to comply with the 19 Court’s directives.” Id. Similarly, the Court here can order defendants to use disgorged funds to 20 comply with the mandatory injunctive relief requested by plaintiffs. Such a disgorgement order 21 would not even raise the issue of fluid recovery.

22 Third, the Supreme Court repeatedly limited the scope of its holding in Kraus to 23 private representative actions. Nowhere in the opinion did the Court limit the use of fluid recovery 24 funds in actions brought by public officials. Instead, the Supreme Court took pains to limit its 25 decision to the issue of “whether in an action that is not certified as a class action, but is brought on 26 behalf of absent persons by a private party under the [UCA], the court may order disgorgement into 27 a fluid recovery fund.” Id. at 121 (emphasis added). The Court specifically excluded public actions 28 from any limitation on the remedy of disgorgement. See id. at 126 n.10.

1 Finally, the Kraus opinion does not prevent even private plaintiffs from obtaining 2 fluid recoveries. It merely concludes that, pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 384, private 3 plaintiffs must invoke class action procedures to obtain fluid recoveries on behalf of non-parties.
4 This rationale does not apply to public prosecutors, who traditionally represent the interest of the 5 general public without complying with class certification procedures.

6 The explicit availability of disgorgement as a remedy in UCA actions dictates that 7 defendants' motion to strike be denied. Contrary to defendants' assertions, plaintiffs are not required
8 at the demurrer stage to identify the precise amount of defendants' ill-gotten gains or to specify
9 exactly how disgorged funds should be used. Whether or not the plaintiffs at this point have 10 calculated a "measurable amount that the defendants have obtained by their allegedly unfair
11 practices" is immaterial.<sup>19</sup> See Defs. Mem. at 34. Those are issues for the trial court to address once 12 liability under the UCA has been established. At this juncture, all plaintiffs must show to survive a 13 motion to strike is that their prayer for relief is supported by the cause of action alleged. Code Civ.
14 Proc. §§ 431.10, 436. This they have easily done.

18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25 <sup>19</sup> Defendants cite Day for the proposition that in order to be entitled to disgorgement, 26 plaintiffs, at the motion to strike stage, must identify a measurable amount of profits to be disgorged.
27 Day v. AT&T Corp. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 325. Day involved the "filed rate" doctrine, however, 28 and is not relevant here. In Day, the court concluded that disgorgement was not appropriate because plaintiffs received the full benefit of their phone cards, despite defendants' misleading statements.
Moreover, any monetary recovery by plaintiffs would amount to a rebate in violation of the "filed rate" doctrine. Here, no independent prohibition, such as the "filed rate" doctrine, limits or bars the amount of funds to be disgorged. Accordingly, plaintiffs need only show that defendants violated the UCA to trigger the availability of disgorgement.

1 VI. CONCLUSION

2 For all the foregoing reasons, plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court overrule the 3 demurrer in its entirety, and deny defendants' motion to strike.

4 Respectfully submitted,
