As was mentioned in his Motion To Continue Response Date, after plaintiff was served with defendant's Motion to Dismiss it was discovered that Paragraph 15 of the Complaint contained inaccurate information concerning the events of early June, 2009. When documentary materials were obtained supporting the true events of that time, notice was promptly transmitted to counsel for the 10 defendant as well as copies of the documents. The import of this 11 new information has a significant impact on the Standing and 12 Ripeness arguments of the Motion to Dismiss; and, as a consequence of these events, the Response and Hearing dates of the Motion to 14 Dismiss were continued.

On June $8^{\rm th}$, 2009, plaintiff attempted to purchase firearms from 16 Ojai Valley Surplus and was rejected because of his 1997 conviction 17 for domestic abuse. Given this, he has standing to pursue the 18 within matter and the matter is ripe because of the personal injury 19 he has suffered.

The crux of the matter is whether, given the set-aside of that conviction pursuant to California Penal Code $1203.4,1 [hereafter

 $^{^{1}}$ California Penal Code Section 1203.4: "(a) In any case in which a defendant has fulfilled the conditions of probation for the entire period of probation, or has been discharged prior to the termination of the period of probation, or in any other case in which a court, in its discretion and the interests of justice, determines that a defendant should be granted the relief available under this section, the defendant shall, at any time after the 26 termination of the period of probation, if he or she is not then serving a sentence for any offense, on probation for any offense, or charged with the commission of any offense, be permitted by the court to withdraw his or her plea of guilty or plea of nolo contendere and enter a plea of not guilty; or, 281 if he or she has been convicted after a plea of not guilty, the court shall set aside the verdict of guilty; and, in either case, the court shall thereupon

The defense relies exclusively on holding in the recent Ninth Circuit case of Jennings v. Mukasey, 511 F.3d 894 (9th Cir. 2007) [hereafter "Jennings".] in support of their contention that plaintiff's §1203.4 set-aside of his California misdemeanor domestic violence does not expunge his conviction for the purposes $10 \mid \text{of } $922(q)(9)$.

Plaintiff contends that because the Jennings court failed to 12 observe and follow binding United States Supreme Court precedent it 13 used the wrong criteria by which to evaluate $1203.4 and reached a 14 demonstrably wrong result.

Further, their misreading of applicable precedent infected

Dismissal of an accusation or information pursuant to this section does not permit a person to own, possess, or have in his or her custody or control any firearm or prevent his or her conviction under Section 12021. ... "

 $^{^3}$ 18 U.S.C. $922(g)(9): "It shall be unlawful for any person - who has been convicted in any court of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence [hereafter, "MCDV"], to ship or transport in interstate or foreign commerce, or possess in or affecting commerce, any firearm or ammunition; or to receive any firearm or ammunition which has been shipped or transported in interstate or foreign commerce."

their analysis of another Ninth Circuit case, United States v. Laskie, 258 F.3d 1047 (9th Cir. 2001), which addresses a significant, and we believe, compelling issue concerning the effect of a §1203.4

set-aside⁴ upon federal firearms law.

For these, and the resolution of additional topics mentioned herein, it is urged that the Motion To Dismiss be denied.

⁴ For the purposes of this Response, plaintiff uses the words "expungement," "dismissal" and "set-aside" almost interchangeably, given that we believe there is no issue presented concerning the import of these words upon the issues raised herein.

THIS CASE PRESENTS A LIVE CONTROVERSY WHICH THIS COURT SHOULD RESOLVE.

A. Standing

On June 8^{th} , 2009, plaintiff attended a Ventura County, California gun show and examined firearms at the booth of Ojai Valley Surplus, [hereafter "Ojai".] a federally-licensed firearms dealer. Plaintiff fully and honestly completed a "Dealer's Record of Sale of Firearm ["DROS"]," and paid for the purchase of two firearms and two federally-mandated firearm transfer fees (one for each weapon) subject to the mandatory 10-day waiting period before he could physically obtain either weapon. (Attached hereto is Exhibit 4, a copy the DROS form, and incorporated by reference as though fully set forth at this place.)

The information on the DROS form was immediately transmitted to 16 | the Bureau of Firearms of the Division of Law Enforcement of the California Department of Justice. [hereafter "Bureau" or "DOJ".] On 18 the same date the Bureau sent Ojai a letter stating, inter-alia, that plaintiff "is a person not eligible to posses (sic) a firearm." (Attached hereto is Exhibit 5, a copy of said June 8, 2009, DOJ letter, and incorporated by reference as though fully set forth at this place.) Ojai refunded the monies paid and plaintiff never obtained those weapons.

On August 25^{th} , 2010, in response to an inquiry from plaintiff's counsel, the Bureau sent plaintiff a letter explaining why his attempted firearms purchase had been rejected. The letter states that the DOJ has "...identified a record in a state or federal database which indicates that you are prohibited by state and/or

1 | federal law from purchasing or possessing firearms." The specific reason given is "Misdemeanor domestic violence convictions (273.5PC, 243(E)(1)PC Convictions over 10 years old)-Federal Brady Act, effected November 30, 1998." (Attached hereto is Exhibit 6, a copy of said August 25, 2010, DOJ letter, and incorporated by reference as though fully set forth at this place.)

Defendant's standing argument is flawed because it relied on the inadvertent misinformation contained in Paragraph 15 of the complaint. We acknowledge that a plaintiff must demonstrate an "injury in fact" to establish "a case or controversy" within the 11 meaning of Article III, and that that "injury in fact" must be 12 concrete and not conjectural. Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 13 U.S. 555, 560 (1992). But, whereas defendant cites Lujan only as 14 black-letter law for its' holding, plaintiff prefers to cite the 15 Lujan case for its' specific enunciation of the three elements of standing:

> "Over the years, our cases have established that the irreducible constitutional minimum of standing contains three elements. First, the plaintiff must have suffered an 'injury in fact'-an invasion of a legally protected interest which is concrete (a) particularized,..., and (b) "actual or imminent, `conjectural' or 'hypothetical,' not there must be a causal connection between the injury and the conduct complained of-the injury has to be 'fairly... trace[able] to the challenged action of the defendant, and not... th[e] result [of] the independent action of some third party not before the court.' Third, it must be 'likely,' as opposed to merely 'speculative, that the injury will be 'redressed by a favorable decision.'" Lujan, supra, at 560-561. (Cases and citations omitted.)

Taking these elements in order: Mr. Baker has suffered an "injury in fact;" defendant's refusal to allow him to enjoy his Second Amendment rights. Second, that injury is a direct result of his placement upon a list of persons restricted from enjoying their Second Amendment rights pursuant to $922(g)(9). Third, the removal of plaintiff's name from the list of proscribed individuals pursuant to the Order of this court will fully redress plaintiff's injury.

In light of the above, it is beyond dispute that plaintiff attempted to purchase two firearms from Ojai, that he was denied the purchase of those firearms pursuant to federal law and that the within Complaint represents his claim that he was unlawfully denied a firearm. There is no conjecture as to the events of June, 2009, nor as to plaintiff's standing to sue.

B. Ripeness

б

11 |

Plaintiff agrees with defendant that the issue of "Ripeness" prevents "premature adjudication," that is, complaints brought involving no "injury in fact." Plaintiff has sustained an injury in fact because the government has placed his name upon the list of person's prohibited from purchasing firearms pursuant to $922(g)(9) because of his earlier conviction of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence [hereafter: "MCDV."] when that conviction has been setaside pursuant to state law with no express provision that the individual may not ship, transport, possess or receive firearms."

These events took place in the past and our desired relief is not contingent upon future events. The allegations and proof of those allegations are to be found in Exhibits 4, 5, and 6. He asserted his Second Amendment rights when he attempted to purchase firearms.

The government argues that the defendant has not notified Mr. Baker that he will be prosecuted for unlawful possession or use of a firearm. (Motion to Dismiss [hereafter "MOD"], Pg. 4.) We are unaware of any requirement that the government affirmatively notify all who fall with the reach of $922(g)(9), but a letter from the California DOJ to one having been refused the purchase of two firearms because that person is prohibited from possessing a firearm is fairly good notice that if he/she is found by law enforcement to possess a firearm, he/she will be prosecuted.

Mr. Baker has demonstrated his fealty to the law by coming to this court to proclaim his rights rather than obtain a firearm through "other" means, thus rendering himself a criminal.

He has asserted and continues to assert his rights. His case is ripe for adjudication.

THE WITHIN COMPLAINT SUCCESSFULLY STATES A CLAIM UPON II WHICH RELIEF SHOULD BE GRANTED.

The resolution of this matter turns upon an understanding of the manner in which our High Court has addressed the interplay of state expungement statutes and federal firearms law, the two primary federal statutes involved in this matter, the specific content of the two primary California set-aside and firearms laws involved in this matter, a thorough analysis of why the Jennings decision is flawed and not worthy of precedential merit, why this court should follow the Ninth Circuit Laskie case, and the two recent landmark decisions from the United States Supreme Court concerning the Second Amendment. Plaintiff believes that a fair and equitable analysis of 14 these topics will result in his obtaining a favorable ruling in this case.

B. The Treatment of State Expungement Laws By the United States Supreme Court.

In 1983, the United States Supreme Court decided Dickerson v. New Banner Institute, 460 U.S. 120 (1983), evidencing a most grudging treatment of state expungement laws. Mr. Justice Blackmun decried the range of topics presented by the panoply of the expungement laws of the states and sneeringly wrote that they amounted to "nothing less than a national patchwork." (Dickerson, at 123.)

> "Finally, a rule that would give effect to expunctions under varying state statutes would seriously hamper effective enforcement of Title IV. Over half the States have enacted one or statutes that may be classified expunction provisions that attempt to conceal prior convictions or to remove some of their collateral or residual effects. These statutes differ, however, in almost every particular. Some are applicable only to young offenders, ..., Some are available only to persons convicted of certain offenses, ...; others, however, permit expunction of a conviction for any crime including murder, Some are confined to first offenders,.... Some are discretionary, while others provide for expunction under certain circumstances, The statutes vary in the language employed to describe what they do. Some speak of expunging the conviction, others of "sealing" the file or of causing the dismissal of the charge. The statutes also differ in their actual effect. Some are absolute; others are limited. Only a minority address questions such as whether the expunged conviction may be considered sentencing for a subsequent offense or in setting bail on a later charge, or whether the expunged conviction may be used for impeachment purposes, or whether the convict may deny the fact of his conviction. Some statutes, too, clearly were not meant to prevent use of the conviction in a subsequent prosecution." (Dickerson, at 121) (cases and citations omitted.)

Mr. Justice Blackmun closed by seemingly saying that the federal judiciary couldn't be bothered with deciphering the expungement laws of the 50 states because Congress surely did not intend for that to occur:

".... In short, the record of a conviction expunged under Iowa law is not expunged completely.

Under the decision below, perplexing problems would confront those required to enforce federal gun control laws as well as those bound by their provisions. Because, as we have noted, Title IV [of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, Stat.226, amended by the Gun Control Act of 1968, 82 Stat. 1214, now appearing as 18 U.S.C. §921, et. seq.] 'is a carefully constructed package of gun control legislation, 'Scarborough v. United States, 431 U. S., at 570, Congress, in framing it, took pains to avoid the very problems that the Court of Appeals' decision inevitably would create, such as individualized federal treatment of every expunction law. Congress used unambiguous language in attaching gun control disabilities to any person "who has been convicted" of a qualifying offense. We give full effect to that language." (Dickerson, at 122.)

It only took Congress three years to prove that Mr. Justice Blackmun had misread their intentions. In May, 1986, Congress passed Public Law (P.L.) No. 99-308, The Firearms Owners' Protection Act. Section 101(5) of P.L. 99-308 reverses Dickerson's rationale.

In Caron v. United States, 524 U.S. 308 (1998), the High Court fully recognized the intent of Congress in repudiating the words of Mr. Justice Blackmun:

".... Until 1986, federal law alone determined whether a state conviction counted, regardless of whether the State had expunged the conviction. Dickerson v. New Banner Institute, Inc., 460 U. S. 103, 119-122 (1983). Congress modified this aspect of Dickerson by adopting the following language:

"What constitutes a conviction of such a crime shall be determined in accordance with the law of jurisdiction in which the proceedings were held. Any conviction which has been expunged, or set aside or for which a person has been pardoned or has had civil rights restored shall not be considered a conviction for purposes of this chapter, unless such pardon, expungement, or restoration of civil rights expressly provides that the person may not transport, possess, or receive firearms." § 921(a)(20)." Caron, at 312-313.) (emphasis added)

The import of the Caron recognition that Congress fully intended that the expungement law(s) of each state be individually interpreted by the federal courts is of inestimable importance in the adjudication of our case. Congress instructed us that the expungement law of one state, in terms of both procedural and substantive elements, is to be interpreted sui generis, and not in comparison with the expungement law of another state or states. For instance, if the issue to be addressed by a federal court concerns whether an expunged "State X" conviction may be plead and proven as a prior conviction in that state, the topic of whether the relief afforded by that expungement statute is discretionary with the court or automatically granted has no relevance to the case at bar.

There is no "Model Penal Code Expungement Statute" and federal courts are not free to impose their perceived shortcomings upon a state set-aside statute and, if they rule that statute wanting as to one or more of those "shortcomings," that ruling does not pass muster and is not worthy of respect from other judges or tribunals analyzing other state set-aside statutes.

There are only three issues which should be addressed in our case: first, does California have an expungement or set-aside statute; second, was Mr. Baker properly granted relief under that statute; and third, does the law itself or the document affording him the relief promised by that statute contain an express provision that he may not "ship, transport, possess or receive firearms?" (§921(33)(B)(ii.)

C. 18 U.S.C. §922(G)(9) and 18 U.S.C. §921(33)(B)(ii)

$922(g)(9) is a most straightforward and precise statute: anyone who has been convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence is forever barred from shipping, transporting in interstate or foreign commerce, or possessing in or affecting commerce, any firearm or ammunition; or to receive any firearm or ammunition which 27 has been shipped or transported in interstate or foreign commerce. Plaintiff has been convicted of such a crime and is, unless in

1 possession of an Order granting him the relief sought herein, forever barred. The foremost issue we face is whether he now stands convicted of that offense for the purposes of §922(g)(9).

We respectfully submit that that conviction no longer stands because, pursuant to requirements of $921(33)(B)(ii), his 1997 conviction has been "expunged or set aside" pursuant to the laws of the State of California and neither the statute itself nor the document setting aside that conviction contain any wording or implication that Mr. Baker may not "ship, transport, possess or 10 receive firearms." A review of Exhibit 1 clearly demonstrates the absence of such language from the instrument denoting the set-aside of the earlier conviction. The question now becomes: do any other California statutes have the same import as "he may not ship, transport, possess or receive firearms?"

D. California Penal Code §§1203.4 And 12021(c)

The California set-aside statute we consider, $1203.4, contains a clause pertinent to our discussion: "Dismissal of an accusation or information pursuant to this section does not permit a person to own, possess, or have in his or her custody or control any firearm or prevent his or her conviction under Section 12021." How does this clause affect, if at all, this case?

One of the conditions of probation imposed upon Mr. Baker during his October 20th, 1997 sentencing hearing was: "Not own, possess, or have access to any firearm or dangerous weapon." (Attached hereto is Exhibit 7, Pages 4 through 6 of the complete Minute Order of his misdemeanor conviction, and incorporated by reference as though fully set forth at this place.) Another condition was: "Obey all laws city, county, state and federal."

However, one convicted of violating California Penal Code §273.5 (the California domestic abuse statute) is automatically subject to a ten-year ban on firearm possession pursuant to California Penal Code $12021(c) [hereafter "$12021(c)"]: "..., any person who has been convicted of a misdemeanor violation of Section ... 273.5, ..., and who, within 10 years of conviction owns, purchases, receives, or has in his or her possession or under his or her custody or control, any firearm is guilty of a public offense, which shall be punishable"

Plaintiff contends that neither the condition of probation concerning firearms nor $12021(c) are express provisions fitting the "unless" clause of $922(g)(9). The condition that Mr. Baker not possess firearms during the term of his probation obviously expired at the conclusion of his probationary term.

The specific clause of $1203.4 mentioning $12021 must be understood to inform the probationer that the successful completion of probation and the elimination of the probationary ban on firearm provision does not render his or her susceptibility to prosecution under §12021(c) nugatory; in this sense, the probationary term that Mr. Baker obey "all laws ... state and federal" compelled him to 21 forsake any connection with firearms during the ten years. Which he did.

Conclusive evidence of this reading is provided by the ruling of Ventura County Superior Court Judge Edward Brodie rendered during the hearing on plaintiff's March $11^{\rm th}$, 2010, to restore Mr. Baker's Second Amendment right to own and possess a firearm. (Please see Exhibit 2.) Despite numerous requests by counsel to rule that plaintiff could fully enjoy his Second Amendment rights under both state and federal law, Judge Brodie avoided any appearance of making a ruling on federal law as a moth avoids a flame. The three-page transcript is an amalgam of counsel repeatedly asking for relief from federal law and the Judge repeating his theme first rendered on the first page of the hearing: "He's asking me to somehow decide what federal law is. That's not my job." Judge Brodie was correct; it was not his job, it is the job of this court. But what the Judge did do is of paramount significance as concerns the topic of this section of the Response: he ordered that plaintiff "...is entitled to purchase, own and possess firearms consistent with the laws of the State of California." (Exhibit 3.)

Plaintiff's ten-year ban on firearm possession ended on the ten year anniversary of his sentencing, October 20th, 2007; Judge Brodie recognized the fact that as of that date, plaintiff could possess any firearm any citizen of the State of California could legally possess.

There was never any express provision that plaintiff could not "ship, transport, possess or receive firearms" in the sense that said preclusion is a life-time ban on such; everyone on probation in California is ordered to obey all laws and §12021(c), like laws prohibiting driving under the influence, must be obeyed.

E. Jennings v. Mukasey, 511 F.3d 894 (9th Cir. 2007).

The defense has based the entirety of their case on Jennings v. Mukasey and, given the holding of the case, their stance is understandable. It is also wrong.

The Jennings court masterfully dissected §1203.4 listing all of its deficiencies and shortcomings and thereafter concluded: "..., 28 although Jennings obtained relief under 1203.4 by the 1999 State

1 court order, that relief did not expunge his conviction for purposes of 18 U.S.C. §922(g)(9). (Jennings, at 899.) Nowhere in the opinion is there any mention of Dickerson (supra) or Caron (supra) and because of their absence, the Jennings opinion is worthless as precedent because they measured $1203.4 by a yardstick which had been broken 21 years earlier.

Example #1: The Jennings court cited People v. Frawley, Cal.App.4th 784, 790-91 (2000), for the proposition that the relief provided by $1203.4 does not purport to render a conviction a "legal 10 nullity." (at 898.) Plaintiff inquires: where is the precedent that says a state expungement statute must render a conviction a "legal nullity?" Dickerson at pg. 121, says: "Some [expungement] statutes,..., clearly were not meant to prevent use of conviction in a subsequent prosecution." Is this not the same as saying that some statutes do not render the conviction a "legal nullity?" And we know that Congress said Dickerson was wrong; if a state says the relief offered by its' expungement statute "expunges" 18 or "sets-aside" an MCDV conviction, that conviction is eradicated 19 for the purposes of 922(g)(9).

Example #2: The court utilized the definition of "expunge" found in United States v. Hayden, 255 F.3d 768, 771 (9th Cir. 2001), which held that a $1203.4 expungement does not meet the definition of "expungement" for the purposes of the Federal Sentencing Guidelines. Mr. Jennings challenged the denial of his application for the renewal of is federal firearms license ("ffl") by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms on the ground that his prior misdemeanor violence domestic conviction disqualified him for consideration under $922(g)(9). How is the definition

"expungement" for federal sentencing purposes in any way germane to Mr. Jennings' quest for an ffl?

Example #3: The Jennings court cited United States v. Tankersley, 269 F.Supp. 2d 1188 (D. Neb. 2003) which held that even though the defendant therein "...sought and obtained a withdrawal of guilty plea and a section 1203.4 dismissal of her 1998 burglary conviction, the 1998 burglary remains a prior felony which may be pleaded and proved" for purposes of 18 U.S.C. §922(g)(9)." (at 899.)

True, but Mr. Jennings was challenging the non-renewal of his ffl, he was not arguing that his prior MCDV conviction could not be used in a mythical future criminal prosecution.

The Jennings court fashioned their own criteria whereby every irrelevant aspect of $1203.4 was examined and found wanting; all the while shielding their eyes from the one unmistakable fact shining like a beacon in the night: if a California court dismisses or expunges or sets-aside a prior MCDV conviction pursuant to $1203.4, that earlier conviction is a legal nullity for the purposes of 18 | §922(g)(9).

Because of the abject failure of the Jennings court to follow the federal statute specifically enacted to remedy the crabbed handling of state expungement statutes vis-a-vis federal firearm laws exemplified in Dickerson, and its failure to acknowledge the holding in United States v. Caron that Dickerson was no longer good law, plaintiff submits that Jennings has no precedential value and should not be followed.

18 U.S.C. Section 922(g)(1): "It shall be unlawful for any person - who has been convicted in any court of, a crime punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year; to ship or transport in interstate or foreign commerce, or possess in or affecting commerce, any firearm or ammunition; or to receive any firearm or ammunition which has been shipped or transported in interstate or foreign commerce."

18 U.S.C. Section 921(a)(20): "The term "crime punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year" does not include-

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTION TO DISMISS COMPLAINT - 18 -

⁽A) any Federal or State offenses pertaining to antitrust violations, unfair trade practices, restraints of trade, or other similar offenses relating to the regulation of business practices, or

⁽B) any State offense classified by the laws of the State as a misdemeanor and punishable by a term of imprisonment of two years or less.

What constitutes a conviction of such a crime shall be determined in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction in which the proceedings were held. Any conviction which has been expunged, or set aside or for which a person has been pardoned or has had civil rights restored shall not be considered a conviction for purposes of this chapter, unless such pardon, expungement, or restoration of civil rights expressly provides that the person may not ship, transport, possess, or 28 receive firearms."

state set-aside statutes and could not be used as predicate offenses under federal firearms law. Both appeals were successful.

Mr. Herron had been convicted of second degree burglary in Washington and eventually discharged from custody. Upon completion of his parole he received a "Certificate and Order of Discharge" stating that his civil rights, lost by reason of conviction, were restored. That document said nothing about firearms. A laterobtained search warrant revealed firearms leading to a federal indictment charging $922(g)(1). (Herron, at 340-341.)

The Herron court specified the basis of its' decision:

"Herron's civil rights were restored by the certificate. That means he could not be guilty of the crime unless the exception to the exception, "unless such ... restoration of civil rights expressly provides that the person may not ship, transport, possess, or receive firearms," applied. It does not. The document restoring Herron's civil rights is quoted in full above, and does not expressly provide for firearms restrictions. That should be the end of the case."

It was. They further elaborated on this point:

"The federal statute tells us what to read to look for qualifications on a felon's restoration of civil rights. Congress has told us to read "such ... restoration." Herron's restoration is his certificate. The certificate does not contain the gun restriction denoted in the federal statute, or any other qualifications which would make the restoration less than substantial." Herron, at 341-342.)

Herron instructs us to look to wording of the document conferring relief; if that document is silent concerning firearms, then that document and the relief it represents contains no "express provision" forbidding the later possession of firearms.

Mr. Laskie also stood convicted of being a felon in possession of a firearm in violation of $922(g)(1). He appealed on the grounds that his prior Nevada felony state conviction had been "set-aside" for the purposes of $921(a)(20) by an "honorable discharge" he received from a Nevada court after his completion of probation. The court agreed. (Laskie, at 1048-1049.)

Citing Caron v. United States, supra, the court analyzed $921(a)(20) at page 1049:

"As that definition makes clear, a conviction that has been expunged or set aside, or for which a felon has been pardoned or has had civil rights restored, cannot serve as the predicate for a conviction under § 922(g)(1), unless the convicting jurisdiction expressly has forbidden the defendant to possess firearms." Caron v. United States, 524 U.S. 308, 313 (1998)

The court found in favor of Mr. Laskie because the instrument of his relief contained no express provision concerning his right to possess firearms. (Laskie, at 1053.)

It must be noted that, as a California misdemeanant, none of plaintiff's civil rights (the rights to vote, hold office or sit on a jury [Caron v. United States, supra, at 922]) could be or were taken from him upon his conviction; thus, the Ventura County Superior Court had no "rights" to restore under $1203.4.

The Jennings v. Mukasey court addressed Laskie and, continuing in the vein previously mentioned, compared the California and Nevada set-aside statutes and wrongly distinguished the Laskie decision. Finding that Mr. Jennings California $1203.4 set-aside did not "... purport to restore his civil rights, in fact, it is qualified and notes he that must disclose his conviction in certain circumstances," they held that, "unlike Laskie, he has not been 'released from all penalties and disabilities resulting from the offense or crime of which he has been convicted." (at 901)

Once more, Jennings used the wrong criteria; the terms employed by the different state set-aside statutes need not be congruent; each stands or falls on its own vis-a-vis the issue before this court. The set-aside Order obtained by plaintiff under §1203.4 is absolutely silent in all respects concerning firearms and did as much for him (and Mr. Jennings) and the Washington and Nevada statutes and relief documents thereunder did for Herron and Laskie.

G. Recent United States Supreme Court Decisions Concerning The Second Amendment and the Jennings Decision

Within the past few years our High Court has handed down two landmark rulings expanding the rights of the individual to possess firearms. First, in District of Columbia v. Heller (554 U.S. _____ (2008)) they held that the Second Amendment protects the right to keep and bear arms for the purpose of self-defense. And just months ago, in McDonald v. City of Chicago (561 U.S. ____ (2010), they held that the rights under the Second Amendment are fully applicable to the states.

While neither case specifically addresses the issues brought forth herein, they evidence a growing acceptance and expansion of the right to bear arms. Plaintiff submits that the now-fundamental right to keep and bear arms in the Second Amendment should not be lost to a set-aside state misdemeanor conviction. In this sense, the Jennings decision is an anomaly and not worthy of judicial respect: it falls because it failed to follow earlier High Court precedent, it falls because it does not accord proper value to set-aside Orders issued under $1203.4, and it falls because, although it is of recent vintage, it is an anachronism, reflecting yesterdays grudging attitude toward firearm possession.

CONCLUSION

Until the events giving rise to his 1997 conviction and ever since that date, Eugene Evan Baker has been a law-abiding citizen, never otherwise in trouble with the law.

He fulfilled all of the conditions of probation imposed upon him by the Ventura County Superior Court and had his 1997 conviction set aside by Order of that court under California Penal Code $1203.4. That Order, Exhibit 1 herein, is silent concerning the issue of the right to possess firearms.

As of October, 2007, no California laws barred his possession of firearms. On June 8th, 2009, he learned that because he had been convicted in a state court of a crime of domestic violence, he was also subject to federal firearm law and the specific statute in question, 18 U.S.C. $922(g)(9), forever bans anyone convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence from possessing a firearm. He later discovered that that same set of federal laws concerning firearm possession contains one statute potentially exempting him from the harsh consequences of $922(g)(9). That statute, 18 U.S.C. $921(33)(B)(ii), enables one who has been so convicted but who has obtained an Order of relief under the set-aside legislation of the state of conviction, to escape the rigors of $922(g)(9) "unless the pardon, expungement, or restoration of civil rights, expressly provides that the person may not ship, transport, possess, or receive firearms."

As stated above, the Order obtained by Mr. Baker is silent concerning firearms; therefore, inasmuch as plaintiff is neither expressly or inferentially forbidden to possess firearms, his setaside Order fits precisely within the provisions of §921(33)(B)(ii) and his 1997 state conviction may not be referenced insofar as $922(g)(9) is concerned.

Mr. Baker voluntarily comes before this court seeking the removal of his name from any and all computers, lists, data bases, and like repositories of information maintained by defendant concerning those suspected of being ineligible to possess a firearm under $922(g)(9). He further desires a Declaration from this court stating that he is free to exercise his rights under the Second Amendment and possess firearms without fear of arrest or prosecution by any and all law enforcement personnel under Defendant's direct or indirect control or supervision.

He submits that he has successfully shouldered his burden and has earned the relief sought.

1	VENTURA, CALIFORNIA; THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 2010
2	A.M. SESSION
3	000
4	MS. LYYTIKAINEN: Good morning, your Honor. Would
5	the Court please call the Eugene Baker matter. Lisa
6	Lyytikainen on behalf of the People.
7	MR. ADLER: Frank S. Adler, A-d-l-e-r, on behalf of
8	Mr. Baker, your Honor.
9	THE COURT: I didn't get a response from the People.
10	Did you file one?
11	MS. LYYTIKAINEN: I did not, your Honor. I received
12	this just a couple of days ago and my only argument to the 13	Court is going to be this Court's not the proper venue for
14	this matter to be heard.
15	THE COURT: You took the words right out of my
16	mouth. He's asking me to somehow decide what federal law
17	is. That's not my job.
18	MR. ADLER: Your Honor, if I may be heard, please.
19	THE COURT: You may, but it's clear that's what you
20	want me to do. He is under no proscription against
21	firearms in the State of California. He is under federal
22	law, or not, depending on what some district court says.
23	MR. ADLER: Your Honor, this is the court where the
24	prosecution was brought.
25	THE COURT: Matters not.
26	MR. ADLER: This is the court that took my client's
27	gun rights away pursuant to 12021(c).
8	THE COURT: Pursuant to state law.

- MR. ADLER: Pursuant to state law, that is correct,
- 2 your Honor. There is no case or controversy pending in any
- 3 federal jurisdiction involving my client. And I believe
- 4 that as long as this court had jurisdiction over the
- 5 initial prosecution, it can handle all matters relating to
- 6 that prosecution, including the restoration of my client's
- 7 gun rights.
- 8 THE COURT: I disagree.
- 9 MR. ADLER: California state courts both interpret
- 10 and apply federal law every day and that's all we are
- 11 asking to do. We are not even asking the Court to
- 12 interpret the law. The law is quite clear on its face.
- And all we are asking the Court to do is apply that law in
- this case as the Court would apply Miranda in a Miranda
- interrogation or confession case, federal law in a
- 16 wiretapping case. We are asking the Court to apply federal
- 17 law in a case involving restoration of a client's firearm
- 18 rights. And I believe this Court has the authority to do
- 19 so.
- THE COURT: I don't know where it would come from.
- 21 I don't know of any federal authority that would honor any
- order that I made regarding federal law. It's not going to
- 23 happen. And I didn't just get on the bench here yesterday,
- 24 Counsel.
- MR. ADLER: I'm certainly not saying that, your
- 26 Honor. The federal law in question compels us to look to
- 27 state law for interpretation. And according to state law,
- under 1203.4, the case was dismissed, there is no

- 1 proscription in state law against gun rights, federal law
- 2 follows automatically.
- 3 THE COURT: I'm not buying it.
- 4 MR. ADLER: I take that as a no, your Honor?
- THE COURT: The long and the short of it. Here's
- 6 what I will do. I'm going to line out his second amendment
- 7 right to bear arms is hereby fully restored. And my order
- 8 will then say that Mr. Baker is entitled to purchase, own
- 9 and possess firearms consistent with the laws of the State
- 10 of California. But I'm not making any comments about
- 11 federal law and how they see Mr. Baker's rights, that's not
- my job.
- MR. ADLER: I appreciate the concern of the Court,
- 14 your Honor.
- THE COURT: So you're satisfied with that
- 16 modification?
- 17 MR. ADLER: I have to speak -- I'm certainly
- 18 satisfied with the modification, your Honor. I have to
- 19 speak to my client to see if he wishes to pursue this
- 20 matter further. But I do appreciate the Court's concern
- 21 and ruling.
- THE COURT: The order now reads that Mr. Eugene Ryan
- 23 Baker is entitled to purchase, own and possess firearms
- 24 consistent with the laws of the State of California. And I
- 25 have signed that order.
- MR. ADLER: Thank you, your Honor.
- MS. LYYTIKAINEN: Thank you.

Re: FIREARM DENIAL

Dear: EUGENE EVAN BAKER

When a person applies to purchase a firearm in California, the California Department of Justice (DOJ) is required by state law to examine its record in order to determine whether the purchaser is eligible under state law to purchase and possess firearms. The DOJ is also authorized to check certain federal records to determine whether the purchaser is prohibited under federal law from purchasing or possessing firearms.

You recently applied to purchase a firearm. The DOJ has tentatively identified a record in a state or federal database which indicates that you are prohibited by state and /or federal law from purchasing or possessing firearms. This determination was based upon information provided by you in your application to purchase a firearm such as your name, date of birth, driver's license number, and physical description, but has not been confirmed with fingerprint comparison. It is possible that the record may not be yours and may belong to another individual whose name and identifying information is similar to yours.

Your recent firearms purchase application has been denied based on our review of state and/or federal records that matched your identifying information, and revealed the following firearms prohibiting information:

Misdemeanor domestic violence convictions (273.5PC, 243(E)(1) PC Convictions over 10 years old) – Federal Brady Act, effected November 30, 1998.

EXHIBIT 6

If you were denied due to a state prohibition and you wish to challenge the accuracy of our determination or the completeness of your record, please complete the portion of the LIVESCAN form dealing with identifying information and take the LIVESCAN form to any law enforcement agency or publicly listed business that offers LIVESCAN fingerprinting services to the public. LIVESCAN location and cost information can be found at the Attorney General's website, http://ag.ca.gov/fingerprints/publications/contact.php.
