1 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

2 I. INTRODUCTION

3 Defendants do not have any right to special treatment under the Discovery Code. The 4 interrogatories at issue are plainly within the scope of discovery, and there is no authority that 5 provides a defendant, having been served with interrogatories concerning the defendant's legal 6 and factual contentions, can defer the identification and explanation of those contentions until 7 trial. To claim a certain type of discovery is unavailable when the relevant statutory and case law 8 clearly says otherwise is not only insufficient to defeat a motion to compel, it is sanctionable 9 evasive conduction. Because Defendants' objections are without merit and plainly constitute an 10 attempt to avoid confronting issues detrimental to Defendants' defense of this case, the Court 11 should order further responses to the interrogatories at issue, and award sanctions in light of 12 Defendants' intransigence.

13 II. STATEMENT OF FACTS

14 On August 31, 2016, Plaintiffs served Requests for Admissions (Set Three) and Special 15 Interrogatories (Set Four) (collectively the "Written Discovery") on Defendants. (Declaration of 16 Scott M. Franklin in support of Plaintiffs' Motion to Compel Additional Responses to Special 17 Interrogatories (Set Three) ("Franklin Decl.") ¶ 2). Plaintiffs granted Defendants a courtesy 18 extension as to the deadline for responding to the Written Discovery, which was extended from 19 October 28, 2016, to November 4, 2016. (Id. ¶ 3). Defendants' duty to respond to the Written 20 Discovery was stayed as a part of the Court's November 4, 2016, bifurcation order. (Id. ¶ 4).
21 During an informal status conference held September 8, 2017, the Court lifted the stay applicable 22 to the Written Discovery. (Id. ¶ 5).

23 On September 11, 2017, Plaintiffs' counsel sent Defendants' counsel a meet-and-confer 24 letter explaining Plaintiffs' positions on the primary issues expected to be in dispute regarding 25 Defendants' forthcoming responses to the Written Discovery. (Id. ¶ 6). Pursuant to an agreement 26 of the parties, Defendants served responses to the Written Discovery on October 4, 2017.
27 (Franklin Decl. ¶ 7). On October 6, 2017, the parties held a telephonic meet-and-confer to discuss 28 Defendants' responses to the Written Discovery; during the conference, counsel were able to

1 tentatively resolve a few disputed issues, but it was clear that the larger issues, primarily 2 concerning Defendants' refusal to comply with discovery requests seeking to confirm 3 Defendants' legal positions and contentions, were not going to be resolved without a court order.
4 (Id. ¶ 9). During the call of October 6, 2017, Defendants' counsel never indicated any change in 5 Defendants' position that requests for admissions cannot be used to force admissions regarding a 6 party's legal contentions. (Id. ¶ 10). Thus, although counsel for the parties met and conferred 7 about the current discovery dispute, it could not be resolved informally.

8 III. ARGUMENT

9 A. Background Law

10 An interrogatory may relate to whether another party is making a certain 11 contention[; a]n interrogatory is not objectionable because an answer to it involves 12 an opinion or contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact, or 13 would be based on information obtained or legal theories developed in anticipation 14 of litigation or in preparation for trial.

15 Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.010(b). "If the deposing party wants to know facts, it can ask for 16 facts; if it wants to know what the adverse party is contending, or how it rationalizes the facts as 17 supporting a contention, it may ask that question in an interrogatory." Rifkind v. Superior Court, 18 22 Cal. App. 4th 1255, 1261 (1994); accord Burke v. Sup.Ct., 71 Cal 2d 276, 281 (1969). As a 19 well-regarded treatise on California law points out, "'Contention' interrogatories are one of the 20 most formidable discovery tools because they can force disclosure of your adversary's case." Cal.
21 Prac. Guide Civ. Pro. Before Trial § 8:990 (Rutter 2017).

22 "On receipt of a response to interrogatories, the propounding party may move for an 23 order compelling a further response if the propounding party deems that [the] answer to a 24 particular interrogatory is evasive or incomplete [or if a]n objection to an interrogatory is without 25 merit or too general." Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.300(a)(1)-(3) Evasive and incomplete interrogatory 26 responses violate the responding party's duty to provide responses that are "as complete and 27 straightforward as the information reasonably available to the responding party permits." Id.
28 § 2030.220(a); accord Guzman v. General Motors Corp. (1984) 154 Cal.App.3d 438, 442 [noting a responding party must "state the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth in answering written interrogatories"].)

1           B. Defendants’ Claim that Multiple<sup>1</sup> Interrogatories Seek Irrelevant Information, 2           but they do not Provide an Explanation—Doing so would Have Shown the 3           Relevance Objection Is Unfounded

4           Defendants claim the requests at issue are “irrelevant” to the remaining causes of action in 5 this case because, Defendants contend, those causes of action “involve legal questions, as 6 opposed to factual ones. (Response to Special Interrogatories (Set Four), passim). “For discovery 7 purposes, information is relevant if it ‘might reasonably assist a party in evaluating the case, 8 preparing for trial, or facilitating settlement....’ [Citation.] Admissibility is not the test and 9 information unless privileged, is discoverable if it might reasonably lead to admissible evidence.
10 [Citation.] Stewart v. Colonial W. Agency, Inc., 87 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1013 (2001). “These rules 11 are applied liberally in favor of discovery[.]” Id.; see also Civ. Proc. Code § 2017.010.<sup>2</sup>

12           Plaintiffs’ meet-and-confer letter of September 22, 2017, expressly explained why 13 Defendants’ relevancy objections are meritless. The letter notes that, although Plaintiffs had not 14 completed their legal research for the merits briefing in this case, it “seems likely Sinclair Paint 15 will be a major guidepost[.]” citing multiple cases wherein the issue under review was “whether a 16 purported regulatory fee is instead a tax[.]” (Franklin Decl., Ex. 1, at 4, referring to Sinclair Paint 17 v. State Bd. of Equalization, 15 Cal.4th 866 (1997)).

18           In the letter, Plaintiff stated that “Defendants claim that discovery on any ‘benefits’ or 19 ‘burdens’ related to the DROS Fee and the use thereof is inappropriate because distinguishing a 20 tax from a regulatory fee is a question of law.” Id. Defendants’ counsel did not dispute that this is 21 Defendants’ position during the parties’ meet-and-confer teleconference held October 6, 2017

22           <sup>1</sup> I.e., Defendants’ provide several version of their relevancy objection as stated in their 23 responses to Special Interrogatory Nos. 33, 35, 37-41 (Defendants have agreed to provide further 24 responses to these interrogatories, but such further responses have not yet been provided), 45-48, 25 and 53.

26           <sup>2</sup> Code of Civil Procedure section 2017.010 states:

27           any party may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, that is 28 relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action or to the determination of any motion made in that action, if the matter either is itself admissible in evidence or appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Discovery may relate to the claim or defense of the party seeking discovery or of any other party to the action.

1 (Franklin Decl. ¶ 2), even though that position is plainly wrong.

2 Sinclair Paint provides the “general guideline” “that whether impositions are ‘taxes’ or 3 ‘fees’ is a question of law for the appellate courts to decide on independent review of the facts.” 4 Sinclair Paint, 15 Cal. 4th at 873-74 (emphasis added). Sinclair Paint conclusively holds that 5 facts and legal contentions related to “benefits” and “burdens” are plainly at issue (and thus 6 subject to discovery per Code of Civil Procedure section 2017.010) in an illegal tax case. It states 7 “that ‘to show a fee is a regulatory fee and not a special tax, the government should prove (1) the 8 estimated costs of the service or regulatory activity, and (2) the basis for determining the manner 9 in which the costs are apportioned, so that charges allocated to a payor bear a fair or reasonable 10 relationship to the payor’s burdens on or benefits from the regulatory activity.’” Id. at 878; accord 11 Cal. Ass’n of Prof. Scientists v. Dep’t of Fish & Game, 79 Cal. App. 935, 945 (2000).

12 Defendants try to paint the “tax vs. fee” question as a pure question of law (“the causes of 13 action remaining in this case . . . involve legal questions, as opposed to factual ones”) (Defs.’ 14 Resp. to Spec. Int., Set No. 4, passim), but that characterization would only apply if the relevant 15 facts were not in dispute, and such facts are most certainly in dispute here, making the issue a 16 mixed question of law and fact. Cf. Oliver & Williams Elevator Corp. v. State Bd. of 17 Equalization, 48 Cal. App. 3d 890, 894 (1975) (“Since the issues here involve the applicability of 18 taxing statutes to uncontradicted facts, we are confronted purely with a question of law”); accord 19 Neecke v. City of Mill Valley, 39 Cal. App. 4th 946, 953 (1995); see also Crocker Nat’l Bank v.
20 City & Cty. of San Francisco, 49 Cal. 3d 881, 888 (1989) (“Mixed questions of law and fact 21 concern the application of the rule to the facts and the consequent determination whether the rule 22 is satisfied.”). And even assuming arguendo the issue before the Court was a pure question of law 23 where no fact discovery was necessary, that circumstance would not prevent Plaintiff from using 24 interrogatories to prepare for trial on the legal issues (see infra Section III.C.) that are 25 necessary—and therefore relevant—to proving Plaintiffs’ case. Put simply, Defendants’ desire to 26 limit discovery is contrary to well-established law.

27 Determining whether the DROS Fee, or a portion thereof, constitutes a tax is a mixed 28 question of law and fact that can only be established by looking at who pays the fee, what they

1 purportedly are paying for, and what they are actually funding. Sinclair Paint, 15 Cal. 4th at 878.
2 Without the foundational facts, there is no context within which the legal question can be 3 answered. Thus, to the extent the pending discovery concerns these factual issues, or the 4 Defendants' legal positions as to these issues, these are proper topics for discovery in an illegal 5 tax case. Accordingly, the Court should overrule Defendants' relevancy objection.

6 C. Plaintiffs Ignore Relevant Law in Making a Legally Unsupported Objection that 7 Interrogatories<sup>3</sup> Propounded by Plaintiff Constitute "an Inappropriate Use" of a 8 Discovery Device

8 The objection at issue is stated as follows:

9 The interrogatory is also tantamount to demanding defendants brief the merits of the 10 remaining causes of action in this case . . . . The . . . matter will be briefed in due course 11 according to the applicable rules. This interrogatory is therefore burdensome and oppressive and 12 an inappropriate use of the discovery device.

13 (Defs.' Resp. to Spec. Int., Set No. 4, at pp. 7-8, 12). Defendants objection is a complete 14 fabrication, stitching together an actual discovery objection ("burdensome and oppressive") with 15 a factual scenario that, as far as Plaintiffs can tell, has never been identified as either burdensome 16 or oppressive in a published California case. Surely this is because the practice of using 17 interrogatories to flush out legal contentions is consistently recognized by the courts as legitimate.
18 See, e.g., Rifkind v. Superior Court, 22 Cal. App. 4th 1255, 1261 (1994); accord Burke v. Sup. Ct., 19 71 Cal 2d 276, 281 (1969).

20 Furthermore, the three contention interrogatories at issue are substantively reasonable; two 21 ask Defendants to explain the basis for a particular contention (assuming either contention is even 22 a contention Defendants agree with), and the other interrogatory, at most, requires Defendants to 23 describe "all APPS-related benefits resulting from the payment of the DROS fee"—and 24 Defendants have not identified a single benefit, let alone a (partial) list of benefits so extensive 25 that it proves full compliance with the interrogatory would unduly burden Defendants.

26 Defendants' objections are not based in the law, they are based in an attempt to 27

28 <sup>3</sup> I.e., Special Interrogatory Nos. 42, 43, and 52.

1 improperly avoid compliance with “one of the most formidable discovery tools[.]” Cal. Prac.
2 Guide Civ. Pro. Before Trial § 8:990 (Rutter 2017). Because Defendants conduct on this issue is 3 well beyond zealous advocacy, and because the relevant law is crystal clear, Defendants’ conduct 4 justifies not only the granting of this Motion (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.220(a)); but an award of 5 sanctions as well. Id. §§ 128.7(b)(1)-(2); 2023.010 (d)-(f), (g).

6 D. Defendants Response and Objections Regarding Interrogatory No. 33 Are 7 Evasive

8 The response at issue includes a surprisingly bold-faced falsehood. Defendants claim that 9 “[t]he operative answer in this matter does not contain a denial of Paragraph 97 of the First 10 Amended Complaint.” (Defendants’ Response to Special Interrogatory No. 33). But immediately 11 after making this claim, Defendants quote the relevant answer, which literally includes a denial 12 (Id.). It is worth examining the relevant portion of the operative answer in the context of 13 Defendants’ response, because it is further evidence of duplicitous conduct intended to allow 14 Defendants to “have their cake and eat it too.” The operative answer states:

15 Answering paragraph 95 through 100, respondents state that the matters asserted 16 therein constitute legal argument and conclusions, as opposed to material 17 allegations of fact. No response to such arguments and conclusions is required. To 18 the extent paragraphs 95 through 100 contain any material allegations of fact, 19 respondents deny the allegations.

20 (Id.). The first sentence of this quotation is a rouse; Paragraph 97 of the First Amended Complaint 21 (“Paragraph 97”) plainly contains a material allegation of fact—“the current amount of the DROS 22 Fee exceeds DOJ Defendants’ actual costs for lawfully administering the DROS program.” (FAC 23 ¶ 97). But because failure to controvert a material allegation results in the judicial admission of 24 the allegation (Code Civ. Proc. Section 431.20(a)), Defendants added a caveat to protect 25 themselves that, in reality, is the salient passage: “respondents deny the allegations.” Cf. Cal.
26 Prac. Guide Civ. Pro. Before Trial § 6:401 (“do not base your decision about whether to deny 27 something in the complaint on your judgment that it is an ‘immaterial’ allegation and hence need 28 not be denied. A judge might disagree. The safe practice is to deny all allegations that you do not intend to admit.”). Notwithstanding Defendants’ knowing attempt to cloud the issue, the predicate denial exists, and Defendants’ objection alleging the contrary necessarily fails.

1 Finally, Plaintiffs must point out the insincerity of Defendants' strawman argument
2 suggesting that Plaintiffs should have demurred to the operative answer to resolve the issue now
3 under discussion. ((Defendants' Response to Special Interrogatory No. 33). Though Plaintiffs find 4 Defendants' response to Paragraph 97 is intentionally evasive, it does contain a denial, so in that 5 regard, there was no reason to raise a pleading challenge on that point. Certainly, had Plaintiffs 6 done so, Defendants would have pointed to the denial, and would have—correctly—prevailed on 7 a demurrer. But now that the time to demurrer has passed, Defendants, having not been forced to 8 admit they denied the material allegations in Paragraph 97, make a contention to the contrary.
9 This is endemic of Defendants overall strategy in this case: never take a position unless forced to 10 by motion or by the Court, so that when it becomes beneficial to repudiate that position, there will 11 be no potentially binding statement to the contrary. The purpose of the discovery rules is to 12 eliminate this type of gamesmanship. See Juarez v. Boy Scouts of Am., Inc., 81 Cal. App. 4th 13 377, 389 (2000) (“The purpose of the discovery rules is to ‘enhance the truth-seeking function of 14 the litigation process and eliminate trial strategies that focus on gamesmanship and surprise.”).
15 “[T]he discovery process is designed to ‘make a trial less a game of blindman's bluff and more a 16 fair contest with the basic issues and facts disclosed to the fullest practicable extent.’” Id.
17 Therefore, the Court should order a further response to the relevant interrogatory based on the 18 existence of Defendants' denial of the material allegations in Paragraph 97.

19 The response at issue is also troubling because it raises an objection that Interrogatory No.
20 33 is cumulative, but the objection is based on another less than candid argument. Defendants 21 claim that, in a discovery response dated May 26, 2015 (“May 26 Response”) (Franklin Decl. ¶ 22 12, at Ex.2), they have effectively responded to this interrogatory previously because, in response 23 to Form Interrogatory No. 15.1, they “have already ‘[i]dentified each denial of a material 24 allegation’ and ‘state[d] all facts upon which [defendants] base[d] the denial” of Paragraph 111 of 25 the original complaint herein, which is the same as Paragraph 97. ((Defendants' Response to 26 Special Interrogatory No. 33; compare Compl. ¶ 111; with FAC. ¶ 97). The May 26 Response, 27 however, does not identify any facts upon which the denial is based. Defendants do not explain 28 this, and rather imply that they have stated some factual material in support of the relevant denial,

1 which they did not. Accordingly, Defendants' effectively admitted that, as of the May 26
2 Response, the denial of Paragraph 111 was not based on even a single fact.

3 Plaintiffs suppose that if the Court finds the May 2016 Response constitutes a judicial 4 admission that that Defendants have no facts to support the denial of Paragraph 111, then 5 Interrogatory No. 33 might be unnecessary. But that seems unlikely; Defendants themselves 6 recognized that Defendants' filing of an "amended answer will supersede . . . this interrogatory 7 [i.e., Form Interrogatory 15.1]." (Franklin Decl. ¶ 13, at Ex. 3). When, as here, the amendment of 8 the complaint includes substantial changes (e.g., the deletion of a cause of action and the addition 9 of new causes of action), the amended complaint supersedes the prior complaint. See Mock v.
10 Santa Monica Hosp., 187 Cal. App. 2d 57, 60 (1960). Because Defendants' cumulative objection, 11 like all of their objections to Interrogatory No. 33, is an improper attempt to avoid providing 12 discovery responses detrimental to Defendants' case, a further response to that interrogatory 13 should be ordered.

14 Had Plaintiff demurred based on the fact that this response claims Paragraph 97 both does 15 not require a response and that factual contentions therein are denied, the Court would have 16 surely.

17 E. Unless a Supplemental Response Is Provided, Defendants Fail to Provide any 18 Factual Basis, let alone a Convincing One, to Support the Claim that Compliance
19 with Interrogatory No. 35 Would Be Unduly Burdensome

20 The parties have discussed this interrogatory, and Defendants' counsel has informally 21 asserted that the California Department of Justice has no system for tracking the type of 22 information sought in this interrogatory. (Franklin Decl. ¶ 10). Without accepting that claim as a 23 sufficient basis for Defendants' overburden objection, Plaintiffs have offered to compromise and 24 accept, in lieu of a response directly addressing what the interrogatory seeks, a good faith 25 estimate from the Department as to the number of lawsuits since January 1, 2006, that "resulted in 26 money being transferred from the DROS SPECIAL ACCOUNT to the Legal Services Revolving 27 Fund to pay for legal services provided by an attorney."

28 If Defendants do not accept that compromise and fail to timely produce a further response accordingly, then the initial response, which provides no factual basis as to why searching for the

1 information sought would be burdensome (other than that they cover “more than a decade”), is an 2 objection that should be overruled. See Mead Reinsurance Co. v. Super. Ct., 188 Cal. App. 3d 3 313, 320–21 (1986) (“[o]ppression must not be equated with burden [all discovery imposes some 4 burden on the opposition] y(4)27 [sic] to support an objection of oppression there must be some 5 showing ... that the ultimate effect of the burden is incommensurate with the result sought.”).

6 IV. CONCLUSION

7 “One key legislative purpose of the discovery statutes is ‘to educate the parties concerning 8 their claims and defenses so as to encourage settlements and to expedite and facilitate trial.’” 9 Puerto v. Super. Ct., 158 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1249 (2008). Thus, even though “the discovery 10 process is ‘designed to eliminate the element of surprise’” (id.), Defendants ask the court to 11 ignore Plaintiffs’ right to fairly educate themselves on Defendants’ defenses in advance of trial.
12 Because “[m]atters sought are properly discoverable if they will aid in party’s preparation for 13 trial” (id.), and because the interrogatories at issue will help narrow the issues and define the 14 contours of Defendants’ defense, the Court should order further responses to the interrogatories 15 discussed herein, and should award sanctions based on Defendants’ refusal to comply with the 16 well-established rules of discovery.
