1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 The untenable nature of Plaintiffs’ position can be summarized in one sentence from their 3 Opposition: “There is only one circumstance the Ordinance, in application, would survive: if the 4 City does not require gun owners to comply with the Ordinance.” (Opp’n at 10-11.) This extreme 5 perspective, that any burden on gun ownership (no matter how slight) is per se unlawful finds no
6 support in the law. Instead, Ninth Circuit and U.S. Supreme Court jurisprudence requires an exacting
7 approach, one that carefully evaluates each aspect of the Ordinance. Defendants’ Motion has done 8 this; Plaintiffs “no compromise” method does not.

9 The City has discretion to enact reasonable legislation in response to a widespread local 10 public health crisis of gun violence. Plaintiffs’ misguided criticism does not detract from this 11 discretion. Plaintiffs either selectively criticize certain authorities relied on by the City or advance a 12 series of “slippery slope” arguments irrelevant to the instant Motion. E.g., Opp’n at 2 (noting if the 13 Ordinance is upheld “any core right could be at risk. . . there would be nothing preventing the city 14 from charging a voting ‘fee.’”) But focusing on the issue at hand, the serious, pervasive problem of 15 gun violence is appropriately addressed here by a law aimed at compensating victims, reducing gun 16 harm, and limiting the economic and other harm resulting therefrom. See San Jose Muni. Code § 17 10.32.200, et seq. (“Ordinance”).

18 Nevertheless, Plaintiffs National Association for Gun Rights, Inc. (“NAGR”)—a national 19 “no compromise” gun rights organization committed to an absolutist view of the Second 20 Amendment—and Mark Sikes (collectively, “Plaintiffs”) filed a pre-enforcement challenge 21 claiming the Ordinance violates the First, Second, and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S.
22 Constitution, as well as various California laws. In their Opposition to the City’s Motion to Dismiss, 23 Plaintiffs rely heavily on ideology-driven rhetoric (e.g., that the City’s legislative efforts should 24 leave alone law-abiding gunowners and focus more on felony gun crimes, even though that topic is 25 controlled by state law); unsupported accusations (e.g., that estimates regarding the societal costs of 26 guns in San Jose are based on “artificially calculated” and “sham figures”); and scant legal authority.
27 Ultimately, Plaintiffs fail to show that their claims are ripe or that they have stated any claims for 28 which relief may be granted.

1 For all these reasons and those set forth below, the Motion should be granted. Because there
2 are no facts Plaintiffs could allege to cure defects in their claims, the FAC should be dismissed 3 without leave to amend.

4 II. ARGUMENT

5 A. The FAC Should Be Dismissed Under Rule 12(b)(1).

6 1. None of Plaintiffs' Claims are Ripe for Review.

7 In its Motion, the City showed that Plaintiffs' claims are not yet ripe for review and subject 8 to dismissal under Rule 12(b)(1) because the Ordinance only provides a framework of a legal regime, 9 defers deciding key aspects of that regime to future legislative action and rulemaking, and none of 10 that legislative action or rulemaking has yet occurred. See Mot. at 7-9. The Ordinance becomes 11 effective on August 7, 2022, with several logistical activities that must occur before then. See §§ 12 10.32.215, 10.32.240(B); § 10.32.235(A); Decl. of Sarah Zarate of City Manager's Office ("CMO 13 Decl.") (ECF 36-16).

14 As a result, Plaintiffs' federal constitutional and other claims are based on speculation about 15 hypothetical future facts and events, rather than the kind of concrete case or controversy needed for 16 Article III jurisdiction. Mot. at 7-9; see also Scott v. Pasadena Unified Sch. Dist., 306 F.3d 646, 662
17 (9th Cir. 2002) (ripeness concerns "are amplified when constitutional considerations are concerned" 18 and require that federal courts only decide "constitutional issues [presented] in clean-cut and 19 concrete form").

20 In response, Plaintiffs argue the Court need not concern itself with ripeness because Plaintiffs 21 face a "credible threat of prosecution" (though the Ordinance does not authorize prosecution, cf. §§ 22 10.32.240, 10.32.245) and because of Plaintiffs' new position that the Fee amount is irrelevant to 23 their legal arguments. Opp'n at 9-11; see also id. at 10 (arguing Fee requirement is unconstitutional 24 "[r]egardless of the amount of the [F]ee" and "regardless of the identity of the nonprofit"); id. at 13 25 (arguing Fee and insurance requirements are unconstitutional regardless of their cost because 26 determining precise dollar amount at which they impose more than a "minimal burden" requires 27 difficult line drawing).

28

1 Plaintiffs’ position that the Fee amount is irrelevant to their Second Amendment claim is 2 directly contrary to binding precedent requiring that Second Amendment challenges to gun 3 regulations be analyzed based on the extent to which they burden the exercise of Second Amendment 4 rights (and further rejecting challenges to laws that impose only minimal burdens). Compare
 5 Nordyke v. King, 681 F.3d 1041, 1044 (9th Cir. 2012) (en banc), cert. denied, 568 U.S. 1085 (2013)
 6 (rejecting Second Amendment challenge to ordinance that regulated gun sales “only minimally and 7 only on county property,” without requiring any empirical support justifying the ordinance), with 8 Opp’n at 13 (arguing “the Second Amendment is unqualified, stating that the right to bear arms
 9 ‘shall not be infringed’”); cf. U.S. Const. Amend. I (providing Congress “shall make no law ...
 10 abridging the freedom of speech”).

11 Plaintiffs’ argument also makes clear that they have not suffered any Article III injury 12 because they seek relief based on a “conjectural and hypothetical” future harm. See Summers v.
 13 Earth Island Inst., 555 U.S. 488, 493 (2009). Plaintiffs cannot show that any threatened injury is 14 “certainly impending.” Clapper v. Amnesty Int’l USA, 568 U.S. 398, 409 (2013) (“allegations of 15 possible future injury are not sufficient” (emphasis in original)); see also Opp’n at 1 (asserting, 16 contrary to standing law, that “citizens do not need to suffer an imminent violation of their rights 17 before they can seek the court’s protection”). Plaintiffs’ speculative fears that they (and, given this 18 is a facial challenge, a large fraction of all persons subject to the Ordinance) might someday suffer 19 such purported injuries fall well short of establishing the requisite Article III injury. See, e.g., Gilbert
 20 v. Chase Home Fin., LLC, 2013 WL 2318890, at *11 (E.D. Cal. May 28, 2013) (“The prospect 21 of [plaintiff] someday losing the property is speculative, and does not represent a concrete injury 22 because “there is no indication that the foreclosure process has either begun or concluded”). The 23 Court is being asked to guess at the amount of the fee, identify whether it burdens constitutional and 24 other rights, and determine whether it must be struck down – all without knowing what the amount 25 of the fee actually is.

26 2. Plaintiffs Do Not State a Proper Facial Constitutional Challenge.

27 Even if Plaintiffs’ claims were somehow ripe and they had standing, their facial challenge 28 still fails because they allege no facts establishing that the Fee would be unconstitutional in a “large

1 fraction” of cases. See Mot. at 9-10; Gonzales v. Carhart, 550 U.S. 124, 167-68 (2007). In response, 2 Plaintiffs ignore this argument, appearing to try to get around it in the same way they deal with the 3 ripeness issue—by arguing the Fee and insurance requirements are unconstitutional as to all covered 4 persons regardless of how much the fees cost. That argument, however, must be rejected as directly 5 contrary to Ninth Circuit law, for reasons explained below.

6 B. The FAC Should Also Be Dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) Because Each of 7 Plaintiffs’ Claims Fail.

8 1. The Ordinance Is Not Preempted by State Law.

9 Plaintiffs claim that “the issue of residential handgun possession has already determined to 10 be preempted by state law.” (Opp’n at 11.) First, the claim is flatly contradicted by decades of case 11 law rejecting preemption challenges to a wide variety of local gun regulations in California. See 12 Mot. at 18-19 (citing Great Western Shows, Inc. v. County of Los Angeles, 27 Cal.4th 853 (2002) 13 [county ban on gun and ammunition sales on county property]; Calguns Foundation, Inc. v. County
 14 of San Mateo, 218 Cal.App.4th 661 (2013) [county ban on gun possession in parks]; Cal. Rifle &
 15 Pistol Ass’n v. City of West Hollywood, 66 Cal.App.4th 1302 (1998) [city ban on sale of 28 “Saturday 16 Night Special” handguns designated by city manager]; Olsen v. McGillicuddy, 15 Cal.App.3d 897
 17 (1971) (city ban on possession of BB guns by minors). Second, state law does not preempt the whole 18 field, only discrete and specific areas of firearm regulation (such as permitting, licensing, and 19 registration), the Ordinance here does not encroach on any of those areas. See Mot. at 17-19. In 20 response, Plaintiffs abandon their overbroad claim that all local gun regulations are preempted and 21 fall back to two limited arguments (Opp’n at 11-12), neither of which have merit.

22 First, Plaintiffs argue, based on a single case, that the entire Ordinance is preempted. See 23 Opp’n at 11 (citing Fiscal v. City and County of San Francisco, 158 Cal.App.4th 895 (2008)).
 24 Plaintiffs’ heavy reliance on Fiscal is entirely misplaced, and inappropriate here. In Fiscal, the Court 25 of Appeal held that San Francisco’s total ban on firearm and ammunition sales and near-total ban on 26 handgun possession “including possession within ... homes, businesses, and private property” was 27 preempted under two state laws prohibiting local governments from (1) enacting “local regulations[] 28 relating to [firearm] registration or licensing” or (2) requiring a “permit or license ... to purchase, own, possess, keep, or carry” a handgun in the home or other private property. Id. at 901, 906-907, 919 (quoting Govt. Code § 53071; Penal Code § 12026 [now § 25605]); see also id. at 919 (criticizing the ordinance’s “sheer breadth”). Even though the Ordinance is nothing like the handgun ban struck down in Fiscal, Plaintiffs argue the Ordinance is preempted under that case. Opp’n at 11. Plaintiffs never explain how the Ordinance regulates in “the field of residential handgun possession” held to be fully occupied by state law in Fiscal, 158 Cal.App.4th at 908, nor could they. The claim fails.

Plaintiffs’ final argument is that, even “if this case is deemed to be about non-residential firearm possession,” the Ordinance is preempted under Sippel v. Nedler, 24 Cal.App.3d 173 (1972), which held that an ordinance requiring gun purchasers “to obtain a permit from the police department authorizing the purchase of [a] firearm” was preempted by state law occupying the field of gun licensing and registration. Id. at 175. In a clumsy attempt to shoehorn the Ordinance into Sippel’s holding, Plaintiffs vaguely assert that “requiring gun owners to have proof of insurance and proof of paying two separate fees is akin to a permit or license” without any further explanation or supporting legal authority, or even positing a definition of those terms. Opp’n at 11 (emphasis added). This vague and unsupported argument fails. The Ordinance has nothing to do with gun permitting or licensing, and does nothing to interfere with the state’s permitting and licensing regime.

Plaintiffs’ state preemption argument should be dismissed, as should their First Amended Complaint.

2. Plaintiffs Fail to State a Second Amendment Claim.

In its Motion, the City showed that, under the Ninth Circuit’s two-step test for Second Amendment claims, the appropriate level of scrutiny for adjudicating Plaintiffs’ claim is intermediate scrutiny, which the Ordinance easily survives under. Mot. at 10-16. This is flawed, for two reasons. See Opp’n at 12-16.

First, Plaintiffs argue that strict scrutiny applies because the Ordinance “strikes directly” at the core Second Amendment right “by conditioning lawful possession of guns in the home” on compliance with the Ordinance’s Fee and insurance requirement. (Opp. 12). Plaintiffs make that conclusory statement, but never really explain why, and appear to misunderstand the Ordinance’s

1 basic terms. The Court can review the basic terms of the Ordinance itself, but suffice to say, the 2 Ordinance does not threaten seizure. It does not preclude or threaten gun possession in the home. In 3 the Ninth Circuit, strict scrutiny is applied only if the challenged law “implicates the core of the 4 Second Amendment right and severely burdens that right.” Young v. Hawai’i, 992 F.3d 765, 784
5 (9th Cir. 2021) (en banc) (emphasis added). Plaintiffs fail to show they meet either prong, much less 6 both. Instead, Plaintiffs quickly move on to try to distinguish three of the large number of cases cited 7 in the City’s Motion as concerning “gun sale fees” and “administrative fees,” “not regulation of 8 home use.” But again, Plaintiffs never explain how the Ordinance regulates the “possession” or “use” 9 of guns (the Ordinance regulates neither) nor how it “severely burdens” those rights under Young.
10 Indeed, the burden imposed by the Ordinance is minimal at most: it neither regulates the possession 11 or use of firearms, how or where they are stored, possession of guns in the home, nor does it impact 12 any other factors evaluated by courts as directly affecting residents’ ability to keep and bear arms 13 for self-defense. See, e.g., Heller, 554 U.S. at 629. Moreover, Plaintiffs do not explain why (if their 14 position is correct) so many courts have applied intermediate scrutiny to far more restrictive laws 15 than that of the Ordinance. See, e.g., Bauer v. Becerra, 858 F.3d 1216 (9th Cir. 2017) (upholding 16 DOJ’s use of gun sale fee for enforcement efforts targeting illegal firearm possession after point of 17 sale under intermediate scrutiny); Heller v. District of Columbia, 801 F.3d 264, 278 (D.C. Cir. 2015)
18 (“Heller III”); Kwong v. Bloomberg, 723 F.3d 160, 161, 167 (2d Cir. 2013), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct.
19 2696 (2014); O’Connell v. Gross, No. CV 19-11654-FDS, 2020 WL 1821832 (D. Mass. Apr. 10, 20 2020). Intermediate scrutiny applies to this law.

21 Second, Plaintiffs argue that if intermediate scrutiny applies, the Ordinance fails that test for 22 lack of a reasonable fit between the Ordinance and its stated objective. See Opp’n at 14-16. Across 23 two pages of dense argument that cite only a single case (Chovan), Plaintiffs launch scattershot 24 criticisms that are unsupported by law.

25 Plaintiffs first broadly contend the City relied on “irrelevant” information in enacting the 26 Ordinance, and engage in an effort to pick apart a few of the statistics in the voluminous record relied 27 on by the City. Opp’n at 14. Plaintiffs also contend that the “fit” between the Ordinance and its 28 objectives is not sufficiently tight, and criticize the City’s inclusion and reliance on figures in the

1 Ordinance estimating the economic and social costs of gun-related harms, simply because those 2 figures include costs caused by gun crimes. Opp’n at 14; see also id. at 15 (asserting the Fee “does 3 nothing to target criminals who own guns”). But to “reduce the number of gun incidents,” the 4 Ordinance seeks to provide voluntary gun safety and other programs, and to require gunowners to 5 obtain liability insurance to compensate victims. See § 10.32.200(B)(10)-(13). To say the Ordinance 6 does nothing to react to gun crimes is simply inaccurate. See also § 10.32.220(A)(2)-(3) (providing 7 nonprofit will offer programming and services related to “[v]iolence reduction or gender based 8 violence services or programs” and “[a]ddiction intervention and substance abuse treatment.”) There 9 is clearly a relationship between gun crimes and the Ordinance’s stated aims. And moreover, 10 Plaintiffs’ criticisms actually highlight that tens or hundreds of millions of dollars in economic and 11 social costs arise from non-criminal gun harm in any event.

12 Plaintiffs further critique the idea that requiring gun liability insurance could alleviate and 13 deter harm in the same way as automobile liability insurance does, because the City did not rely on 14 a study specific to gun liability insurance. Opp’n at 14-15. This ignores two basic truths: 1) there are 15 scant studies of this kind, because an insurance mandate over guns is innovative and novel; and 2) 16 the City has discretion to pass reasonable, lawful legislation, relying on the authority that is available, 17 which is what the Ordinance does. Jackson v. City and County of San Francisco, 746 F.3d 953, 966 18 (9th Cir. 2014) (lawmakers are allowed “a reasonable opportunity to experiment with solutions to 19 admittedly serious problems,” such as unintentional harm caused by firearms.) And the materials 20 relied on by the City support that there are insurance policies available to comply with the insurance 21 mandate, contrary to Plaintiffs’ contention. Compare Opp. at 6 with Dkt. 36-8 at 109 (noting $1.5 22 million in insurance coverage to compensate victims for gun harm under homeowners’ insurance 23 policy); 122-124 (noting insurance companies offer gun liability insurance and comparing 24 underwriting factors).

25 Plaintiffs then criticize the Ordinance for not having focused more heavily on combatting 26 harms from gun crime, which is a pure policy criticism better directed at the City Council than this 27 Court. See Opp’n at 15. Moreover, gun harm is an important and complex subject, and legislatures 28 are entitled to address any aspect of the problem that they see fit to address.

1 Finally, Plaintiffs condemn the City for imposing a Fee designed to offset the social costs of 2 harm by preventing incidents of gun harm and associated costs. This argument makes no sense. It 3 does not matter that the Ordinance does not reimburse police response costs directly, rather than 4 doing nothing to reduce incidents of gun harm and imposing a fee that merely reimburses the City 5 for costs incurred. See Opp’n at 16. Plaintiffs argue that the City is not permitted to save money by 6 reducing gun harms because the Cox/Murdock fee jurisprudence only permits fees to “defray”
7 already-incurred administrative and enforcement costs. Id. But this is a distinction without a 8 difference—a dollar saved is as good (if not better) than a dollar spent and later reimbursed. The fact 9 that the Ordinance here does not look and function exactly like past Ordinances does not mean it is 10 unconstitutional; it merely means it is acting as a laboratory of democracy and trying something 11 new. The City is entitled deference to do this. Jackson, 746 F.3d at 966 (citing City of Renton v.
12 Playtime Theaters, Inc., 475 U.S. 41, 52 (1986)).

13 Plaintiffs conveniently overlook the substantial, varied data and sources the City considered 14 and relied on to draft the Ordinance. See Dkt 36-8, p. 2-4 [listing “citations for the [fourteen] various 15 research and data sources . . . [deemed] useful in Council’s deliberations on the matter.”] Ultimately, 16 a perfectly overlapping venn diagram between the City’s stated purpose and the terms of the 17 Ordinance is not necessary under intermediate scrutiny. The City need only show (1) that their stated 18 objective is significant, substantial, or important; and (2) a reasonable fit between the Ordinance and 19 that objective. U.S. v. Chovan, 735 F.3d 1127, 1139 (9th Cir. 2013). The Court should decline to 20 impose a legal requirement that does not exist.

21 In sum, Plaintiffs’ scattershot response the Motion is not sufficient to show they have stated 22 a Second Amendment claim on which relief can be granted. The claim should be dismissed.

23 3. Plaintiffs Fail to State a First Amendment Claim Based on Compelled 24 Speech or Association.

25 Plaintiffs’ First Amendment argument is based on the claim that they face a risk of future
26 violation of their free speech rights from a yet-to-be-designated nonprofit with unknown leadership 27 that, Plaintiffs argue, “will inevitably hold the City’s anti-gun biases.” Opp’n at 7; ¶¶ 60-64. In its 28 Motion, the City showed this claim is based largely on the kind of speculative and conclusory

1 allegation that need not be credited under Rule 12(b)(6). Mot. at 16-17; see Twombly, 550 U.S. at 2 555. Plaintiffs’ heavy reliance on Janus v. AFSCME, Council 31, 138 S. Ct. 2448 (2018), and their 3 attempt to apply its holding outside the union context is misplaced and unsupported by law. Mot. at 4 16-17.

5 In response to the City’s argument, Plaintiffs fail to cite a single case in which Janus has 6 been applied outside the public union context, much less in the area of gun regulation. See Opp’n at 7 16-17. Instead, Plaintiffs weakly argue the purported uniqueness of the Ordinance has forced them 8 to rely on Janus because “[u]nions are a rare example of a government forcing a citizen to pay 9 another private entity directly.” Opp’n at 17. But there are a great variety of such examples, even 10 aside from auto liability insurance mandates: health insurance mandates (see Cal. Govt. Code 11 § 100705), medical malpractice insurance mandates for physicians (see Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code 12 § 2216.2), mandated smog testing (see Cal. Vehicle Code §§ 4000.1(a), 24007(b); Cal. Health & 13 Safety Code § 44015); mandated assessments for agricultural marketing and promotion (see Johanns
 14 v. Livestock Mktg. Ass’n, 544 U.S. 550 (2005) [holding that assessments on beef producers to fund 15 marketing program was “government speech” not subject to First Amendment challenge]; Glickman
 16 v. Wileman Bros. & Elliott, Inc., 521 U.S. 457 (1997) [holding federal mandate to fund generic 17 advertising for California peaches, plums and nectarines did not violate farms’ First Amendment 18 rights]), and governments allowing private companies to operate toll roads.

19 Further, to the extent Plaintiffs now claim the First Amendment bars a law from requiring 20 them to pay any amount of money that ends up in the hands of a government-selected entity that 21 expresses any view with which they disagree, such an argument is contrary to binding precedent.
 22 See, e.g., Bd. of Regents of the Univ. of Wis. Sys. v. Southworth, 529 U.S. 217, 229 (2000) (“It is 23 inevitable that government will adopt and pursue programs and policies within its constitutional 24 powers but which nevertheless are contrary to the profound beliefs and sincere convictions of some 25 of its citizens. The government, as a general rule, may support valid programs and policies by taxes 26 or other exactions binding on protesting parties.”); R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. v. Shewry, 423 F.3d 27 906, 917 (9th Cir. 2005). As the U.S. Supreme Court has aptly noted: “If every citizen were to have 28 a right to insist that no one paid by public funds express a view with which he disagreed, debate over

1 issues of great concern to the public would be limited to those in the private sector, and the role of 2 government as we know it radically transformed.” Keller v. State Bar of California, 496 U.S. 1, 12-3 13 (1990). Yet, that is precisely the non-existent “right” on which Plaintiffs appear to base their First 4 Amendment claim.

5 Plaintiffs’ arguments fail for two additional reasons. First, Plaintiffs are not “forced to 6 support the speech of the nonprofit” because whatever message (if any) is ultimately attached to the 7 designated nonprofit, Plaintiffs will never lose their ability to “expressly disavow” their connection
 8 to that message. See PruneYard Shopping Ctr. v. Robins, 447 U.S. 74, 87 (1980) (rejecting shopping 9 center’s First Amendment challenge to state law requiring it to allow certain expressive activity on 10 its property); Rumsfeld v. Forum for Academic and Inst. Rights, Inc., 547 U.S. 47, 65 (2006) 11 (rejecting First Amendment compelled-speech and compelled-association challenge to federal law 12 conditioning law schools’ receipt of federal funds on schools allowing military recruiters on campus 13 during era of “Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell” because law did “not sufficiently interfere with any message 14 of the school”). Similarly, the Ordinance does not violate Plaintiffs’ associational rights because 15 they remain free to associate with others and voice disapproval of the Ordinance and the nonprofit.
 16 See Rumsfeld, 547 U.S. at 69-70 (right to associate not violated “regardless of how repugnant” 17 military recruiters’ message was considered to be). Indeed, if Plaintiffs seek mainly to protect the 18 rights of law-abiding, safe gunowners, than public programs aimed at educating others about gun 19 safety would not appear to be objectionable. And Plaintiffs’ repeated characterization of the fee as a 20 “donation” does not change the legality of the Ordinance. Opp’n at 1, 2, 5, 9, 12, 15, 17. The fee is 21 a reasonable cost-shifting mechanism to offset the social costs of gun harm that the City, in its 22 discretion and afforded the appropriate deference, is permitted to enact. Jackson, 746 F.3d at 966 23 (citing City of Renton v. Playtime Theaters, Inc., 475 U.S. 41, 52 (1986)).

24 Ultimately, Plaintiffs have not plausibly alleged the Fee requirement will compel them and 25 a large fraction of San Jose gunowners to engage in speech and association with which they do not 26 agree in violation of the First Amendment. This is especially so in view of federalism-based concerns 27 that federal courts should not invalidate state laws on the grounds that they violate the right of 28 association based only on “factual assumptions.” Washington State Grange v. Washington State

1 Republican Party, 552 U.S. 442, 457 (2008); accord Cal. Democratic Party v. Jones, 530 U.S. 567, 2 600 (2000) (Stevens, J., dissenting) (“[A]n empirically debatable assumption ... is too thin a reed to 3 support a credible First Amendment distinction” with respect to burdens on association). Plaintiffs’
 4 First Amendment claims should be dismissed.

5 4. The Ordinance Does Not Impose an Unlawful Tax.

6 Plaintiffs claim the Fee and insurance requirements are each a “tax” unlawfully imposed in 7 violation of the California Constitution, Article XIII C, Section 1, as amended by Proposition 26
 8 (“Proposition 26”). ¶¶ 122-31. In its Motion, the City showed this argument fails for two reasons:
 9 (1) neither the Fee nor insurance requirements meet Proposition 26’s definition of a “tax” under 10 Schmeer v. County of Los Angeles, 213 Cal.App.4th 1310 (2013), and (2) even if they did, the 11 requirements would still be lawful under Proposition 26’s “specific benefit exemption” for fees 12 “imposed for a specific benefit conferred or privilege granted directly to the payor that is not provide 13 by those charged” (Cal. Const., Art. XIII C, § 1(e)). Nothing set forth in Plaintiffs’ opposition 14 changes this conclusion.

15 First, the Ordinance’s annual Fee is not a “tax” under Proposition 26 because it is not paid 16 or remitted to the local government, but rather paid directly to and used by the designated nonprofit 17 organization to provide programming and services to gunowners and their families. § 10.32.215; see 18 Schmeer, 213 Cal.App.4th 1310 (2013) (legally mandated charge paid to and retained by retail stores 19 is not a “tax” for purposes of Proposition 26). In response, Plaintiffs argue that under Schmeer, a 20 charge can also be a tax if it is “for the benefit of” a local government. Opp’n at 18 (quoting Schmeer, 21 Schmeer, 213 Cal.App.4th at 1328-29). But here, the primary intended beneficiaries of the services 22 funded by the Fee (and paid to the non-profit) are not the City, but gunowners and their families 23 with access to the nonprofit’s programming and services, and victims of accidental shootings.
 24 Additionally, the Schmeer court’s analysis makes clear that what it means by “benefit” with respect 25 to a local government is “raise[] [] revenue.” 213 Cal.App.4th at 1329 (holding the bag charge is not 26 a tax “because the charge is not remitted to the county and raises no revenue for the county”). Here, 27 neither the Fee nor the insurance requirement are a tax because neither raise revenue for the City.

28

1 Second, the City argued in its Motion that even if the Fee or insurance requirement is deemed 2 a “tax,” both would fall within Proposition 26’s “specific benefits exception” for fees “imposed for 3 a specific benefit conferred or privilege granted directly to the payor that is not provided to those 4 not charged, and which does not exceed the reasonable costs to the local government of conferring 5 the benefit or granting the privilege.” See Cal. Const., Art. XIII C, § 1(e)(1); Mot. at 20:14-22.
 6 Plaintiffs make no response to argument, thus conceding the issue. See Opp’n at 18-19.

7 In sum, the Fee is not a tax under Proposition 26, and even if it were, the specific benefits
 8 exception applies. Plaintiffs’ Proposition 26 claim should be dismissed.

9 5. The Ordinance Does Not Violate the San Jose City Charter.

10 Plaintiffs’ last claim is that two provisions of the Ordinance (§§ 10.32.215, 10.32.220) violate 11 the San Jose City Charter (“Charter”) (§§ 701, 1204-1207, 1211). See Opp, 19-21; ¶¶ 73-81, 136-12 44. This claim has three components (see ¶¶ 142-44), all of which are contrary to the plain meaning 13 of the Charter provisions at issue. Opp’n at 19-21.

14 First, Plaintiffs claim the Ordinance requirement that non-exempt gunowners pay the Fee 15 directly to the nonprofit instead of the City (§ 10.32.215) violates a Charter provision requiring the 16 City to deposit “[a]ll funds paid into the City Treasury” into either the City’s General Fund or a 17 special fund (Charter § 1211). ¶ 144. This claim fails for the simple reason that this Charter provision 18 expressly applies only to “funds paid into the City Treasury” and not monies paid directly to a 19 designated third party. See Mot. at 21. Plaintiffs contend the City’s straightforward view of its own 20 Charter is mistaken because the Fee monies are “City revenues”—an assertion for which Plaintiffs 21 offer no explanation or support. Opp’n at 19:16. Plaintiffs further argue the City’s interpretation 22 should be rejected because it “would lead to impractical or unworkable results” (though Plaintiffs 23 decline to explain what those would be), “would create an exception that swallows the rule” and 24 “turn section 1211 on its head” (also unexplained), and “would subvert [Charter § 1211]’s 25 fundamental control on the City government’s ability to hide, or avoid oversight of, how City fee 26 revenues are spent” (harkening back to Plaintiffs’ prior unexplained assertion that Fee monies are 27 “City revenues”). Opp’n at 19:27-20:4. None of these arguments are adequately explained or 28 supported, and none are grounded in the text of the Charter. (See Mot. at 20-23.)

1 Second, Plaintiffs attack the Ordinance provision requiring the nonprofit to “spend every 2 dollar” of Fee monies on the purposes related to reducing gun harm but that “[o]therwise, the City
 3 shall not specifically direct how the monies from the ... Fee are expended.” § 10.32.220(C). Opp’n 4 at 19-21. Plaintiffs claim this violates the Charter’s budgeting and appropriations procedures 5 applicable to City “income” and “expenditures” (Charter §§ 1204-1207, 1211), or at least their 6 purported underlying purpose of “control[ing] ... City government’s ability to hide, or avoid 7 oversight of, how City fee revenues are spent.” Opp’n at 20:3-4; ¶ 142; see also Opp’n at 7:4-6 8 (arguing “the potential for waste, fraud, and abuse is staggering” based on the inaccurate assertion 9 the City will have no “oversight or even knowledge of the fees being paid to the nonprofit” or 10 “control[] [over] how the funds are being spent”). This claim fails for the same reason as the prior 11 one: because these Charter provisions only apply to monies in the City’s possession, not to Fee
 12 monies paid directly to a designated third party. Moreover, Plaintiffs’ theory that the Ordinance 13 provides insufficient fiscal oversight of the nonprofit’s expenditure of Fee monies ignores the 14 numerous Ordinance provisions that do, in fact, provide for such oversight. Such provisions include 15 those: (1) imposing detailed controls on the expenditure of Fee monies by the nonprofit, including a 16 requirement that “[t]he designated non-profit shall provide a biannual report to an appropriate [City] 17 council committee”; (2) authorizing the City Manager to promulgate regulations concerning 18 “auditing” and “any additional guidelines” concerning the nonprofit’s use of Fee monies; and (3) 19 authorizing the City Manager to designate a new nonprofit if concerns were to arise about how the 20 nonprofit is spending Fee monies. §§ 10.32.220(D), 10.32.235(A)(2).

21 Third, Plaintiffs claim the same Ordinance provision (§ 10.32.220) also somehow violates 22 the Charter provision giving the City Manager responsibility “for the faithful execution” of the 23 Charter and other City laws. Opp’n at 20-21 (quoting Charter § 701(d)); ¶ 143.) While difficult to 24 follow, Plaintiffs appear to be upset both with City’s general authority over how the nonprofit spends 25 Fee monies (i.e., through the terms of the Ordinance, any future Council amendments, and any future 26 City Manager regulations), and with the fact it does not have total control to direct or otherwise 27 micromanage the nonprofit’s expenditures. See Opp’n at 20-21. But there is no contradiction, and 28 no impropriety. Plaintiffs’ insistence to the contrary is obtuse, difficult to follow, and ultimately fails

1 to present a coherent theory about how the Ordinance violates Charter provisions giving the City
2 Manager responsibility for the faithful execution of City laws. (Opp. at 19-21)

3 In sum, Plaintiffs' claims that the Ordinance violates the Charter should be dismissed.

4 6. The Declaratory Relief Claim Should Be Dismissed.

5 For their sixth and final cause of action, Plaintiffs seek declaratory relief "[t]o the extent that"
6 their other claims "have not already established a remedy." ¶ 148. In its Motion, the City argued this 7 ill-defined claim is duplicative and fails for all the reasons the other claims fail. Plaintiffs disagree, 8 responding that because the Court has subject matter jurisdiction (which the City contests), this 9 necessarily means Plaintiffs are entitled to seek declaratory relief and that such relief is not 10 duplicative and must survive any challenge at the pleading stage. Opp'n at 21. This is neither a 11 correct summary of the law, nor is it supported by Plaintiffs' only cited authority. See County of 12 Santa Clara v. Trump, 267 F. Supp. 2d 1201, 1216 (N.D. Cal. 2017) (not addressing issue of 13 duplicativeness, but dismissing all plaintiffs' claims except the declaratory relief claim).

14 "A declaratory relief claim is unnecessary when an adequate remedy exists under some other 15 cause of action." Huweih v. US Bank Trust, N.A., 2017 WL 396143, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 30, 2017)
16 (cleaned up). Courts properly dismiss such duplicative claims for declaratory relief at the pleading
17 stage. Id.; Clear Conn. Corp. v. Comcast Cable Communs. Mgmt., LLC, 501 F.Supp.3d 886, 898
18 (E.D. Cal. 2020) (dismissing declaratory relief claim as redundant); Nguyen v. Wells Fargo Bank, 19 N.A., 749 F.Supp.2d 1022, 1038 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (dismissing declaratory relief claim where, among 20 other things, the plaintiff did not show "how the declaratory relief claim is not duplicative of other 21 claims in this case"). Sharma v. BMW of N. Am., LLC, 2014 WL 2795512, at *7 (N.D. Cal. June 19, 22 2014) (dismissing declaratory relief claim that "identifie[d] no controversy other than that presented 23 in plaintiffs' substantive claims for relief"). Plaintiffs' declaratory relief claim should be dismissed 24 as duplicative.

25 Moreover, the declaratory relief claim fails for the same reason as Plaintiffs' other claims 26 fail: lack of ripeness. Declaratory relief can only be granted if there is an "actual case or 27 controversy." Am. States Ins. v. Kearns, 15 F.3d 142, 143 (9th Cir. 1994). This standard involves a 28 determination of ripeness, which is judged by whether "there is a substantial controversy, between

1 parties having adverse legal interests, of sufficient immediacy and reality to warrant the issuance of 2 a declaratory judgment.” Principal Life Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 394 F.3d 665, 671 (9th Cir. 2005); see 3 also Scott, 306 F.3d at 662 (“The prudential considerations of ripeness are amplified when 4 constitutional considerations are concerned,” and federal courts should exercise jurisdiction over 5 constitutional challenges “only when the underlying constitutional issues [are] in clean-cut and 6 concrete form”). As a separate cause of action, “declaratory relief” should be dismissed.

7 III. CONCLUSION

8 For the foregoing reasons, the City respectfully requests that the Court grant its Motion to 9 Dismiss the First Amended Complaint under Rules 12(b)(1) and 12(b)(6). Since the Complaint’s 10 defects cannot be cured, the City requests that the dismissal be without leave to amend.
