DECLARATION OF MASSAD AYOOB

I, Massad Ayoob, declare as follows:

1. I am over 18 years of age, have personal knowledge of the contents of this declaration, and could competently testify thereto.

2. I have been a firearms and deadly force instructor since 1972. I have written approximately twenty books on the subject of self-defense, weapons, and management of violent criminal threats, including two recognized authoritative texts on judicious use of defensive deadly force: “In the Gravest Extreme” (Police Bookshelf, 1980) and “Deadly Force” (FW Media, 2014). I have written the forewords for numerous books in these and related fields, including two analyzing mass murders: “Surviving A Mass Killer Rampage” by Chris Bird, and “Warnings Unheeded” by Andy Brown. I have been intensively trained in homicide investigation and officer-involved shooting investigation, and have taught the latter topic in police training settings. I have also served as chair of the Firearms and Deadly Force Training Committee of the American Society of Law Enforcement Trainers for 19 years, and on the advisory board of the International Law Enforcement Educators and Trainers Association for 14 years. I have been an expert witness on firearms, firearms training standards, deadly force training standards, the dynamics of violent encounters, homicide cases, and related subject matters since 1979, and have served on a part-time basis as a sworn, armed police officer for 43 years. Exhibit A is my curriculum vitae describing the full extent of my experience in the field.

3. I have been retained by the plaintiffs to render expert opinions in this case, which are based upon my training and experience in the field and the knowledge and information I have obtained through research and study of the related topics as a self-defense and weapons expert.

The Self-Defense Utility of Large-Capacity Magazines

4. Based on my experience with and understanding of the common customs and practices of citizens licensed to carry guns in public, they often carry only the gun, without spare ammunition. Carrying a concealed weapon is an inconvenience, and carrying spare ammunition

SEILER EPSTEIN ZIEGLER & APPEGATE LLP
Attorneys at Law

1 compounds that inconvenience for many people. Average citizens are also likely to have access
2 to only to a single firearm, with a single magazine, in a home invasion situation. The average 3 citizen may be able to retrieve the loaded firearm in attempting to meet the sudden threat, but 4 will likely be unable to properly equip himself or herself with spare ammunition. In such 5 desperate moments, time is very short: awakened from sleep, clad in pajamas or nude, or 6 otherwise caught completely off guard, the person will generally have no place to put spare 7 ammunition on their person, or any time to retrieve some; it will likely be all they can do to 8 manage a pistol in one hand and a phone to call 9-1-1 in the other.

9 5. Indeed, uniformed police officers are traditionally armed against the very same 10 criminals with not just a loaded gun but also two additional magazines on their duty belt; today,
11 each of those magazines hold seventeen rounds of 9mm or fifteen rounds of .40 caliber 12 cartridges. Collective law enforcement experience has determined this to be critical to allowing 13 the officer to survive a gunfight with armed criminals. The average citizen is not trained like law 14 enforcement personnel and is thus generally not readily prepared, mentally or physically, for 15 combat with an armed criminal. As noted, they are likely to have a single firearm loaded with a 16 single magazine available, and they are more susceptible to the psychological effects of fear, 17 anxiety, and stress that naturally occur when faced with the threat of deadly violence and tend to 18 deprive one of the focus and clarity of mind necessary to make accurate shots at the attacker.

19 6. For these reasons, having a large-capacity magazine at one's disposal certainly 20 could, and likely would, make a difference in self-defense situations by providing a greater level 21 of protection in a self-defense, especially during home invasions and when facing armed 22 attackers. Thus, in my opinion, average, law-abiding citizens will be left at a severe disadvantage
23 in such situations should California's large-capacity magazine ban become effective.

24 7. This disadvantage would obviously be even more significant for anyone with a 25 physical handicap or disability hindering his or her ability to quickly and appropriately respond 26 with the movements necessary to mount a counterattack to violence. This would include those 27 disabled in military combat serving our country, injured in the line of duty as a law enforcement

1 officer, the aged and infirm, and anyone else further compromised in the ability to defend 2 himself or herself on account of a physical limitation that interferes with his or her ability to 3 carry spare ammunition, or load or reload a defensive firearm during an attack.
4

5 The Ineffectiveness of Large-Capacity Magazine Bans

6 8. I have concluded after much research and consideration based upon my 7 experience that bans on the possession of large-capacity magazines are generally ineffective in 8 reducing the prevalence of mass shootings or the injuries inflicted during such incidents.

9 9. While many seem to believe or assume that large-capacity magazines are a key
10 feature or causal factor in mass shootings, the facts do not bear that out. In reality, mass shooters 11 either have not used or have not needed to use large-capacity magazines to carry out their plots,
12 because the advantages they gain through planning and attacking at the victims' most vulnerable 13 moments mean they can simply use multiple smaller capacity magazines, multiple guns, or just 14 reload during their shooting, and thus that they have been or would have been able to inflict the 15 same degree of harm without 'high capacity' magazines." The documented evidence of such 16 instances shows the rate of the shooters' firing (the period between each shot) has generally been 17 as long as it would take to reload a gun.

18 10. One of the leading researchers on mass murders and police response to such 19 incidents is Ron Borsch of the Southeast Area Law Enforcement Academy (SEALE Academy).
20 Mr. Borsch has articulated the "Stopwatch of Death" factor in such incidents, through which he 21 has explained that the effective time-to-murder ratio may range from seven to eight per minute or 22 as low as only one every two minutes. See [https://www.policeone.com/police-products/police-
23 technology/Emergency-Response/articles/1349058-The-Stopwatch-of-Death/](https://www.policeone.com/police-products/police-technology/Emergency-Response/articles/1349058-The-Stopwatch-of-Death/). In either case, this 24 is ample time for an armed attacker to exchange an empty ten-round magazine for a full one.
25 Unfortunately, it is possible for the homicidal criminal to rack up a horrendous body count with a 26 two-shot capacity. Indeed, over a hundred years ago in the infamous Brunswick Massacre in 27 Georgia, the murderer tragically shot 32 people, seven fatally, with a double-barrel shotgun. See 28

1 <https://americanhandgunner.com/the-brunswick-massacre/>.

2 11. Additionally, one theory that has been advanced in favor of magazine bans is that,
3 theoretically, a mass murderer would have to reload more often and could perhaps be jumped 4 and disarmed while reloading. While this has been known to be successful on occasion, it has 5 also failed dramatically and tragically in the past. See my article on this topic:

6 <https://americanhandgunner.com/disarming-mass-murderers/> .

7 12. What the actual research and statistics bear out is that the incidence of mass
8 shootings and the harm their perpetrators inflict is not the product of the existence of the pre-
9 2000 large-capacity magazines that California seeks to ban, or the existence of large-capacity
10 magazines in general. Rather, the facts and my research and experience in this field demonstrate 11 that the occurrence of these tragic, though fortunately rare, incidents and the harm they inflict, is 12 the product of the perpetrators' homicidal state of mind bent upon killing their targets with 13 calculated and deliberate steps carefully designed to achieve that goal regardless of their ability 14 to access or use large-capacity magazines.

15 I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on 16 June 11, 2017.
