¹ Some of the surveyed laws applied certain weapons restrictions on the basis of race, nationality, or enslaved status and were drafted before the Thirteenth Amendment’s abolition of slavery and the Fourteenth Amendment’s Equal Protection Clause. The Attorney General notes his strong disagreement with racial and other improper discrimination that existed in some such laws, which stands in stark contrast to California’s commonsense firearm laws that are generally applicable and designed to justly and equitably protect all Californians. These historical laws are provided only as additional examples of laws identifying certain weapons for heightened regulation, and they are consistent in this respect with the other generally applicable laws. The Attorney General in no way condones laws that target certain groups on the basis of race, gender, nationality, or other protected characteristic, but these laws are part of the history of the Second Amendment and may be relevant to determining the traditions that define its scope, even if they are inconsistent with other constitutional guarantees. See Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2150–51 (citing Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393 (1857) (enslaved party)). Reference to a particular historical analogue does not endorse the analogue’s application in the past; rather, it can confirm the existence of the doctrine and corresponding limitation on the Second Amendment right. See William Baude & Stephen E. Sachs, Originalism & the Law of the Past, 37 L. & Hist. Rev. 809, 813 (2019) (“Present law typically gives force to past doctrine, not to that doctrine’s role in past society.”); see also Adam Winkler, Racist Gun Laws and the Second Amendment, 135 Harv. L. Rev. F. 537, 539 (2022) (“Yet there will arise situations in which even a racially discriminatory gun law of the past might provide some basis for recognizing that lawmakers have a degree of regulatory authority over guns.”).
