EXPERT REPORT AND DECLARATION OF ROBERT J. SPITZER

I, Robert Spitzer, have been asked by the Office of the Attorney General of the California Department of Justice to prepare an expert report on the history of firearms restrictions pertaining to the regulatory history of weapons carrying, including restrictions on concealed weapons carrying, on open weapons carrying, restrictions extending to long guns, weapons brandishing and display, and weapons licensing. This report is based on my own personal knowledge, research, and experience, and, if I am called as a witness, I could and would testify competently to the truth of the matters discussed in this report.

PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATIONS

I am a Distinguished Service Professor of Political Science Emeritus at the State University of New York at Cortland and am an adjunct professor at the College of William and Mary School of Law. I was also a visiting professor at Cornell University for thirty years. I earned my Ph.D. in Government from Cornell University. I reside in Williamsburg, Virginia. A copy of my curriculum vitae is attached as Exhibit A to this Report.

I have been studying and writing about gun policy for over thirty years. My first publication on the subject appeared in 1985. Since then, I have published six books and over one hundred articles, papers, and essays on gun policy. My expertise includes the history of gun laws, gun policy in American politics, and related historical, legal, political, and criminological issues. My book, The Politics of Gun Control, has been in print since its initial publication in 1995. It examines firearms policy in the United States through the lenses of history, law, politics, and criminology. The eighth edition of the book was published in 2021 by Routledge Publishers. My two most recent books on gun policy, Guns across America (Oxford University Press, 2015) and The Gun Dilemma (Oxford University Press, 2023),

1 both deal extensively with the study of historical gun laws. A complete list of my 2 publications, including those publications authored by me within the last ten years, 3 is included in my CV, attached to this report as Exhibit A. I am frequently 4 interviewed and quoted in the national and international media on gun-related 5 matters. For over twenty years, I have been a member of the National Rifle 6 Association and of Brady (formerly, the Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun 7 Violence).

8 I have been retained to submit written testimony and serve as an expert 9 witness in the following cases, including the instant matter: Worman v. Healey, No.

8 I. INTRODUCTION

9 The carrying of weapons of all sorts, but especially guns, fighting knives 10 (long, thin-bladed knives), and various types of clubs has been subject to wide-11 ranging regulation and restriction from the seventeenth century through the early 12 twentieth century. It is now well known that restrictions on the concealed carrying 13 of these weapons were ubiquitous in America. Less well known, however, is that 14 the open carrying of weapons was often restricted, even extending to long guns. In 15 addition, the states also restricted the public carrying of weapons through laws 16 criminalizing the brandishing and display of weapons. Further, a variety of weapons 17 licensing laws were enacted in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries that 18 allowed for conditional carrying, subject to a valid license issued by the 19 government. The rise of licensing as a regulatory technique as examined later in 20 this report often followed instances where the prevailing legal standard had been to 21 ban the activity or practice outright—banning concealed carrying, banning weapons 22 discharge in cities and towns, banning weapons from marginalized groups, etc. The 23 governing units enacting licensing for these activities were now allowing firearms 24 or other dangerous weapons or substances to be used or possessed with the granting 25 of a license to do so, when their possession or use would otherwise be subject to 26 criminal penalties. The proliferation of licensing represented in most instances a 27 more flexible form of government regulation of the activities and weapons in 28 question, though carry restrictions also persisted.

1 Taken together, these numerous and varied laws make clear that the default in 2 American history was weapons regulation and restriction, especially once 3 individuals left their domiciles. Perhaps most significant (and surprising) is the 4 extensive regulation of open weapons carrying, in that more than half of the states 5 restricted, partially or completely, open weapons carrying or any weapons carrying, 6 as discussed below.

8 II. REGULATORY HISTORY OF WEAPONS CARRYING

9 A. Restrictions on Concealed Carrying of Weapons

10 Carry restriction laws were widely enacted from the 1600s through the start of 11 the twentieth century, spanning over three centuries. As early as 1686, New Jersey 12 enacted a law against wearing weapons “privately” because they induced “great 13 Fear and Quarrels.” But this law also penalized open weapons carrying as well 14 saying: “no planter shall ride or go armed with sword, pistol or dagger, upon the 15 penalty.”² Massachusetts followed in 1750, penalizing any assemblage of twelve or 16 more persons, whether the weapons were concealed or openly carried, “being 17 armed with clubs or other weapons.”³ Virginia⁴ and North Carolina⁵ passed similar 18 laws incorporating penalties for openly carrying weapons in 1786 and 1792, 19 respectively. (See Exhibits B, C, and E.) In the 1800s, as interpersonal violence and 20 gun carrying spread, 43 states (including the District of Columbia) joined the list; 3 21 more did so in the early 1900s. The rise in the circulation of handguns in society, 22 along with the increased circulation of fighting knives (most notoriously the Bowie

2 carry restrictions, beginning in the early 1800s but then escalating in the post-Civil 3 War period with the spread of multi-shot handguns, precisely because of their 4 contribution to increasing interpersonal violence.⁶ By the start of the twentieth 5 century, every state in the country (with the apparent sole exception of New 6 Hampshire) prohibited or severely restricted concealed gun and other weapons 7 carrying.⁷

8 B. Open Carry Weapons Restrictions

9 Ubiquitous restrictions on concealed weapons carrying are now well-known.
10 Less well-known, however, is that many of the laws enacted to restrict concealed 11 weapons carrying also extended restrictions to open weapons carrying, or simply 12 barring any weapons carrying. In all, at least 29 states enacted at least 53 laws 13 restricting or extending to the open carrying of weapons (see Exhibits E and H).

14 From the early 1800s up to 1860, at least 5 states (including D.C.) enacted 15 laws barring or restricting the carrying of named weapons, whether concealed or 16 open. Georgia enacted a law in 1837 restricting both the carrying and sale of named 17 weapons:

18 [I]t shall not be lawful for any merchant, or vender of wares or merchandize 19 in this State, or any other person or persons whatsoever, to sell, or offer to 20 sell, or to keep, or to have about their person or elsewhere, any of the 21 hereinafter described weapons, to wit: Bowie, or any other kinds of knives, 22 manufactured and sold for the purpose of wearing, or carrying the same as arms of offence or defense, pistols, dirks, sword canes, spears, &c.⁸

27 ⁸ The very title of this law proclaims the justification for its enactment: 1837
28 Ga. Acts 90, An Act to Guard and Protect the Citizens of this State, Against the Unwarrantable and too Prevalent use of Deadly Weapons, §§ 1-4.

1 Florida enacted an 1838 law that criminalized the concealed carrying of named 2 weapons, but also added that “all persons carrying said weapons openly shall pay” a 3 then-considerable regulatory tax of “ten dollars per annum.”⁹

4 An 1851 Pennsylvania law for the borough of York defined as a felony the 5 willful and malicious carrying of “any pistol, gun, dirk knife, slung shot, or deadly 6 weapon.”¹⁰ (Note that this law applied to any firearm, not just handguns.)

7 An 1852 Hawaii law criminalized the carrying or “found armed with” any of a 8 list of deadly weapons.¹¹ An 1858 measure for the District of Columbia made it 9 unlawful “for any person or persons to carry or have concealed about their persons 10 any deadly or dangerous weapons, such as dagger, pistol, bowie knife, dirk knife, or 11 dirk, colt, slungshot, or brass or other metal knuckles.”¹²

12 In a pattern similar to the enactment of concealed carry laws, open carry 13 restrictions increased in frequency in the latter half of the nineteenth century. From 14 1860 to 1900, 24 states enacted anti-open carry laws (see Exhibits E and H), and 9 15 states did so in the early 1900s (a few states enacted laws in both centuries).

16 In 1871, Texas enacted this anti-carry law: “any person carrying on or about 17 his person, saddle, or in his saddle bags, any pistol, dirk, dagger, slung-shot, sword-18 cane, spear, brass-knuckles, bowie-knife” unless for provable self-defense or in 19 service to the government was guilty of a crime.¹³ Another typical law was an 1875

2 kind whatever, or any dirk, butcher or bowie knife, or a sword or a spear in a cane, 3 brass or metal knucks, or razor, as a weapon, shall be adjudged guilty of a 4 misdemeanor.”¹⁴ An 1871 Jersey City, New Jersey law made it unlawful for any 5 person “to carry, have, or keep concealed on his or her person any instrument or 6 weapon commonly known as a slung-shot, billy, sand-club or metal knuckles, and 7 any dirk or dagger (not contained as a blade of a pocket-knife), and loaded pistol or 8 other dangerous weapon.”¹⁵ Similarly, an 1872 Nebraska City, Nebraska law 9 declared it to be “unlawful for any person to carry, openly or concealed, any 10 musket, rifle, shot gun, pistol, sabre, sword, bowie knife, dirk, sword cane, billy 11 slung shot, brass or other metallic knuckles, or any other dangerous or deadly 12 weapons.”¹⁶

13 C. Long Gun/Any Gun Carry Restrictions

14 In addition to anti-concealed weapons carrying laws and open weapons 15 carrying restrictions, at least 22 states enacted 36 laws during this period 16 specifically restricting the carrying of long guns or any kind of firearm (such as the 17 1851 Pennsylvania law cited above; see Exhibits E and H). Obviously, this meant 18 that long guns, by their nature, could not be carried in any concealed manner either.
19 Some of these laws were limited by applying, for example, to times and places of 20 elections, other public gatherings, or to any who might be intoxicated. Other laws 21 imposed no such limitations. Some applied only to cities and towns, but others were 22 statewide measures. These laws generally cited exceptions for travelers, law

2 laws in this category, 19 of them were passed from the 1850s to 1899; another 7 3 were passed in the early 1900s (a few states passed laws in both periods). Generally 4 speaking, these states and laws also restricted concealed weapons carrying as well 5 (though, as noted earlier, concealed carry was restricted by every state in the 6 country except for one).

7 An 1868 Florida law subjected to criminal penalties anyone who “shall carry 8 arms of any kind whatever, secretly, on or about their person, or whoever shall have 9 about or on their person any dirk, pistol or other arm or weapon.”¹⁷ An 1878 Los 10 Angeles, California law said that, except for travelers, no person “shall wear or 11 carry any dirk, pistol, sword in a cane, slung-shot, or other dangerous or deadly 12 weapon, concealed or otherwise, within the corporate limits of said city.”¹⁸ An 1881 13 Kansas state law required cities to “prohibit and punish the carrying of firearms, or 14 other dangerous or deadly weapons, concealed or otherwise.”¹⁹

15 An 1890 Oklahoma law made it unlawful for anyone “to carry upon or about 16 his person any pistol, revolver, bowie knife, dirk knife, loaded cane, billy, metal 17 knuckles, or any other offensive or defensive weapon.”²⁰ Some of the laws did not 18 specifically bar the carrying of every type of firearm, but included a phrase like “or 19 any other dangerous or deadly weapon of like kind or character.”²¹ One may

2 III. WEAPONS BRANDISHING AND DISPLAY LAWS

3 Two types of laws penalized the mere public appearance of weapons (short 4 of their actual use), including but not limited to firearms, in two circumstances: the 5 brandishing of weapons—that is, to display them in the presence of others and to do 6 so in a menacing or threatening manner; and the mere display of weapons (i.e. that 7 they simply can be seen) in the presence of others. A 1642 provision in the colony 8 of New Netherland (soon to be New York) stated: “No one shall presume to draw a 9 knife much less to wound any person, under . . . penalty.”²² This reference did not 10 mention firearms but allowed for penalties for merely drawing or displaying a 11 weapon, even if no brandishing or wounding occurred. Similarly, a 1786 12 Massachusetts law criminalized the mere assemblage of “any persons to the number 13 of twelve, or more, being armed with clubs or other weapons.” If they did not 14 disperse within an hour of being warned, they could be subject to arrest.²³ That is, 15 the mere appearance of such an armed assemblage in public was sufficient to justify 16 legal action against them, although other provisions of the act also penalized such 17 groups who also behaved in a threatening manner.

18 Some of these American laws mirrored the British Statute of Northampton, 19 where “[t]he very fact of carrying a firearm was considered to be in terror of the 20 people and was therefore prohibited by that statute.”²⁴ For example, the 1686 New

 2 complaints by the inhabitants of [the] Province, that several persons [were] wearing 3 swords, daggers, pistols, dirks, stilladoes, skeines [small Irish-derived swords], or 4 any other unusual or unlawful weapons.”²⁵ As noted earlier, this law penalized the 5 “private” wearing of weapons but also their open carrying. A 1694 Massachusetts 6 law subjected to arrest any who “shall ride or go armed Offensively before any of 7 their Majesties Justices, or other Their Officers or Ministers doing their Office or 8 elsewhere.”²⁶ New Hampshire enacted a law in 1699 (and in 1708) that punished 9 anyone who “went armed offensively” or “put his Majesty’s subjects in fear.”²⁷ 10 Virginia enacted a measure in 1786 saying that no man was to “go nor ride armed 11 by night nor by day, in fair or markets, or in other places, in terror of the Country, 12 upon pain of being arrested and committed to prison.”²⁸ North Carolina enacted a 13 very similar measure in 1792, saying that no man shall “go nor ride armed by night 14 nor by day, in fairs, markets nor in the presence of the King’s Justices, or other 15 ministers, nor in no part elsewhere.”²⁹ Massachusetts added to its existing firearms 16 regulations in a 1795 law that authorized justices of the peace to arrest those who 17 “ride or go armed offensively, to the fear or terror of the good citizens.”³⁰ In 1801, 18 Tennessee enacted a law saying that no one was to “go armed to the terror of the 19 people, or privately carry any dirk, large knife, pistol, or any other dangerous

1 weapon, to the fear or terror of any person.”³¹ Maine’s 1821 law outlawed 2 “affrayers, rioters, disturbers or breakers of the peace, and such as shall ride or go 3 armed offensively, to the fear or terror of the good citizens.”³²

4 Note that Virginia, Massachusetts, Tennessee, and Maine all invoked some 5 version of the old British phrase “to the terror of the people” with New 6 Hampshire’s law referencing the similar “fear” of the public. And in the Tennessee 7 law, concealed weapons carrying was also identified as a source of “terror.”

8 These laws, it turns out, were ubiquitous. Between the late 1600s and the 9 early 1930s, a total of at least 36 states and territories enacted laws that penalized 10 weapons brandishing or display (see Table 1, below). Of these, 21 states 11 criminalized weapons brandishing³³ by combining two elements: the display of the 12 weapon plus the manner of the display. For example, an 1840 Mississippi law said 13 that “any person having or carrying any . . . deadly weapon” who “shall, in the 14 presence of three or more persons, exhibit the same in a rude, angry and threatening 15 manner, not in self-defense” shall be subject to prosecution.³⁴ Note the two key 16 elements: the “exhibit” or display of the weapon combined with doing so “in a rude, 17 angry and threatening manner,” revealing a criminal intent as invoked by the terms

13 and Wyoming, appear in both lists totaling 40 laws in 36 states.

14 A total of 19 states enacted laws that penalized the mere display or wearing 15 of firearms and other “deadly weapons.”³⁵ (While 36 states enacted one of these 16 types of laws, four states—Arkansas, Indiana, New Mexico, and Wyoming—17 enacted both display and brandishing laws, for a total of 40 laws in 36 states.)
18 Several state laws in this category used the phrase “to point,” as was true for a 19 couple of laws in the brandish category, but the laws here had additional language 20 that made clear that the intent of the person was irrelevant. Bearing in mind that the 21 definition of brandishing is “to shake or wave (something, such as a weapon) 22 menacingly,”³⁶ these latter laws contemplate a violation for the act of pointing 23 without any evidence of malice, and to forestall possible excuses. An 1880 Georgia 24 law, for example, made it a crime to “point or aim” a gun but added “loaded or

1 unloaded,³⁷ a distinction not made in the brandishing laws. Another criminalized 2 gun pointing “in jest or otherwise”;³⁸ another added “with or without malice”;³⁹ a 3 fourth said “in fun or otherwise.”⁴⁰ The thrust of these laws is that intent does not 4 matter. The mere act of display is sufficient to warrant prosecution. Invariably, 5 these laws made exceptions for justifiable arms carrying including weapons 6 transport, travelers carrying weapons who are passing through an area, law 7 enforcement, the military, militias, and cases of self-defense.

8 IV. WEAPONS LICENSING

9 Weapons licensing or permitting was a widespread and varied regulatory tool 10 utilized in America. By one definition, licensing is the “permission by competent 11 authority to do an act which, without such permission, would be illegal. . . .”⁴¹ 12 Despite the difference of hundreds of years, licensing in early America functioned 13 largely in the way it functions today. At least 48 states (including D.C.) utilized 14 some type of weapons licensing or equivalent policy technique (see Exhibit G).

15 State and local laws encompassing the licensing, permitting, or registration of 16 dangerous weapons and substances became wide-ranging and widespread in the 17 1800s and early 1900s. These laws mostly addressed those weapons (discussed 18 above) that posed a threat to public safety: concealable weapons, including 19 handguns, fighting knives, various types of clubs, and explosives (ranging from 20 firecrackers to gun powder to nitroglycerine after its invention).

21 At least 29 states enacted 61 licensing requirement laws for individuals as a 22 pre-requisite for their weapons ownership during this time (see Exhibits F and G); 23 17 of those states did so in the 1800s. At least 26 states enacted laws to regulate

1 firearms discharging through licensing, with 13 of those states doing so from the 2 1700s up to the start of the Civil War, and another 20 states doing so between the 3 end of the Civil War and 1900 (some states enacted laws in both periods). At least 4 12 states licensed hunting with firearms from the post-Civil War period through the 5 early 1900s. At least 21 states licensed the commercial sale, transport, or firing of 6 weapons at locations like shooting galleries. At least 21 states licensed the 7 possession, handling, or transport of gunpowder and other explosives. At least 15 8 states required those selling or otherwise providing weapons to individuals to 9 record and keep information pertaining to the buyers of weapons.

10 At least 14 states imposed licensing on marginalized groups (variously 11 including Native Americans, felons, non-citizens, non-state residents, or minors). In 12 the pre-Civil War period, at least 12 states imposed licensing on enslaved persons 13 or free Blacks.

14 Most weapons licensing laws pertaining to weapons carrying, discharge, 15 commercial sales, and gunpowder possession, handling, and transport, generally 16 were applied to populated areas, since misuse of weapons and gunpowder posed a 17 far greater risk to public safety in areas where larger numbers of people lived in 18 close proximity to each other, as compared to sparsely populated rural areas.

19 These licensing categories were instances where the prevailing legal standard 20 had been to ban the activity or practice outright—banning concealed carrying, 21 banning weapons discharge in cities and towns, banning weapons from 22 marginalized groups, etc., as examined elsewhere in this document. In some 23 instances, licensing schemes replaced carry bans, though in other instances not. The 24 jurisdictions enacting licensing for these activities were now allowing firearms or 25 other dangerous weapons or substances to be used or possessed with the granting of 26 a license to do so, when their possession or use would otherwise be subject to 27 criminal penalties. The proliferation of licensing represented in most instances a 28 more flexible form of government regulation of the activities and weapons in 1 question.

2 With regard to concealed carry of pistols and other dangerous weapons, as 3 noted earlier, from the 1700s through the early 1900s virtually every state in the 4 country restricted or criminalized such carrying.⁴² With the spread of licensing 5 requirements in the post-Civil War nineteenth century, however, jurisdictions were 6 now allowing legal weapons carrying, subject to the review criteria and 7 discretionary judgment of local officials who were empowered to grant carry 8 licenses. The criteria for the granting of these licenses were generally highly 9 discretionary for the individuals or bodies granting them. In some laws, no criteria 10 were specified; in others, the criteria were vague or broad, but often included 11 wording that the applicants must be persons of good character or sound judgment, 12 again emphasizing the determinative judgment of those granting the licenses. They 13 usually set a time limit for permits, ranging from a month to a year (see below).

14 Regarding hunting licenses, many earlier laws criminalized various hunting 15 practices, dating back to the 1600s, for reasons related to protection of private 16 property and lands, conservation, and safety.⁴³ The hunting related laws listed here 17 are all instances where hunting was allowed through permitting by a government 18 entity, meaning that the permits or licenses could be withdrawn if the licensees 19 violated whatever rules the laws imposed (such as hunting out of season). Licensing 20 related to Indigenous people, enslaved persons, and free persons of color is 21 discussed in more detail below. All of these types of laws are detailed in Exhibits F 22 and G.

1 of concealed carrying of handguns and other named weapons, including “any other 2 dangerous or deadly weapon” in St. Louis by means of “written permission from 3 the Mayor.”⁴⁴ St. Louis enacted its own municipal version of this law in 1892.⁴⁵ A 4 similar measure was enacted for Kansas City, Missouri, in 1880.⁴⁶ Jersey City, New 5 Jersey enacted a licensing scheme in 1871 for concealed weapons carrying of 6 pistols and other dangerous weapons, defined in the law as “any gun, pistol, 7 cannon, or fowling piece or other fire-arms. . . .”⁴⁷ As this wording makes clear, this 8 extended to long guns as well (a fowling piece is a long-barreled shotgun for 9 shooting small animals⁴⁸).

10 Jersey City’s 1873 law laid out a broadly discretionary set of criteria for 11 granting licenses, described below (as determined by the city’s municipal court), 12 that bears great similarity to contemporary gun licensing schemes:

13 The Municipal Court of Jersey City may grant permits to carry any of the 14 weapons named in the first section to such persons as should, from the nature 15 of their profession, business or occupation, or from peculiar circumstances, 16 be allowed so to do; and may, in granting such permits, impose such conditions and restrictions in each case as to the court shall seem proper.⁴⁹

1 The Jersey City ordinance added that carry permits would not be granted “to any 2 person until the court is satisfied that such person is temperate, of adult age, and 3 capable of exercising self-control.”⁵⁰

4 Hyde Park, Illinois enacted a similar licensing law for concealed weapons 5 carrying, including handguns, in 1876. In this instance, the licenses were granted 6 “by written permission of the Captain of Police.”⁵¹ Evanston, Illinois’s concealed 7 carry licensing law of 1893 granted licensing issuance authority to the city mayor.⁵²

8 New York City criminalized the carrying of “a pistol of any description 9 concealed on his person” in 1881 but provided for a legal carry license exception:

10 Any person, except as provided in this article, who has occasion to carry a 11 pistol for his protection, may apply to the officer in command at the station-12 house of the precinct where he resided, and such officer, if satisfied that the 13 applicant is a proper and law abiding person, shall give said person a 14 recommendation to the superintendent of police, or the inspector in command 15 at the central office in the absence of the superintendent, who shall issue a 16 permit to the said person allowing him to carry a pistol of any description.⁵³

17 This provision also allowed for non-residents who had occasional business in 18 the city to apply for permits as well. An 1884 New York state law barred the 19 carrying or possession of named weapons, including fighting knives and types of 20 1873.

2 could only be granted for up to one year and were subject to revocation “at the 3 pleasure of the mayor.”⁵⁴ A year later, the law was extended to all cities in the state 4 and included “any pistol or other firearms of any kind.”⁵⁵ (This would have 5 included long guns as it did not specify only concealed carry.) In 1891, the state 6 extended permitting to Buffalo covering handguns and other dangerous weapons.⁵⁶

7 Wheeling, West Virginia enacted a law in 1881 making it “unlawful for any 8 person to carry” various named weapons, including a “colt” revolver, or to “carry 9 about his person, hid from common observation” any pistol or other named weapon 10 without a permit from the mayor.⁵⁷ Under the heading “License,” an 1882 law 11 applying to St. Paul, Minnesota criminalized any concealed weapons carrying, 12 absent such licensing.⁵⁸

13 An 1888 Salt Lake City, Utah ordinance barred the carrying of “any concealed 14 weapon” unless the person obtained a permit from the city mayor.⁵⁹ New Haven, 15 Connecticut enacted a similar anti-carry law in 1890, extending to pistols, unless

1 the person first obtained a permit either from the mayor or police superintendent.⁶⁰
2 Oakland, California enacted a similar law in 1890 making it unlawful “to wear or 3 carry concealed about his person” a pistol or other listed weapon unless the person 4 obtained a permit from the mayor. The permit was good for up to a year and could 5 be granted to “any peaceable person whose profession or occupation may require 6 him to be out at late hours of the night to carry a concealed deadly weapon upon his 7 person.”⁶¹ The California cities of Stockton (1891)⁶² and Fresno (1896)⁶³ did the 8 same.

9 A law passed by the U.S. Congress in 1892 for the District of Columbia 10 criminalized the concealed carry of “any deadly or dangerous weapons,” including 11 pistols, unless granted a permit by a judge of the police court “for a period of not 12 more than one month at any one time, upon satisfactory proof to him of the 13 necessity for the granting thereof. . . .”⁶⁴ Florida’s 1893 law made it “unlawful to 14 carry or own a Winchester or other repeating rifle or without first taking out a 15 license from the County Commissioner. . . .” In addition, the law specified that the 16 applicant “shall give a bond running to the Governor of the State in the sum of one 17 hundred dollars, conditioned on the proper and legitimate use of the gun with 18 sureties to be approved by the County Commissioners,” along with “a record of the 19 name of the person taking out such license, the name of the maker of the firearm so

2 Montana enacted a wide-ranging state licensing law in 1895 that threatened 3 imprisonment and fines for anyone “who brings into this state an armed person or 4 armed body of men for the preservation of the peace or the suppression of domestic 5 violence, except at the solicitation and by the permission of the legislative assembly 6 or of the governor. . . .”⁶⁶

7 A state law in Nebraska granted the mayor of Lincoln the authority to issue 8 concealed carry weapons licenses good for a year “at his pleasure” in 1895.⁶⁷ The 9 city of Spokane, Washington criminalized the concealed carrying of “either a 10 revolver, pistol or other fire-arms” unless persons obtained a “special written permit 11 from the Superior Court” to do so.⁶⁸ Milwaukee, Wisconsin enacted a permitting 12 system in 1896 for persons to carry otherwise barred various dangerous weapons 13 including “any pistol or colt” if the city police chief granted a license if “it is 14 necessary for the personal safety of such person or for the safety of his property or 15 of the property with which he may be entrusted, to carry such weapon.” The chief 16 could also “revoke such permit at any time.”⁶⁹

1 1905 New Jersey enacted a state law licensing concealed weapons carrying for a 2 year “unless sooner revoked by the officer or body granting the same.”⁷⁰ Licensing 3 was extended to long guns—machine guns and automatic rifles—in New Jersey in 4 1927⁷¹ and 1934.⁷² (A number of the 32 states that enacted anti-machine gun laws
5 in the 1920s and 1930s made exceptions for possession via licensing. See Exhibit
6 D.)

7 In 1906 a Massachusetts state law noted that prosecution for carrying “a 8 loaded pistol or revolver” did not apply to those with a license.⁷³ It extended 9 licensing to a variety of guns in 1927.⁷⁴ In 1908 Virginia enacted a dangerous 10 weapons concealed carry permit law, with permits granted for one year “upon a 11 written application and satisfactory proof of the good character and necessity of the 12 applicant to carry concealed weapon.”⁷⁵ It extended the permitting process in 13 1926.⁷⁶ Georgia enacted a detailed handgun permitting system in 1910.⁷⁷
14 Thereafter, permitting was enacted in states (not including those that enacted 15 permitting in the 1800s, most of which also enacted permitting laws in the 1900s as

6 Another Philadelphia ordinance to prevent “mischief [that] may happen by shooting

1 Another 20 states enacted such laws from the end of the Civil War up to the end of 2 the 1800s (not including states that enacted laws both before and after the Civil 3 War: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Louisiana, New Jersey, Oregon, 4 Texas, Vermont, Washington State, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming).
5 Most of them applied to specified cities and towns within their states (see Exhibits

7 C. Commercial Licensing

8 As noted, a total of at least 21 states enacted commercial licensing laws for 9 firearms-related commercial activities with 16 states doing so throughout the 1800s, 10 and 9 states doing so in the early 1900s (some states enacted laws in both 11 centuries). The earliest commercial licensing law was an 1814 Illinois measure that 12 made it unlawful for whites to engage in commercial activities with Native 13 Americans, including guns or other weapons, unless they obtained a license from 14 the governor.¹⁰⁴ A century later, a Chicago ordinance imposed a licensing 15 requirement both on persons or entities to sell concealable weapons, and also a 16 licensing requirement to those seeking to buy them.¹⁰⁵ An 1854 law for San 17 Francisco, California licensed commercial shooting galleries.¹⁰⁶ Indeed, at least 10 18 of the states in this category enacted shooting gallery licensing requirements.

1 In fact, with one exception, every state in the country enacted one or more 2 gunpowder laws from the seventeenth century through the start of the twentieth 3 century.¹⁰⁷ One element of this regulation was gunpowder licensing, extending 4 either to its sale or its transport, acquisition, handling , or storage, or sometimes all 5 of these; at least 21 states enacted such licensing from the 1700s through the early 6 1900s.

7 E. Weapons Sellers Recording Purchases

8 Aside from direct licensing of weapons purchasers by a government official or 9 entity, at least 15 states required those who sold or otherwise transferred guns 10 (mostly handguns) or other weapons to others to record information about the 11 buyer, with that information to be maintained and subject to possible later 12 examination. This regulatory mechanism put the burden of information collection 13 and maintenance on the seller or dealer, rather than directly on the government, 14 though it served the same purpose: to acquire and maintain information about those 15 who obtained the weapons in question and when, for future reference or inspection 16 by government officials or others. In some instances these requirements existed 17 along with direct governmental licensing.

18 In 1885, Illinois enacted this registration requirement for weapons dealers:

19 All persons dealing in deadly weapons, hereinbefore mentioned, at retail 20 within this State shall keep a register of all such weapons sold or given away 21 by them. Such register shall contain the date of the sale or gift, the name and 22 age of the person to whom the weapon is sold or given, the price of the said 23 weapon, and the purpose for which it is purchased or obtained. The said register shall be in the following form. [Form of Register] Said register is to 1 be kept open for inspection of the public. . . .¹⁰⁸

2 With minor variations, this law was typical of such requirements. For example, a 3 1911 Colorado law offered this detailed set of instructions:

4 Every individual, firm or corporation engaged . . . in the retail sale, rental or 5 exchange of firearms, pistols or revolvers, shall keep a record of each pistol 6 or revolver sold, rented or exchanged at retail. Said record shall be made at 7 the time of the transaction in a book kept for that purpose and shall include 8 the name of the person to whom the pistol or revolver is sold or rented, or 9 with whom exchanged; his age, occupation, residence, and, if residing in a 10 city, the street and number therein where he resides; the make, calibre and 11 finish of said pistol, or revolver, together with its number and serial letter, if 12 any; the date of the sale, rental or exchange of said revolver; and the name of 13 the employee or other person making such sale, rental or exchange. Said 14 record-book shall be open at all times to the inspection of any duly 15 authorized police officer.¹⁰⁹

16 A 1911 New York law required every person selling any handgun to 17 maintain a register “at the time of sale, the date of sale, name, age, occupation and 18 residence of every purchaser of such a pistol, revolver or other firearm, together 19 with the calibre, make, model, manufacturer’s number or other mark of 20 identification on such pistol, revolver or other firearm.”¹¹⁰ The purchaser also had 21 to produce a permit at the time of the transaction, with the seller to note the permit 22 information.

23 F. Licensing Pertaining to Named Groups

24 The licensing of “Named Groups” referenced in Exhibit G includes the 25 granting of weapons licenses to non-state residents, non-citizens, minors, felons, the 26 intoxicated (who stood to lose their licenses), and Native Americans/Indigenous 27 people. Licensing the sale of weapons to Native Americans might seem 1 paradoxical, since white leaders fought protracted conflicts with Natives from the 2 1600s through the end of the nineteenth century. But whites also traded arms with 3 Natives throughout this entire period, as they sought profitability, access to highly 4 desired goods made available by Indians, and security alliances with some Indians 5 through the supplying of weapons. This steady and enduring trade revealed “the 6 high degree of interdependence between Indians and Euro-Americans.”¹¹¹

7 As for licensing related to enslaved persons and free persons of color (listed 8 separately in Exhibit G), it is well understood that white racist regimes before the 9 Civil War were frantic to keep weapons out of the hands of enslaved persons. The 10 laws listed here, however, are all instances when enslaved persons or free persons 11 of color were allowed to have possession of weapons under listed, restricted 12 circumstances through licensing in the pre-Civil War era. Some whites who owned 13 enslaved persons sought the convenience of allowing the enslaved to carry weapons 14 for hunting or other purposes designated by, and often under the supervision of, the 15 white owners.

16 The fact that groups treated as marginalized in prior centuries—especially 17 African Americans and Native Americans—were authorized to gain even limited 18 access to dangerous weapons through licensing may seem incompatible with an 19 otherwise racist tradition aimed at subjugating these groups, but such measures 20 reflect the fact that it was in the interest of whites to allow weapons acquisition to 21 these groups under limited, controlled circumstances.

22 G. The Lessons of Licensing

23 The foregoing analysis demonstrates that licensing and registration 24 requirements were commonly and ubiquitously applied to guns and other dangerous 25 weapons, extending to gun ownership as well as every aspect of sales. With some 26 exceptions, the primary focus was on handguns for the obvious reason that they

27
28 ¹¹¹ David J. Silverman, Thundersticks (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2016), 15-16 and passim.

1 were the weapons that posed the most significant threat to public safety and good 2 order from the 1700s through the early 1900s. Long guns posed no similar threat 3 during this time, even though some anti-carry/licensing laws extended to all 4 firearms, not just concealable handguns. (Note that firearm discharge licensing laws 5 generally applied to all guns, not just handguns.)

6 Moreover, when long guns did appear in appreciable numbers in civil society 7 and began to pose a criminal and public safety problem, prohibitions and licensing 8 were rapidly enacted. The long guns in question—the Tommy gun, the BAR, and 9 sawed-off shotguns (i.e. long guns modified after purchase)—were restricted in at 10 least 32 states in the 1920s and early 1930s, and between 8 and 11 states imposed 11 similar restrictions on semi-automatic long guns during this same time (see Exhibits 12 B and D). Given the wide-ranging and extensive nature of licensing in America in 13 the 1800s and early 1900s, the notion of extending licensing to long guns when the 14 need or demand to do so arose is, in regulatory terms, an incrementally small step.

15 V. CONCLUSION

16 This report examines three broad types of laws, spanning nearly 300 years of 17 American history: laws that restricted weapons carrying (including concealed carry 18 in 50 states, open carry in at least 29 states, and long gun carry in at least 22 states); 19 laws that criminalized weapons brandishing and display in at least 36 states; and 20 laws providing for the licensing of some of these activities enacted in 47 states.
21 These numerous and varied laws, and types of laws, make clear that the default in 22 American history was weapons regulation and restriction, especially once

shall be so construed as to prohibit sheriffs, their regularly appointed deputies, who actually collect taxes in each county, and all constables in their respective counties and districts, and all regularly appointed police officers of their respective cities, towns or villages, all jailors and game protectors who have been duly appointed as such, and members of the department of public safety of this state, from carrying such weapons as they are now authorized by law to carry, who shall have given bond in the penalty of not less than three thousand five hundred dollars, conditioned for the faithful performance of their respective duties, which said officers shall be liable upon their said official bond, for the damages done by the unlawful or careless use of any such weapon or weapons, whether such bond is so conditioned or not. It shall be unlawful for any person armed with a pistol, gun, or other dangerous or deadly weapon, whether licensed to carry same or not, to carry, expose, brandish, or use, such weapon in a way or manner to cause, or threaten, a breach of the peace. Any person violating this provision of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than three hundred dollars or imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty nor more than ninety days, or be punished by both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court. Any circuit court granting any such license to carry any of the weapons mentioned in this act, the governor, or the superintendent of the department of public safety, with the consent of the governor, may, for any cause deemed sufficient by said court, or by the governor or by the superintendent of the department of public safety with the approval of the governor aforesaid, as the case may be, revoke any such license to carry a pistol or other weapon mentioned in this act for which a license is required, and immediate notice of such revocation shall be given such licensee in person, by registered mail or in the same manner as provided by law for the service of other notices, and no person whose license has been so revoked shall be re-licensed within one year thereafter; provided, that the authority so revoking such license may, after a hearing, sooner reinstate such licensee.
