1 SUR-REBUTTAL DECLARATION OF DR. MARY FISSELL

2 I, Dr. Mary Fissell, declare under penalty of perjury that the following is true 3 and correct:

4 1. This declaration is based on my own personal knowledge and 5 experience, and if I am called to testify as a witness, I could and would testify 6 competently to the truth of the matters discussed in this declaration.

7 2. I have been retained by the Office of the Attorney General for 8 California as an expert on the history of medical facilities and hospitals in America, 9 with an emphasis on the similarities and differences between hospitals as they 10 existed in the Founding era (in and around the year 1791) and hospitals as they 11 exist in the modern era.

12 3. I previously provided a declaration in the above-captioned matters in 13 support of the State of California’s opposition to the May and Carralero Plaintiffs’
14 motions for preliminary injunction. See Decl. of Dr. Mary Fissell, May v. Bonta, 15 C.D. Cal. No. 8:23-cv-01696 CJC (ADSx) (Dkt. No. 21-3); Carralero v. Bonta, 16 C.D. Cal. No. 8:23-cv-01798 CJC (ADSx) (Dkt. No. 20-3) (Fissell Decl.). My 17 professional background and qualifications, and my retention and compensation 18 information, are set forth in Paragraphs 3 and 4 of my prior declaration.

19 4. I have been asked by the Office of the Attorney General to review and 20 provide an expert opinion regarding some of the statements made in the Plaintiffs’ 21 reply briefs and supporting documents in these matters. May Dkt. Nos. 29, 29-9, 22 29-14, 29-15; Carralero Dkt. No. 29. I have reviewed those briefs and documents, 23 and have prepared this sur-rebuttal declaration in response.

24 I. RESPONSE TO STATEMENTS MADE IN MAY PLAINTIFFS’ EVIDENTIARY
25 OBJECTIONS TO FISSELL DECLARATION

26 5. The May Plaintiffs object to my opinion that “[t]o the extent that early 27 hospital rules do not specify that inmates or visitors could not carry firearms, this 28 absence is due to the fact that the nature of these institutions made it very unlikely

1 that such a rule would be necessary.” Fissell Decl. ¶ 14. Specifically, they assert 2 that I provide “no citation to facts or sources” to support this opinion and claim that 3 I made an “admission” that I am “speculating” as to this opinion. See Pls.’
4 Evidentiary Objections to Fissell Decl. ¶ 2, May v. Bonta Dkt. No. 29-7.

5 6. First, the May Plaintiffs’ claim that I did not cite to facts or sources in 6 support of my opinion is inaccurate. To the contrary, my declaration includes a 7 detailed factual description of the nature of Founding-era hospitals (including, but 8 not limited to, the indigent patient populations served by these early hospitals and 9 the emphasis these institutions placed on order and control), and this factual 10 description is supported by numerous citations to primary and secondary sources.
11 See Fissell Decl. ¶¶ 5-12. The expert opinion that I provide in Paragraph 14 of my 12 declaration is supported by, and predicated upon, these historical facts and citations.

13 7. Second, my declaration does not contain any “admission” that I am 14 “speculating” in rendering this expert opinion. The historical profession, from 15 Carlo Ginzburg to Marisa Fuentes, has regularly analyzed silences and documents 16 and created plausible, historically sound explanations for these silences by 17 examining the circumstances in which the document was crafted. Careful attention 18 to a document’s creation is a hallmark of professional historical scholarship. Here, 19 I reached the opinion set forth in Paragraph 14 of my declaration after a diligent 20 examination and analysis of the circumstances under which Founding-era hospital 21 rules were written, as described in Paragraphs 5-12 of my declaration.

22 II. RESPONSE TO STATEMENTS MADE BY THE MAY PLAINTIFFS’ DECLARANT,
23 CLAYTON CRAMER

24 8. The May Plaintiffs’ declarant, Clayton Cramer, concedes that I provide 25 “logical explanations for the absence” of rules or statutes explicitly prohibiting 26 arms in Founding-era hospitals, but then claims that “other evidence suggests that 27 [my] reasoning is based on false premises.” Clayton Cramer Rebuttal Decl. ¶ 57, 28 May v. Bonta Dkt. No. 29-15. However, Cramer does not identify the purported

1 “other evidence” that he is referring to, nor does he explain what “false premises” 2 my reasoning is allegedly based upon.

3 9. Cramer also cites to my statement that there were few hospitals in 4 Founding-era America because it was a largely rural country that lacked the 5 population densities sufficient to support a large number of hospitals. See Fissell 6 Decl. ¶ 1. Cramer agrees that this statement is “certainly true,” but then goes on to 7 argue that there was another reason for the scarcity of hospitals: families caring for 8 the mentally ill. See Clayton Cramer Rebuttal Decl. ¶¶ 59-62, May v. Bonta Dkt.
9 No. 29-15. He then discusses Founding-era home health care for the mentally ill, 10 including the details of a case involving a father who provided domiciliary care to 11 his mentally ill son in Symsbury, Connecticut. Id.

12 10. However, Cramer’s discussion of home care for certain mentally ill 13 patients is not relevant to how Founding-era hospitals operated because, as 14 explained in my declaration, early hospitals serviced those who could not afford 15 home care. Nor does this discussion undermine any of my opinions. To the 16 contrary, Cramer’s statements are entirely consistent with my opinion that home 17 care was one dimension of a system of care that developed in a largely rural 18 economy, in which there was low population density and many people who were 19 able to care for their ill relatives in a domestic setting because they had the space to 20 do so. As stated in my declaration, the preference for receiving medical treatment 21 at home—rather than in a hospital—is a major contributing factor to the paucity of 22 hospitals in early America.

23 11. Next, Cramer discusses whether urbanization promotes mental illness 24 (see Clayton Cramer Rebuttal Decl. ¶¶ 63-66, May v. Bonta Dkt. No. 29-15), but 25 this discussion is not pertinent to—nor does it contradict—any of my opinions.

26 12. Paragraph 67 of Cramer’s rebuttal declaration is in fundamental 27 agreement with my analysis and opinions. Hospital care in eighteenth-century 28 America largely consisted of caretaking because, in Cramer’s words, “[w]ithout X-

1 ray machines, and IVs, what could a hospital do, other than bed rest?” Clayton 2 Cramer Rebuttal Decl. ¶¶ 67, May v. Bonta Dkt. No. 29-15. Indeed, much medical 3 care in any Founding-era setting was a mix of nursing care and watchful waiting, 4 and the inmates of infirmaries were in need of warm beds and regular meals as 5 much as medical care. Cramer’s acknowledgement of “the limits of the [colonial 6 period] medical profession’s toolbox” (id.) directly supports my opinion that 7 hospitals in late eighteenth and early nineteenth century America were very 8 different from the high-tech medical workplaces that exist today.

9 13. Cramer then objects that I do “not ever point to institutional rules or 10 laws regulating arms possession seem (sic).” Clayton Cramer Rebuttal Decl. ¶¶ 67, 11 May v. Bonta Dkt. No. 29-15. First, given the time constraints imposed by 12 Plaintiffs’ motions for preliminary injunction and the patchy survival of early 13 American records, I cannot and do not definitely state that no Founding-era hospital 14 had a written rule explicitly prohibiting firearms. Second, as set forth in my 15 declaration, such rules would not have been necessary because the inmates of 16 Founding-era hospitals were too destitute to own firearms; had they not been 17 destitute, they would not have been eligible for admission to such institutions.

18 14. In response to my opinion that specific rules governing firearms were 19 unnecessary because “because it was assumed that those who had managed to 20 navigate the networks of charity and patronage to gain admission were going to be 21 well-behaved” (Fissell Decl. ¶ 8), Cramer points to the mentally ill who were 22 confined to the Pennsylvania Hospital (Clayton Cramer Rebuttal Decl. ¶¶ 73, May 23 v. Bonta Dkt. No. 29-15). However, this example is complicated by the fact that in 24 this particular institution, care for the mentally ill was administered in a separate 25 area of the hospital than care for patients with physical illnesses. The mentally ill 26 included paying patients, who might be physically restrained. There were many 27 more attendants for this part of the hospital than the medical part upstairs, and 28 inmates’ behavior was governed closely by such attendants. It is an exception to

1 the usual functioning of infirmaries, almshouses, and poorhouses both because it 2 took mentally-ill paying patients, and it because it relied upon physical restraints 3 and close attendance as much as written rules to govern behavior. Fissell Decl. ¶ 8.
4 Given such physical restraints and close attendance of the mentally ill at 5 Philadelphia Hospital, it would have been even more unnecessary for this 6 institution to have a separate written rule explicitly prohibiting firearms. Moreover, 7 hospitals of any kind were rare in early America, and institutions dedicated to the 8 care of the mentally ill were even scarcer. Limiting the historical analysis to only 9 those hospitals that provided mental health treatment does not provide a complete 10 and accurate historical picture of Founding-era health care facilities.

11 III. RESPONSE TO STATEMENT MADE IN CARRALERO PLAINTIFFS' REPLY BRIEF

12 15. Finally, the Carralero Plaintiffs claim that “there is historical evidence 13 that doctors on house calls carried firearms”; in support of this claim, they cite to 14 one source for the proposition that one doctor “carried guns while visiting patients 15 for medical house calls.” Carralero v. Bonta Dkt. No. 29 at 28 n.11 (emphasis 16 added). However, the Carralero Plaintiffs do not present any evidence that 17 Founding-era doctors carried firearms while treating patients in hospitals, and the 18 fact that one such doctor carried a firearm while making house calls has no bearing 19 on this issue.

21 I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of 22 America that the foregoing is true and correct.
