1 I. DEFENDANTS CANNOT MEET THE STANDARD FOR DISMISSAL

2 Dismissal under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) is very rare.
3 Indeed, it is “only the extraordinary case in which dismissal is proper” for failure to 4 state a claim. United States v. City of Redwood City, 640 F.2d 963, 966 (9th Cir.
5 1981) (emphasis added). A court may dismiss a claim only if the complaint: (1) 6 lacks a cognizable legal theory; or (2) fails to contain sufficient facts to support a 7 cognizable legal claim. Robertson v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 749 F.2d 530, 534
8 (9th Cir. 1984). To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, then, “a complaint 9 generally must satisfy only the minimal notice pleading requirements of Rule 10 8(a)(2).” Porter v. Jones, 319 F.3d 483, 494 (9th Cir. 2003). That is, a plaintiff need 11 provide just a short and plain statement showing that she is entitled to relief. Fed. R.
12 Civ. P. 8(a)(2). What’s more, courts must view the complaint “in the light most 13 favorable to the plaintiff, taking all allegations as true, and drawing all reasonable 14 inferences from the complaint in [her] favor.” Doe v. United States, 419 F.3d 1058, 15 1062 (9th Cir. 2005). Doing so here leads to the unmistakable conclusion that 16 dismissal (especially with prejudice) is improper.

17 In the context of a claim for violation of First Amendment rights based on an 18 ordinance that chills speech, such challenges are given the most leeway, especially 19 at the pleading stage. See Ariz. Right to Life Political Action Comm. v. Bayless, 320 20 F.3d 1002, 1006 (9th Cir.2003). Standing and injury are sufficiently pleaded by 21 showing that the statute caused or will cause self-censorship. See id.; Libertarian 22 Party of Los Angeles County v. Bowen, 709 F.3d 867, 870 (9th Cir. 2013). As 23 described below, the Complaint and its supporting declarations describe how 24 Plaintiffs, other licensees, and their customers will self-censor due to a regulated 25 omnipresent government recording of their words not necessarily confined to or 26 related to a firearms transaction. Those allegations are sufficient to state a claim.

27 A plaintiff states a viable Fourth Amendment violation as to the overbreadth 28 of a regulatory search when a plaintiff alleges that an electronic recording of 1 conversations on private premises was conducted prior to a warrant being sought or 2 issued. See, e.g., United States v. U.S. Dist. Court for Eastern Dist. of Mich.,

3 Southern Div., 407 U.S. 297, 315, 320 (1972). So too, a viable Fourth Amendment 4 violation is pleaded when a plaintiff alleges that the government takes a third-5 party's electronic information without a warrant where there is at least some 6 expectation of privacy, however diminished. See Carpenter v. U.S., 585 U.S. 296, 7 314-15 (2018). Plaintiffs have alleged that the state has turned their homes and 8 businesses into de facto 24-hour audio recording centers, which conversations of 9 both Plaintiffs and its customers can be taken merely by litigants alleging some 10 nexus between what might have been recorded and some pending civil action. But 11 see Cal. Code Civ. P. § 1985.3 (normally third-party recordings and information are 12 protected from disclosure to litigants by a notice and objection process afforded to 13 the affected persons; no such safeguard exists for customers of licensees subject to 14 Penal Code section 26806).

15 To survive a motion to dismiss, a takings claim of the kind alleged by 16 Plaintiffs must allege that the result of a regulation was the physical invasion of the 17 plaintiff's property. See Cedar Point Nursery v. Hassid, 94 U.S. 139, 149 (2021).
18 Here, Plaintiffs' allegations that they are obligated to install and maintain on their 19 properties a video and audio monitoring system for the sole benefit of the 20 government satisfies this standard.

21 II. PLAINTIFFS STIPULATE TO THE DISMISSAL OF DEFENDANT NEWSOM

22 Notwithstanding that dismissal of the complaint is not appropriate at this 23 stage given the burden on the movant and the viability of certain of the claims, for 24 purposes of judicial efficiency, Plaintiffs nonetheless do not oppose the dismissal of 25 Defendant Newsom.

26 Plaintiffs believe that Defendant Newsom, as the head of the State's 27 executive branch, uncontrovertibly has the authority to direct the Attorney General 28 and Department of Justice, including issuing orders and promulgating policies in 1 response to equitable relief granted in favor of Plaintiffs by this Court that would 2 afford the relief Plaintiffs seek in this lawsuit, e.g., a directive to his Attorney 3 General to cease investigating or prosecuting violations of the law enacted by 4 Senate Bill 1384 or a directive or order to the Bureau of Firearms to cease enforcing 5 or considering SB 1384 in firearms licensing determinations. See, e.g., Planned 6 Parenthood of Idaho, Inc. v. Wasden, 376 F.3d 908, 919 (9th Cir. 2004) (where 7 state attorney general can do every act that his subordinate county prosecutors can 8 do, such state official is a proper defendant under Ex Parte Young even though 9 subordinate county prosecutors would normally perform the acts sought to be 10 enjoined); and see Cal. Const. art. V, § 13 (Attorney General is subject to the 11 powers of, and directions and duties given him, by the Governor), and Cal. Gov.

12 Code §§ 12010, 12013, 12014 (same). As Defendant Newsom himself has recently 13 demonstrated, when it comes to enforcement of firearm regulations, the Governor 14 can and does deputize himself to enforce them in the stead of the Attorney General 15 or other subordinates. See, e.g., Notice of Mot. and Mtn. to Intervene of Governor 16 Gavin Newsom filed in South Bay Rod & Gun Club, Inc. v. Bonta, No. 22cv1461-17 BEN(JLB) (S.D. Cal. Sept. 28, 2022), ECF No. 29 (Defendant Newsom intervening 18 in litigation to enforce firearms statute despite such enforcement under the statute 19 being the responsibility of the Attorney General and local government agency 20 attorneys, not the Governor).

21 However, it is also clear that Defendant Attorney General Robert Bonta has 22 direct supervisory authority over the Department of Justice's Bureau of Firearms.
23 See Cal. Gov. Code §§ 12510-12511, 15001, and 15002.5 (West 2024) (authority of 24 Attorney General to create and direct bureaus of the DOJ). So too, Defendant 25 Bonta's subordinate, Bureau of Firearms Director Allison Mendoza, could be 26 named a defendant in Newsom's stead. Mendoza sets policy for the Bureau of 27 Firearms as well as directs Bureau of Firearms agents (who are also DOJ 28 employees) regarding investigation of violations by firearms licensees of state

1 licensing laws. See Bureau of Firearms, State of California Department of Justice, 2 <https://oag.ca.gov/careers/descriptions/firearms/> (last visited May 2, 2024).

3 Defendants cannot and would not claim that either of these state actors lack the 4 requisite nexus in enforcing the challenged law such that Ex Parte Young does not 5 apply to them. Regardless of the named defendant—Defendant Newsom or one of 6 his subordinates—the equitable relief to which Plaintiffs would be entitled if 7 successful in their lawsuit would both be permissible under the Eleventh 8 Amendment and of the same breadth and scope. Plaintiffs, therefore, do not oppose 9 the dismissal of Defendant Newsom.

10 III. PLAINTIFFS’ FIRST AMENDMENT CLAIM EXCEEDS MERE “PLAUSIBILITY”

11 A. Section 26806 chills protected speech and association.

12 Plaintiffs’ First Amendment claim, alleging the chilling of speech in both 13 businesses and homes, is more than “plausible;” the fundamental rights of speech 14 and association in one’s home are implicated by the overbreadth of Section 26806.

15 Defendants extol the virtues of Section 26806’s in-store and in-home 16 surveillance mandate, claiming it “assists law enforcement in . . . detering” all 17 manner of potential crimes, including “straw purchases.” Mot. at 2:15-17 (emphasis 18 added). Defendants thus contemplate Section 26806 deterring (i.e., chilling)¹ at 19 least some speech,² yet simultaneously insist that Section 26806 chills no speech or 20 association whatsoever. See Mot. at 4:25-5:21 (claiming Section 26806 does not 21 “even regulat[e] speech”). This theory is incoherent.

22 First, Defendants posit that Section 26806 cannot possibly chill speech or 23 association because it does not expressly “target,” “proscribe,” or “punish” with 24

25 ¹ Compare “Deter,” Merriam Webster, https://www.merriam- 26 webster.com/dictionary/deter (last visited May 10, 2024) (“to . . . discourage, or 27 prevent”), with “Chill,” Merriam Webster, https://www.merriam- 28 webster.com/thesaurus/chill#thesaurus-entry-3-3 (last visited May 10, 2024) (“to discourage”).

² Indeed, it is difficult to conduct a straw purchase without speaking to a store clerk.

1 “consequences.” Mot. at 4:25, 5:15-16, 6:16. But the Ninth Circuit has made clear 2 that “the government may chill speech” not just by “threatening or causing . . .
 3 harm” or by “prohibiting” conduct, but also by “intercepting” communications and 4 even “conducting covert surveillance” of constitutionally protected conduct. Ariz.
 5 Students’ Ass’n v. Ariz. Bd. of Regents, 824 F.3d 858, 868 (9th Cir. 2016) (emphasis 6 added):

7 Both the Supreme Court and [the Ninth Circuit] have 8 recognized a wide variety of conduct that impermissibly interferes 9 with speech. For example, the government may chill speech by 10 threatening or causing pecuniary harm, Bd. of Cty. Comm’rs v.
 11 Umbehr, 518 U.S. 668, 674, 116 S.Ct. 2342, 135 L.Ed.2d 843 (1996);
 12 withholding a license, right, or benefit, Baird v. State Bar of Ariz., 401 13 U.S. 1, 7, 91 S.Ct. 702, 27 L.Ed.2d 639 (1971); prohibiting the 14 solicitation of charitable donations, Vill. of Schaumburg v. Citizens for 15 a Better Env’t, 444 U.S. 620, 633, 100 S.Ct. 826, 63 L.Ed.2d 73
 16 (1980); detaining or intercepting mail, Blount v. Rizzi, 400 U.S. 410, 17 417-18, 91 S.Ct. 423, 27 L.Ed.2d 498 (1971); or conducting covert 18 surveillance of church services, The Presbyterian Church v. United 19 States, 870 F.2d 518, 522-23 (9th Cir. 1989). Importantly, the test for 20 determining whether the alleged retaliatory conduct chills free speech 21 is objective; it asks whether the retaliatory acts “ ‘would lead ordinary 22 student[s] ... in the plaintiffs’ position’ to refrain from protected 23 speech.” O’Brien v. Welty, 818 F.3d 920, 933 (9th Cir. 2016) (quoting 24 Pinard v. Clatskanie School Dist., 467 F.3d 755, 770 (9th Cir.
 25 2006)).

26 Ariz. Students’ Ass’n, 824 F.3d at 868; see also Pls.’ Reply in Supp. of Mot.
 27 for Prelim. Inj. at 2:4-4:15, ECF No. 22.

28 Indeed, the Ninth Circuit has recognized that “congregants are chilled from participating in worship activities[] when they refuse to attend church services because they fear the government is spying on them and taping their every utterance. . . .” Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), 870 F.2d at 522. If the mere possibility of covert surveillance causes congregants reasonably to alter their conduct, then Section 26806’s overt surveillance of Plaintiffs’ utterances (even within their own homes) is even more stifling.

Because Section 26806 places patrons and proprietors on notice of perpetual, government-accessible surveillance, it “prevents Plaintiff Clark from freely communicating with FFLs as to ongoing legal and legislative initiatives for fear of 1 being recorded by the government,” which “chill[s] his ability to speak freely for 2 fear of retribution by the government.” Compl. ¶ 25; Decl. of Gerald Clark in Supp.

3 of Compl., ¶ 7, ECF No. 1-4; see also Decl. of Jesse Harris in Supp. of Compl., ¶ 4 13, ECF No. 1-5. A member of Plaintiff GOA, Matthew Gene Peterson-Haywood, 5 can no longer have private talks, have friends stay the night, discuss his political 6 views, perform his job duties, discuss private health matters, or even practice his 7 religion within his own home without being exposed to pervasive surveillance.
8 Decl. of Matthew Gene Peterson-Haywood in Supp. of Mot. for Prelim. Inj., ¶¶ 14-9 31, ECF No. 27-1. For purposes of a motion to dismiss, these allegations must be 10 accepted as true.

11 Defendants offer a red herring that Section 26806 “imposes no consequences 12 for making . . . statements,” so Plaintiffs’ fears of chilled speech cannot be 13 “objectively reasonable.” Mot. at 5:15-21 & 6:12-16; see also 6:1-2 (calling 14 Plaintiffs fear of having their most private conversations subject to “pervasive 15 governmental . . . recordings . . . objectively unreasonable.”). But the absence of 16 express punishment is not a characteristic of a “chilling effect” (see Pls.’ Reply in 17 Supp. of Mot. for Prelim. Inj. at 2:4-19, ECF No. 22), and the absence of 18 enumerated “consequences” did not prevent the Ninth Circuit from finding “a 19 cognizable injury” when government agents simply wore “‘body bugs’ and 20 surreptitiously recorded church services.” Presbyterian Church, 870 F.2d at 520, 21 523. As Plaintiffs observed, Defendants would be singing a different tune if a law-22 imposed surveillance of conversations and visitors within abortion clinics (not a 23 constitutionally protected industry). See Compl. ¶ 343 n.39.

24 Nor does Defendants’ appeal to the purported “tight[] limits [on] the use or 25 release of the recordings” (Mot. at 5:22; see also id. at 6:28, “the State cannot use 26 or disclose any information from the recordings”) have any basis in fact, as Section 27 26806(b) plainly allows unfettered access by government “agent[s]” at any time to 28 ensure “compliance,” places no restriction on what information may be copied or

1 seized, and establishes no limit whatsoever on the subsequent use of that 2 information. In fact, Section 26806(b) on its face places restrictions only on 3 licensees, not the government.

4 Defendants close with the non sequitur that Section 26806 “does not 5 ‘compel[] disclosure of affiliation with groups engaged in advocacy’” because the 6 state’s ability to use recordings is purportedly “limited” and individuals “cho[o]se 7 to appear in person to conduct a commercial transaction” subject to regulation and 8 paperwork. Mot. at 5:22-26, 6:25-7:4. But Section 26806 also records the activities 9 of those who visit a gun store and do not purchase a firearm, and sweeps up speech 10 unrelated to gun purchases. Nor is it any answer to say that individuals simply 11 could stop patronizing gun stores if they do not wish their affiliations in protected 12 groups like GOC and CRPA to be disclosed. Certainly, the Supreme Court never 13 suggested that members of the NAACP should discontinue their protected activities 14 to avoid disclosure of their identities. See NAACP v. Alabama ex rel. Patterson, 357 15 U.S. 449 (1958).

16 B. Section 26806 eviscerates the established right to speak 17 anonymously.

18 Defendants reduce the settled “right to speak anonymously” (Doe v.
19 2themart.com Inc., 140 F. Supp. 2d 1088, 1092 (W.D. Wash. 2001), which courts 20 uniformly recognize as “an aspect of the freedom of speech protected by the First 21 Amendment,” (McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Comm’n, 514 U.S. 334, 343 (1995)) to a 22 “so-called right.” Mot. at 7:7 (emphasis added). Disputing the merits of Plaintiffs’ 23 claim (Mot. at 7:9: “no merit to the allegation”), Defendants offer the straw man 24 that Section 26806 “forbids public disclosure,” and thus, Plaintiffs somehow remain 25 anonymous vis-a-vis the government. Id. These arguments only distract from the 26 fact that Section 26806 unmask Plaintiffs and all manner of gun store patrons to 27 the state, not the public generally. See Compl. ¶¶ 121-22. And again, Section 28 26806(b) limits access only by dealers, not the government or even third-parties

1 alleging some relevance of the recordings to a civil dispute (e.g., a former employee 2 alleging that evidence of harassment or discrimination is contained on the recorded 3 conversations of coworkers).

4 Defendants' focus on those participating in business transactions in gun 5 stores is similarly unavailing. See Mot. at 7:10-22 (“engaging in a face-to-face 6 business interaction,” “identity verification is a feature of firearm purchases,” 7 “interest in anonymous commercial transactions”). As Plaintiffs explained, Section 8 26806 reaches far more protected conduct than mere transactions. See, e.g., Compl.
9 ¶ 26 (“speech about gun control, [political] campaign[s], and the current politics of 10 California”), ¶ 28 (“confidential conversations with customers regarding their self-11 defense needs as well as collecting confidential and personal information”).
12 Defendants make no attempt to grapple with these allegations.

13 IV. PLAINTIFFS DO NOT OPPOSE THE DISMISSAL OF THEIR CLAIM BASED ON A 14 VIOLATION OF EQUAL PROTECTION

15 Based on the Ninth Circuit's recent upholding of grant of dismissal in Doe v.
16 Bonta, Case No. 23-55133 (May 8, 2024), Plaintiffs do not believe they can 17 continue to state a viable facial challenge to SB 1384 on Equal Protection grounds.
18 However, to the extent that, in the future, circumstances may arise that will allow 19 for a viable as-applied challenge, Plaintiffs consent to and request that the dismissal 20 of their claim for Violation of Equal Protection under the Fifth and Fourteenth 21 Amendments be granted without prejudice.

22 V. PLAINTIFFS DO NOT OPPOSE THE DISMISSAL OF THEIR CLAIM BASED ON A 23 VIOLATION OF THE SECOND AMENDMENT

24 For the same reasons cited above, Plaintiffs no longer believe they can assert 25 a viable facial challenge SB 1384 based on a violation of the Second Amendment.
26 Plaintiffs consent to and request that the dismissal of their claim be granted without 27 prejudice.
28

2 VI. PLAINTIFFS HAVE ADEQUATELY ALLEGED SECTION 26806'S VIOLATION OF 3 THE FOURTH AMENDMENT

4 The prior briefing and order denying the Plaintiffs' Motion for Preliminary 5 injunction dealt superficially with the Fourth Amendment issues raised by Section 6 26806 by focusing primarily on whether this law qualifies as an administrative 7 search under the "highly regulated industry" exception and whether it violates the 8 "reasonable expectation of privacy" under Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347 9 (1967).³ But the challenged statute is self-contradictory and still deeply 10 constitutionally flawed.

11 Electronic surveillance of retail spaces is already an increasingly common 12 practice for retail establishments, even among those businesses that are not highly 13 regulated. See, e.g., James Stark, Improving Retail Security with Video Analytics, 14 by James Stark. Security Mag. (Apr. 14, 2023), 15 https://www.securitymagazine.com/articles/99212-video-analytics-offer-retailers-
16 benefits-that-go-beyond-security (last visited June 6, 2024). At this stage of the 17 proceedings, it is unknown how many firearm dealers voluntarily produce, keep, 18 and maintain electronic surveillance of their business premises. Section 26806 19 introduces coerced surveillance and ends up creating state actors that could 20 jeopardize future criminal prosecutions, while at the same time violating the 21 reasonableness standard of the Fourth Amendment.

22 The coercive nature of the transactions associated with fundamental rights 23 that must (and can only) take place at gun stores, coupled with the policy of 24 compelling gun dealers to partner with the government in a perpetual stake-out of 25 their customers, at their own gun stores, transforms the retail gun dealer into a state

26 ³ The two other concepts analyzed under the "Fourth Amendment" heading 27 by the Order Denying the Preliminary Injunction (ECF No. 28)—the physical 28 occupation and intrusion of private spaces by mandated government surveillance equipment—are more properly analyzed under the Fifth Amendment. See Discussion, Part VII, infra.

1 surveillance agent. This violates the Fourth Amendment.

3 A. Use of the “Highly Regulated Industry” Exception must still be 4 reasonable under the Fourth Amendment.

5 The Supreme Court recently reiterated that firearm dealers are one of only 6 four highly regulated industries to qualify for “highly regulated industry” exception 7 to the warrant requirements under the Fourth Amendment. City of Los Angeles, 8 Calif. v. Patel, 576 U.S. 409, 424 (2015). That same decision also made clear that 9 the rule from New York v. Burger, 482 U.S. 691 (1987) still controls the 10 reasonableness of government conduct under that exception. The three Burger 11 factors under which reasonableness must still be satisfied by the government under 12 the pervasively regulated industry exception are: “(1) ‘[T]here must be a 13 ‘substantial’ government interest that informs the regulatory scheme pursuant to 14 which the inspection is made’; (2) ‘the warrantless inspections must be ‘necessary’ 15 to further [the] regulatory scheme’; and (3) ‘the statute’s inspection program, in 16 terms of the certainty and regularity of its application, [must] provid[e] a 17 constitutionally adequate substitute for a warrant.’ ” Patel, 576 U.S. at 426 (quoting 18 Burger, 482 U.S. at 402-03).

19 As this Court noted in the Order denying the Motion for a Preliminary 20 Injunction, Section 26806 probably (but only) fulfills the first of these standards by 21 addressing a substantial government interest: public safety. That interest, for Fourth 22 Amendment purposes, is the federally mandated collection of data for ensuring 23 lawful transactions and maintaining such data to trace firearms that are the subject 24 of a criminal investigation. That includes some kind of ordinarily recorded and 25 maintained (paper) records or the collection and maintenance of enhanced 26 (electronic/digitized) records. The collection of such limited data (and the 27 government’s sharing of only the anonymized data) is not a Fourth Amendment 28 violation. See generally Doe v. Bonta, 101 F.4th 633 (9th Cir. 2024).

But this paper or electronic “surveillance” and storage of data, though

1 authorized by federal law, is also circumscribed by federal law. See Congressional 2 Research Service Reports, Statutory Federal Gun Registry Prohibitions and ATF
3 Record Retention Requirement, IF 12057 (Feb, 5, 2024), 4 <https://crsreports.congress.gov/product/pdf/IF/IF12057> (last visited June 6, 2024).
5 To expand that surveillance and storage of data to the scheme codified by Section 6 86806, California must still meet its burden on the other two criteria for what is still 7 a warrantless search of people doing business at a gun store. See Horton v.
8 California, 496 U.S. 128, 133 n.4 (1990); Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347, 357 9 (1967).

10 The other two prongs of the Burger test—“necessity” and “adequate 11 substitute for a warrant”—are where the challenged law fails to comport with the 12 Constitution.

13 B. Section 26806 turns licensees into perpetual government
14 surveillants, immediately implicating the Fourth Amendment’s 15 warrant requirement regardless of when law enforcement 16 eventually seeks a warrant to retrieve the surveillance.

17 Section 26806(a) compels the gun store owner to install a digital video 18 surveillance that: (1) also records audio communications; (2) specifically requires 19 clear identification of any person; (3) covers all retail areas; and (4) mandates 15 20 frames per second, 24 hours per day. Section 26806 further mandates the licensee 21 to ensure (5) the security of the electronic gear necessary to capturing, recording 22 and storing all surveillance; (6) the storage (at the licensees’ expense) of all 23 recordings; (7) date/time stamps are present on the recordings; and (8) that a failure 24 notification feature is included on the system.

25 And subdivision (b) of 26806 forbids the licensee to “use, share, allow 26 access, or otherwise release recordings” except: (1) to an agent of the government 27 conducting an inspection of the licensee’s premises to ensure compliance with the 28 law, but only if a warrant or court order would not generally be required for that access (emphasis added); (2) only pursuant to search warrant or other court order

1 (emphasis added); and (3) only pursuant to insurance claims or as part of a civil 2 discovery process.

3 Which means California admits that the Fourth Amendment requires a 4 warrant to access the data (face and voice recordings) collected under Section 5 26806. So why isn't a warrant required for the government-mandated actor to 6 collect and record the data?

7 1. Section 26806 turns the licensee into a government actor.

8 Licensed firearm dealers are already considered quasi-government agents in 9 certain law enforcement contexts. United States v. Tallmadge, 829 F.2d 767, 774 10 (9th Cir. 1987) (affirmative defense of entrapment by estoppel available to 11 defendant based on dealer's representations in firearm transaction because dealer is 12 acting as agent of the government in that circumstance). Would that government 13 agent classification extend to a Fourth Amendment analysis when a licensee turns 14 over recordings of video or audio surveillance of his own store, using his own 15 equipment, to help prosecute a robbery, theft, or other crime? Probably not, even 16 without a warrant or court order. See United States v. Attson, 900 F.2d 1427, 1433 17 (9th Cir. 1990) (doctor drawing blood for medical reasons was not intending to aid 18 the government's investigative or administrative capacity.)

19 But Section 26806 short-circuits that rationale by compelling the licensee to 20 conduct surveillance for the government on pain of penalty, including the loss of his 21 or her license to do business in California. Normally, whether a private party is 22 engaged in state action is a highly specific and fact-centered question. But not 23 Under section 26806. The challenged law codifies the interdependence of the 24 licensee and government officials under all of the tests—joint action, symbiotic 25 relationship, and public function—outlined in Brunette v. Humane Society of 26 Ventura County, 294 F.3d 1205, 1210-14 (9th Cir. 2002). This statute turns a 27 California gun dealer into a government agent collecting audio and video 28 surveillance of his customers for the state's uses.

1 As noted above, subdivisions (b)(1) and (b)(2) of the statute still require 2 warrants for seizing or accessing the audio/video recordings that are compelled by 3 26806, which not only likely appropriate, but is also an admission by the State that 4 the data gathered during retail transactions is intrusive under the Fourth 5 Amendment, and therefore subject to a warrant. But under this statute, the 6 constitutional violation occurs when the government actor—in this case, the 7 statutorily-obliged licensee—engages in the initial surveillance and recording, 8 because the use of electronic devices to capture conversations is still a search under 9 the Fourth Amendment. Berger v. New York, 388 U.S. 41, 51 (1967). Moreover, this 10 electronic surveillance is not a search of the licensees’ store or the federally 11 mandated business records under the “highly regulated business” exception, it is a 12 search that is conducted by the licensee as a government agent, to record the 13 conduct of every retail customer who enters his store—24 hours a day, 7 days a 14 week, 365 days a year.

15 Under the third test in New York v. Burger, the Fourth Amendment mandates 16 that “ ‘the statute’s inspection program, in terms of the certainty and regularity of 17 its application, [must] provid[e] a constitutionally adequate substitute for a 18 warrant.’ ” Patel, 576 U.S. at 426 (quoting Burger, 482 U.S. at 702-03). There is no 19 such “adequate substitute for a warrant” that safeguards the Fourth Amendment 20 rights of a gun dealer’s customers in this panopticon scheme mandated by Section 21 26806.

22 An obvious test for this? Ask any neutral and detached magistrate if she or he 23 would approve a warrant for 24/7 audio and video surveillance, 365 days a year, of 24 all people seeking to buy liquor, used auto parts, or those engaged in the business of 25 mining, under the rationale or “probable cause” that someone, somewhere might 26 violate a retail regulation at some point in the future, and where the government 27 already requires transaction records executed under penalty of perjury that fulfill 28 the government’s “necessity” requirement under Burger.

1 What is the concrete evidence that would support probable cause to believe a 2 crime is (or will be) committed because someone enters a retail establishment 3 looking at regulated products? Liquor stores, auto junk yards, mining enterprises, 4 and firearm dealers are the only four industries that the Supreme Court has 5 identified that qualify for the “highly regulated business” exception to the 6 requirement to get a warrant. Patel, 576 U.S. at 424. But those businesses—and, 7 presumably, their customers—are still protected the Burger factors. See generally 8 Craig v. Boren, 429 U.S. 190 (1976) (gender-based equal protection challenge to 9 state regulation on liquor sales could be brought by vendor on behalf of affected 10 customers, and vendor’s “highly regulated business” affected neither standing nor 11 relief).

12 Section 26860 is a bridge too far. The Fourth Amendment protects people not 13 places. United States v. Jones, 565 U.S. 400, 406 (2012). The intercession of a 14 neutral and detached magistrate, based upon a finding of probable cause to believe 15 a crime has been (or will be) committed, backed up with evidence, is the 16 constitutionally minimal requirement to conduct the search and/or surveillance of 17 every retail customer by the licensed dealer acting as a government agent.

18 2. The signage required by Section 26806(c) does not make the 19 warrantless surveillance or search constitutional.

20 To be sure, modern technology will continue to present challenges to Fourth 21 Amendment jurisprudence. See M.J. Blitz, The Fourth Amendment Future of Public 22 Surveillance: Remote Recording and Other Searches in Public Space, 63 Am. U.L.
23 Rev. 21 (Oct. 2013); M. Tokson, Inescapable Surveillance, 106 Cornell L. Rev. 409
24 (Jan. 2021); and M. Tokson, The Carpenter Test as a Transformation of Fourth 25 Amendment Law, 2023 U. Ill. L. Rev. 507 (2023).

26 But one thing the Supreme Court made clear in Carpenter v. United States, 27 585 U.S. 296 (2018), is that unavoidable exposure to ubiquitous electronic 28 surveillance and the recordation of personal data, conversations, and other

1 information is still protected against government intrusion under the Fourth
2 Amendment. In that case the Supreme Court “decline[d] to grant the state 3 unrestricted access to a wireless carrier’s database of physical location information.
4 In light of the deeply revealing nature of CSLI, its depth, breadth, and 5 comprehensive reach, and the inescapable and automatic nature of its collection, 6 the fact that such information is gathered by a third party does not make it any 7 less deserving of Fourth Amendment protection.” Id. at 320 (emphasis added).

8 The Court went on to find the government’s acquisition of the cell phone 9 records—records that are far less intrusive than facial images and recordings of 10 individual conversations—is still a search under the Fourth Amendment.

11 As Justice Brandeis explained in his famous dissent, the Court 12 is obligated—as “[s]ubtler and more far-reaching means of invading 13 privacy have become available to the Government”—to ensure that 14 the “progress of science” does not erode Fourth Amendment 15 protections. Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 473–474, 48 16 S.Ct. 564, 72 L.Ed. 944 (1928). Here the progress of science has 17 afforded law enforcement a powerful new tool to carry out its 18 important responsibilities. At the same time, this tool risks 19 Government encroachment of the sort the Framers, “after consulting 20 the lessons of history,” drafted the Fourth Amendment to prevent.

21 Carpenter at 320 (quoting United States v. Di Re, 332 U.S. 581, 595 (1948)).

22 California must be put to their burden to show that Section 26806 is a valid 23 warrantless surveillance, collection, and storage of the face and voice impressions 24 of gun buyers, exercising their Second Amendment rights, without also requiring 25 them to waive their Fourth Amendment rights. This set of circumstances impacts 26 both Burger factors cited above: That “the warrantless inspections must be 27 ‘necessary’ to further [the] regulatory scheme”; and that “the statute’s inspection 28 program, in terms of the certainty and regularity of its application, provid[e] a constitutionally adequate substitute for a warrant.” Burger, 482 U.S. at 702-03.

The “necessity test” is essentially a tailoring or “means versus ends” analysis, suspectable to the same overbreadth analysis in Carpenter. Which analysis reasonably invites inquiries about why all areas of a gun store or home dealer’s

1 place of business need to be surveilled, and why all non-transactional conversations 2 must be recorded, e.g., why not limit such surveillance and recording to the actual 3 signing of federally mandated documents at the cash register when and where the 4 transaction takes place? Why is it necessary to record browsing and window 5 shopping activities and casual conversations between shopkeeper and their potential 6 customer that occur before or after the only legal event that is any of the 7 government's business, i.e., the actual sale and/or transfer of the weapon?

8 The "warrant substitute" test specifically mandates heightened judicial 9 scrutiny of 26806 to ensure that the government is acting within the bounds of the 10 Constitution to address a legitimate government interest, and not overstepping its 11 bounds by wading into "Big Brother" territory.

12 California's burden under the Burger factors becomes impossible when one 13 considers that almost all firearm sales and transfers must be conducted through 14 licensed dealers. Cal. Penal Code §§ 26500-90 & 27545 (West 2024). And 15 notwithstanding the government's nebulous (but ultimately unenforceable) 16 concession that Section 26806 will not be enforced at gun shows, that means that 17 gun stores and gun shows are the only place people can exercise their fundamental 18 right to acquire firearms to exercise their Second Amendment rights.⁴ See, e.g., 19 Jackson v. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 746 F.3d 953 (9th Cir. 2014), See also 20 Andrews v. State, 50 Tenn. 165, 178 (1871) ("The right to keep arms, necessarily 21 involves the right to purchase them, to keep them in a state of efficiency for use, 22 and to purchase and provide ammunition suitable for such arms, and to keep them 23 in repair") (cited favorably in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 614 24 (2008)).

25 This is why the signage requirement of Section 26806(c) does not cure the 26 ⁴ See also Cal. Penal Code §§ 27310 (requiring all firearm transfers at gun 27 shows to comply with state and federal law) & 26805 (prohibiting the sale and 28 transfer of a firearm by a licensed dealer at any location other than the dealer's licensed premises but allowing dealer to begin sale and prepare sale documents at a gun show) (West 2024).

1 defect of making the licensed gun dealer a government surveillance agent. The 2 doctrine being violated by Section 26806, though not labelled as such in Carpenter, 3 is traditionally known as an “unconstitutional condition.” See generally Comment, 4 Another Look at Unconstitutional Conditions, 117 U. Pa. L. Rev. 144 (1968). The 5 issue was explicitly addressed in Simmons v. United States, 390 U.S. 377, 394
6 (1968) (defendant cannot be compelled to waive Fifth Amendment rights to invoke 7 Fourth Amendment rights); and see Kaur v. Maryland, 141 S. Ct. 5, 6 (2020) 8 (Sotomayor, J., concurring) (quoting Simmons “[W]e find it intolerable that one 9 constitutional right should have to be surrendered in order to assert another”).

10 California’s statutory scheme requiring nearly all civilian gun sales and 11 transfers to be conducted under the surveillance and recordation by conscripted 12 state actors imposes an unconstitutional condition on the exercise of a fundamental 13 right. For Plaintiffs, Plaintiffs’ customers, and any typical Californian to exercise 14 their fundamental Second Amendment right to acquire firearms, they must waive 15 their Fourth Amendment right by subjecting themselves to constant and 16 unnecessary warrantless surveillance. Or, in order to escape the panopticon of 17 Section 26806, they must decline to ever exercise their Second Amendment right by 18 lawfully acquiring a firearm. This forfeiture of one right for another is intolerable 19 under the unconstitutional condition doctrine affirmed in Simmons.

20 Like the impermissible warrantless collection of cell-site information in 21 Carpenter v. United States, Section 26806 creates an audio and video recording 22 scheme that results in an “inescapable and automatic” collection of private 23 conversations and associations. Carpenter, 585 U.S. at 320. “[T]he fact that such 24 information is gathered by a third party does not make it any less deserving of 25 Fourth Amendment protection.” Id. Plaintiffs have adequately alleged that Section 26 26806 inflicts a similar constitutional injury in its automatic collection of their 27 private information on both themselves as well as on their members and customers.
28 The allegations supporting these injuries are all that is needed to state a viable

1 Fourth Amendment violation and survive Defendants’ motion to dismiss.

2 VII. SECTION 26806 APPROPRIATES PRIVATE SPACE AND PRIVATE EQUIPMENT
3 SOLELY FOR GOVERNMENT USE WITHOUT COMPENSATION IN VIOLATION
4 OF THE TAKINGS CLAUSE

5 Section 26806 imposes on licensee Plaintiffs a legal obligation to undertake 6 continuous digital video surveillance of their own private property, and to permit 7 government agents to freely enter upon their property to perpetually access and 8 view, at-will, that digital video surveillance. This isn’t a merely prohibitory 9 restriction, but rather a mandatory action that Plaintiffs must take at their own 10 considerable expense in order to satisfy the government. Moreover, Plaintiffs 11 cannot use or enjoy the benefits of the expensive system; only the government or 12 third-party litigants may access or use it. Cal. Penal Code § 26806(b) (recording 13 system may not be used the licensee at all, and can only be accessed by the licensee 14 for three express purposes, all for the benefits of either the government or third-15 parties, not the licensee). In essence, Plaintiffs are forced to install in and on their 16 private property, house equipment for in their buildings and dwellings, and pay for 17 a permanent physical recording system that they are not allowed to use for their 18 own purposes so that they can be surveilled by the government. See Cedar Point 19 Nursery v. Hassid, 141 S. Ct. 2063, 2071 (2021) (“[w]henver a regulation results 20 in a physical appropriation of property, a per se taking has occurred” and just 21 compensation must be paid.); see also id. at 2073 (“a permanent physical 22 occupation constitutes a per se taking regardless whether it results in only a trivial 23 economic loss” and “without regard to whether the action achieves an important 24 public benefit or has only minimal economic impact on the owner.”).

25 And while mandates are nothing new in regulated industries, the law here 26 goes further than mere commercial regulations. It’s the government 27 commandeering business owners—including those who conduct business out of a 28 home—to implement a perpetual government surveillance scheme without any form of compensation. This is akin to the situation in Boise Cascade Corp. v.

1 United States, except that there no surveillance of private conversations was 2 involved. 296 F.3d 1339, 1355 (Fed. Cir. 2002) (permanent physical taking when 3 the government “sunk concrete wells on . . . property to monitor groundwater 4 pollution from a nearby superfund site,” and thereafter government “workers . . .
5 entered to . . . maintain[] and monitor them. . . . The permanency of the wells and 6 the quasi-permanent right of entry provided to the government workers who 7 monitored and maintained them led us to apply the per se takings theory of 8 Loretto.”). Actually, it’s worse than Boise Cascade Corp.; the government here is 9 essentially forcing Plaintiffs to pay for and build the wells on their property and 10 instructing Plaintiffs to never access them except to ensure they are functioning 11 appropriately or to give the government access to them.

12 The State also argues that operators of highly regulated industries have a 13 diminished expectation of compensation under the Fifth Amendment (Mot. at 19:7-14 10), but that is not the same as no expectation of compensation when the 15 government forces them to adopt a costly surveillance system for its own benefit.
16 The case it cites, California Housing Securities, Inc. v. U.S., is easily 17 distinguishable. There, the owner of a savings and loan association sought 18 compensation for claimed Fifth Amendment takings that allegedly resulted from the 19 appointment and subsequent actions of the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) as 20 conservator and receiver of the association. But as the court explained, “[The 21 association] voluntarily subjected itself to an expansive statutory regulatory system 22 when it obtained federal deposit insurance.” California Hous. Sec., Inc. v. U.S., 959
23 F.2d 955, 958 (Fed. Cir. 1992). It was thus receiving the benefit of being FDIC 24 insured, and that came with consequences. And because California required all 25 state-chartered savings and loans associations to be federally insured, the association 26 knew of that obligation when it went into business. Id.

27 Here, by contrast, Plaintiffs have operated their businesses for years, and this 28 is a costly new requirement that was never in place when they got into business, nor

1 does it provide any benefit to them the way FDIC insurance did to the association 2 in California Housing Securities. Plaintiffs are obligated to install and operate a 3 costly and intrusive video and audiotape recording system that they will never get 4 any benefit from. At least those required to purchase insurance could expect to have 5 their losses covered when a bank failure occurred; Plaintiffs here cannot do 6 anything with their required monitoring system. They cannot use it to monitor 7 employee theft or store losses. It is a tree the government mandates they plant and 8 then water and fertilize in perpetuity waiting for only a DOJ agent, a law 9 enforcement officer, or the issuer of a subpoena permission to pluck the fruit it 10 bears.

11 And, while doing so, they suffer the further insult of potentially losing sales 12 to would-be customers who may not feel comfortable being recorded as a condition 13 of browsing both licensed and non-licensed wares. And, as noted with home 14 licensees, the lack of any benefit at all to the mandated 24-hour monitoring comes 15 with substantial if not unconstitutionally oppressive burdens: certain areas of the 16 home and curtilage become “no-go zones” if Plaintiffs and licensees want to 17 maintain any semblance of associational or other intimate privacy. See Discussion, 18 Parts III & IV, supra.

19 Defendants further argue for dismissal on the basis that Plaintiffs have 20 purportedly failed to allege that Section 26806 will impose a significant or 21 prohibitive enough expense on them. Mot. at 20:27-21:5. But the significance of the 22 cost is a quintessential question of fact not ripe for weighing much less deciding as 23 a basis for dismissal at the pleading stage. Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged that 24 they are facing not only a financial burden from the requirement, but a significant 25 one, with some alleging they would have to cease their business because of it. See 26 Compl. ¶¶ 24, 26, 261, 268; see also id. at ¶¶ 374-97 (demonstrating that the total 27 cost of implementation to a gun store would be around $17,000).

28 These allegations of the costs of SB 1384 causing retailers to exit the market

1 are neither theoretical nor implausible, but they are demonstrably prohibitive even 2 this early into SB 1384’s implementation. Big 5 Sporting Goods, one of 3 California’s largest retail firearms licensees prior to 2024, ceased sales of rifles and 4 shotguns at all of its California locations in 2024 in lieu of incurring the cost of 5 compliance with SB 1384. See Big 5 Sporting Goods Corp., Annual Report (Form 6 10-K) (Feb. 28, 2024) at 17,
7 [https://www.sec.gov/ix?doc=/Archives/edgar/data/1156388/000095017024021829/
8 bgfv-20231231.htm](https://www.sec.gov/ix?doc=/Archives/edgar/data/1156388/000095017024021829/bgv-20231231.htm) (last visited June 5, 2024) (“Regulations which took effect
9 January 1, 2024 contributed to the discontinuation of firearm sales in our California 10 markets.”). For Defendant Newsom, using intrusive and expensive regulations to 11 make one of California’s largest firearms dealers exit the market is another win for 12 his and his allies’ admitted efforts to eradicate “gun culture” in California. Driving 13 retailers out of the market is a laudable feature of SB 1384 for those elected 14 officials who, like Defendant Newsom, see the Second Amendment as a bug to be 15 eradicated rather than as part of the bundle of rights these officials swore to uphold.

16 Regardless of the unassailable fact of dealers already exiting the market due 17 to the costs of compliance with SB 1384, Plaintiffs’ plausible allegations of 18 incurring significant cost are all that is required at the pleading stage. But even if 19 the allegations of cost are somehow insufficient, at minimum, this Court should at 20 least grant leave to amend so that the Plaintiffs can discuss how much they have 21 had to spend (or would have had to spend, had they not gone out of business) now 22 that the law has gone into effect.

23 VIII. CONCLUSION

24 For the foregoing reasons, Defendants’ motion to dismiss should be denied 25 except as to (1) dismissal of Defendant Gavin Newsom as to all claims, (2) 26 Plaintiffs’ Second Claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for a Violation of Plaintiffs’ Equal 27 Protection rights, and (3) Plaintiffs’ Third Claim under Section 1983 for a Violation 28 of Plaintiffs’ Second Amendment rights, which claims Plaintiffs agree should be

1 dismissed at this time in light of Doe v. Bonta. To the extent any of the other claims 2 are dismissed, Plaintiffs should be given an opportunity to amend such claim.
