Discovery has not commenced. The parties can propose a discovery schedule once the relevant physical evidence becomes available for inspection.

- c. ☒ The following discovery issues, including issues regarding the discovery of electronically stored information, are anticipated (specify):

This case management conference has been continued several times to ensure that it follows the criminal prosecution, in which formal sentencing recently concluded. The parties are now in communication with the Sacramento City Attorneys' office regarding how and when the relevant physical evidence may be made available for the parties' inspection, and the extent of any limitations that would be imposed by the City due to the potential for appeals in the criminal matter. The City Attorneys' office has also advised the parties that, due to the nature of the evidence, a court order is likely needed for law enforcement to comply with any subpoena for a physical inspection. The parties propose that the August 29 conference remain on calendar so that these issues can be addressed with the Court.

CASE MANAGEMENT STATEMENT FORM: ATTACHMENT 4(b)

The parties jointly submit this Attachment 4(b) to the Case Management Statement, as follows:

Plaintiffs' Statement

Plaintiffs' daughter, a Sacramento police officer, was killed in the line of duty by one or more ghost gun products. Plaintiffs seek damages for her pain and suffering, loss of property, medical expenses, funeral expenses, and future contributions. Plaintiffs further seek punitive damages and equitable relief, including implementation of responsible business practices and abatement of public nuisance relating to Defendants' ghost gun products. Market share liability allows a plaintiff to establish a prima facie case against a group of defendants for an injury caused by a harmful product when it cannot be determined from which defendant the product originated. Liability is apportioned according to each defendant's respective market share of sales of that product when the harm occurred. It is appropriately applied here, to the extent that the very nature of Defendants' ghost gun products renders them untraceable, and Defendants together comprise a substantial share of the ghost gun market.

Defendants' Statement

Plaintiffs allege that the shooting incident at issue was perpetrated using one or more semi-automatic rifles assembled using a variety of readily available component parts, including an unfinished lower receiver – or “receiver blank” – which was machined further to become an operable lower receiver incorporated into a functioning firearm. Plaintiffs seek to hold numerous manufacturers, distributors and retailers of unfinished lower receivers – which were legal to manufacture and sell – liable for the criminal misuse of their products by a third party. Plaintiffs, however, concede that they do not know which, if any, of the defendants named in this action manufactured the parts used by the shooter to assemble the firearms. Plaintiffs are pursuing a market share liability theory for this reason. Market share liability, however, is an alternative theory of liability applicable in a very narrow subset of product liability cases where a group of manufacturers produce from an identical formula a defective product that poses a singular, inherent risk of harm. It does not – and cannot – apply in this case.
